LA FOLLETTE BUBS REGULAR G.O.P. SENATORS

Goes to Badger Meet Instead of Caucus.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—No indication of a return to Republican fold by the Wisconsin delegation was apparent today at the organization conferences in the senate and house preliminary to the opening of the Sixty-ninth congress on Monday.

La Follette [Rep., Wis.], who had been invited to attend today's conference of senate Republicans, failed to put in an appearance. Instead he addressed in a meeting of the Wisconsin members of the house, at which La Follette group agreed to present a united front. It was made known that the Wisconsin delegation will announce its position in a statement today.

The Republican committee on committees of the house filled vacancies caused by the death, accounts, mileage, and other minor committees. In selecting members of the powerful rules committee, which controls the order of business in the house, the Republicans selected Representative Nelson [Rep., Wis.], manager of the La Follette presidential campign in 1924.

Assignments Deferred.

The committee on committees deferred until Monday consideration of the bulk of the committee assignments. Word was sent to La Follette men who have to make present assignments on relatively unimportant committees that no action would be taken on their merits. This was interpreted as meaning that those Wisconsin Republicans who vote for Representative Longworth [Rep., Ohio] for speaker on Monday and who also agree that they support the proposal to modify the committee discharge rule will not be disturbed.

The senate Republican members made no attempt to consider the policy to be pursued in the case of either Senator La Follette or Senator Nye [Rep., N. D.].

Also involved in the conference was the appointments there of Senator Norris [Rep., Nebraska]. It was the first conference he had attended a G. O. P. caucus.

Another Conference Tuesday.

Another conference of Republican senators will take place next Tuesday, at which time the matter of committee assignments for Senators La Follette and Nye and the legal status of the latter are expected to come up.

The only action of the senate Republicans today was the slating of Judge W. R. Thayer of Indiana for secretary of the senate to succeed the late George A. Sanderson.

The Republican committee on committees of the house adopted a rule that no member of a standing committee could be a member of the committee that shall any member of the committee serve both on the rules committee and on any of the three major legislative committees—ways and means, appropriations, and interstate and foreign commerce.

Two Rules Committee Members.

Changes placed on the rules committee for the first time were Representatives White [Rep., Me.], Wilson [Rep., Ill.], Purnell [Rep., Ind.], Moore [Rep., Pa.], and Williamson [Rep., S. D.]. Old members of the committee who will retain their places are Representatives Snell [Rep., N. Y.], Tilson, and Burton [Rep., O.].

Changes placed on the accounts committee for the first time to fill vacancies were Representatives Golder [Rep., Pa.], and Wolverton [Rep., N. J.]. Representative Bachmann [Rep., W. Va.] was placed on the committee on enrolled bills to fill a vacancy.

Representatives Newton [Rep., Minn.], and Treadway [Rep., Mass.] were named to fill vacancies on the ways and means steering committee, left vacant by Representative Green [Rep., Conn.], the majority leader.

KIP WOULD HIDE; WIFE WILL KEEP AFFAIR IN COURT

Alice Victorious, to Ask Separation.

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Leonard Kip Rhinelander seeks to permit the public to forget the case which for four weeks has dragged one of the proudest of New York's old family names through the mire of a scandalous court case, but Alice Beatrice Jones Rhinelander may prevent his plans.

Kip has prepared to disappear into seclusion, where not even the sound of his family name will reach his ears to remind him of the terrible price he paid in an unsuccessful effort to take from his wife the right to bear that name.

It may be only for a year, it may be for a decade, it may even be for life, but within a few days he hopes to drop the name of Leonard Kip Rhinelander and drop out of sight under an assumed name.

Wife Plans Separation Suit.

Against this hope is the announced proposal of the daughter of the New Rochelle Negro cab driver, whom Rhinelander married. The jury in the Supreme court at White Plains today gave her a complete victory in Rhinelander's suit to annul their marriage. Now she plans to file suit for separation.

The jury held that Mrs. Rhinelander did not bring about her marriage with Kip by fraud, and brought in a finding, which was in effect a refusal to annul the marriage.

Soon after the verdict was announced Lee Parsons Davis, attorney for Mrs. Rhinelander, announced that a summons and complaint in the suit for separation had been prepared and would be served as soon as possible. Davis attempted to serve the papers on Leon R. Jacobs, Rhinelander's attorney of record, immediately after the decision and arguments in court, but Jacobs refused to accept service until he could consult with former Judge Isaac N. Mills, senior trial counsel for Rhinelander.

Will Ask for Alimony.

The papers will contain a request for alimony and counsel fees, and it is expected that Mrs. Rhinelander's alimony of $300 a month will be increased.

Although she was a little uncertain as to whether she still loves Kip, Mrs. Rhinelander declared tonight she would never again live with him.

"Will you return to your husband," she was asked. Her answer was a definite "No."

In reply to a question whether she still loved the man who tried to annul their marriage she pondered for a minute and then replied, "O, I do and I do not."

It was a beautiful love affair, however, she told newspaper men. "I am happy over the verdict," she added, "but I can't be happy over what has happened during the trial."

Mrs. Rhinelander will go to Florida for a rest after the strenuous weeks of the trial, she declared.

Hard Blow for Rhinelanders.

The decision was a terrific blow to Rhinelander and those associated with him, for the jury declared against him on every question presented. They decided that Rhinelander had not been deceived by his wife as to her color; that he would have married her even if he had known that she was a Negress.

They declared that the fervid love for Alice Jones, which characterized all of Rhinelander's letters, would have been declared even if he had known that she was not white; and that, whatever his doubts were before his marriage, his affection was greater than the bar of race.

The room was well filled when Justice Morschauser took the bench. The justice warned that there must be no demonstration when the verdict was announced.

Jury Has Answers Ready.

Then he asked Clarence E. Pietsch of Greenburgh, the jury foreman, if the seven questions had been answered and Pietsch said that they had. These were the questions and the answers to them:

At the time of the marriage of the parties, was the defendant colored and of colored blood? Yes.

Did the defendant before the marriage by silence conceal from the plaintiff the fact that she was of colored blood? No.

Did the defendant before the marriage represent to the plaintiff that she was not of colored blood? No.

Did the defendant practice said concealment or make said representation with the intent thereby to induce the plaintiff to marry her? No.

Was the plaintiff by said conceal-

POLICE RAID 8 DRINK PARLORS; 75 ARRESTS MADE

Sixteen police squads, under the direction of Chief of Detectives Schoemaker and Capt. John Stege, raided eight soft drink parlors last night, seized quantities of moonshine, beer and weapons and arrested seventy-five persons.

All the raids were concentrated in the New City and Stockyards police districts, the announced intention being to stop the open sale of intoxicants and to capture the bandits who shot and killed Policemen Carroll and Henry and a chauffeur, Marshall Custer, a week ago in a saloon at 5253 South Halsted street.

The best haul came in the place of Joey Brooks, 5152 South Halsted street. Fifteen men and three women were arrested after a squad had crashed the doors.

Other places raided were Ted Sullivan's at 300 West 47th street; McCormick & Quinlan's, 775 West 54th street, where pistols and blackjacks, in addition to liquor, were seized; Pete McKeone's, 4363 South Halsted street; Dike Conners', 4337 South Halsted street; Eddie Boyle's, 249 Root street, where 200 quarts of moonshine were taken; George Walker's at 3000 South Union avenue, and James Moore's, 1508 West 47th street.

Nearly 100 warrants had been obtained from Judge Lyle. The prisoners were taken to the detective bureau.

No Deaths in 22 Hours Break Coroner's Record

A blinding snowstorm, accompanied by rapidly falling temperatures, blew into Chicago yesterday on a 22-mile an hour wind. At midnight the mercury had fallen to an unofficial 19 degrees above zero, with a probability that a mark of 15 degrees would be reached today.

The prediction for today is for continued cold and cloudy weather, with strong northwest winds. On Monday there will probably be a rise of several degrees in temperature. Storm warnings were ordered displayed on all the lakes.

Heavy Snow in West.

Although the snowfall in Chicago registered less than an inch, western and northwestern states reported heavy falls that in many cases interrupted traffic. Several deaths were attributed to exposure or to accidents directly due to the storm.

Minnesota was covered by four to six inches of snow. Highways were completely blocked, train service was delayed and bus lines were temporarily forced out of business. A thermometer reading of 5 degrees below zero was reported at Hibbing.

In eastern Iowa similar conditions prevailed. The government air mail was halted at Iowa City. In the same town an aged man was found frozen to death in a snowdrift.

Wires Broken by Snow.

The heavy snow broke telegraph and telephone wires and automobile traffic was almost at a standstill. Temperatures of 12 degrees above were recorded at Sioux City and Charles City.

A motor stage coach was stalled with six passengers in drifts sixty miles from Denver, Colo. The passengers were rescued. Roads in Kansas and Missouri were blocked and temperatures below freezing were noted throughout the day.

E. J. Donath of Milwaukee and his 4 months old child were killed at Beloit, Wis., when the snow blinded Donath and he was unable to see an approaching train.

AUSTRIAN TOWN IN ALPS RAIDED BY FASCIST BAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Dec. 5.—The local government of Innesbruck on the Alpine frontier has appealed to the Austrian government for armed protection against Fascist raids from Italian Tyrol.

The demand follows a serious incident at a little village named Hall, where twenty Fascists attempted to carry out a raid and forcibly release a man who had been arrested as a Fascist spy. Arrayed in black shirts, the Fascists rode into Hall in a motor truck, and tried to break into the jail, but were forced to retreat in a severely battered condition after a pitched battle, when citizens rallied to assist the police.

DENIES RECOVERY OF CHILD HELD FOR BOARD BILL

A question of permanency in the matter of husbands and boarding houses yesterday was held sufficient by Judge Hosea Wells to defeat temporarily the petition of Mrs. William J. Turrill for a writ of habeas corpus to get possession of her three year old daughter.

The child is held by Mr. and Mrs. George Carlson, 3449 Seminary avenue, in lieu of a board bill of $198, Mrs. Turrill said.

On the witness stand Mrs. Turrill said that she had lived in more than forty boarding houses in the last twelve years. She was married in 1913 to Jake Goldstein, and divorced him in 1923. Then she married Louis Gross, father of her child, who committed suicide Aug. 24, 1925.

Patrolman Carlson, a Lincoln park policeman, stated that he would willingly adopt the child, as he did not think Mrs. Turrill a fit person to have her custody.

Judge Wells denied the petition of Mrs. Turrill, at least until she shows evidence of being more permanently settled.

CHURCHMAN IN JAIL CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

Ora Cadwallader, deacon of the First Christian church, Hammond, is in the county jail at Crown Point charged with contributing to the delinquency of minors.

In addition to being deacon of the church Cadwallader is the teacher of a girls' Sunday school class, and it was as a result of his actions with three of his pupils that he was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Lucille Meyers, juvenile officer.

The warrant charged Cadwallader with attacking the three children in his automobile after church last Sunday night.

Cadwallader is 44 years old and married. He has been dismissed from the church board.

Hint Bribe of $5,000,000 to Get Liquor In Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—With the uncovering of the "New York liquor conspiracy," in which several members of the coast guard were arrested, charged with taking bribes, it developed today that the "rum rings" have been offering money with a lavish hand in an effort to land Christmas liquor in New York.

It was stated at the treasury that scores of bribes have been received recently and that in one case a high official was told that more than $5,000,000 awaited the man who would arrange that the coast guard be called off for a single night.

Officers Offered $100,000.

Offers ranging up to close to $100,000 have been made to commanders of coast guard boats in an attempt to pierce the armor of the dry navy, navy officials said.

It was pointed out that while the sum seems extraordinarily large, at Christmas prices a profit of $3,000,000 could be made on a big liquor cargo and by unloading five vessels a margin of $10,000,000 could be netted from the New York concession.

The nature of the tip on the large sum was not revealed, but officials indicated it was under investigation.

In a statement issued this morning, the treasury department exonerated the coast guard of reports which charged the entire service with corruption in prohibition matters.

Arrest Dry Agent.

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The roundup of the alleged rum syndicate, said to have been headed by William V. Dwyer, developed a surprise today in the arrest of Daniel J. Keleher of Freeport, L. I., a special prohibition investigator for the government. Keleher is the first federal enforcement agent to become involved in what the authorities consider the biggest liquor conspiracy since the passage of the Volstead act.

United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner declared that evidence in his possession established that Keleher was active in the alleged rum conspiracy both during the summer following his resignation from the department of justice and since he had been appointed a federal prohibition investigator.

Held in $15,000 Bail.

Assistant United States Attorney William E. Stevenson swore out the complaint against Keleher today and he was later arrested and held in $15,000 bail by United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter.

Keleher takes his place by the side of six members of the coast guard, including two boatswains, as government employés charged not only with violations of the prohibition law but also with violation of the trust imposed in them.

LITTLE ENTENTE SIGNS PACT FOR REAL ALLIANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Roumania, Dec. 5.—The agreement signed by Jugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slavia, Roumania and Poland yesterday provides a real military alliance of these countries. Previously the little entente never had succeeded in finding a basis for a full military alliance. The treaties of Locarno changed matters, enabling Czecho-Slovakia to negotiate freely with Poland and other countries. Now they are solemnly pledged to full military coöperation in case of war affecting any of the members.

LIGHTED SPIRE OF M. E. TEMPLE SEEN FOR MILES

Thousands of persons in the loop stopped to comment last night on the beauty of the tall, slim, tapering spire of the Chicago Temple building as it was completely illuminated.

Despite the inclement weather, the illuminated spire, surmounted by a cross, was visible for several miles. The building is the property of the First Methodist church, in which it has a church auditorium seating 1,200. Hitherto only the small cross has been illuminated.

Northwestern U. Records Endangered by Blaze

Destruction of Northwestern university's records was threatened last night by a fire which broke out in the basement of University hall.

The flames were extinguished after a half hour's fight by the firemen. Damage, except for smoke, was confined to the basement, which was used as a storage place for waste paper.

U. S. Steamer Hits British Ship; Five Lose Lives

LONDON, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The British steamer Ashton sank today after a collision with the United States shipping board steamer Federal in the Scheldt river. The Ashton went down within a few minutes. The captain, pilot and three members of the crew lost their lives.

PRESIDENT HERE TOMORROW TO VISIT FARMERS

Goes Back to Capital After Six Hours.

President Coolidge will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning to meet and dine with delegates to the annual bureau of the Farm Bureau federation. Mrs. Coolidge is coming with her husband. She will be the guest of the wives of the representatives of the farmers.

The plan of the presidential party is to remain here only about six hours. Soon after the dinner—which is to be served shortly after noon at the Hotel Sherman—is ended the President and Mrs. Coolidge will start back to Washington.

They will be in the capital again Tuesday morning when the President will receive committees from congress which convenes tomorrow. At noon on Tuesday the President will transmit his annual message to the house and senate in joint session.

Speech to the Farmers.

While here the President will speak to the farm delegates. That speech is scheduled for 11 a. m.

The draft of the address was finished by the chief executive yesterday in Washington. The delegates expect to be interested in that; on the other hand they expect the President to be interested in the dinner.

Practically every item on the menu to be served at the noon meal for Mr. Coolidge tomorrow will be furnished by coöperative farmers' organizations. Supplies are being sent from various parts of the country to the kitchens of the Sherman, and the dinner will be one of the old fashioned, mid-day variety. The plan—there's no secret about it—is to make President Coolidge like his meal so well that he will approve desired farm legislation; in other words, to reach the presidential heart through the presidential appetite.

The President's party is expected to leave for the capital at 3 p. m. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, Everett Sanders, his secretary, military and naval aids, and secret service men.

Drive Through the Loop.

Elaborate police preparations for the visit have been made. When the train, running as a special section of the Baltimore and Ohio, arrives at Grand Central station 100 policemen under Capt. Charles Larkin of the South Clark street station will be on guard. The time will be between 8:30 and 9 a. m.

The route to the hotel will be as follows: North on Wells street to Jackson boulevard, east to La Salle street, north to Randolph street, and east to the hotel entrance. Capt. Patrick Hogan of the traffic division will guard the line of march with a large detail of picked men, and Capt. Patrick Kelliher of the central district will be in charge of those stationed at the hotel.

Because of the limited time at his disposal, the President has declined an invitation to inspect the sanitary district properties while here.

Five Thousand May Hear Speech.

After his arrival at the hotel the President will rest in the presidential bungalow newly constructed on the roof until time for his speech. Special amplifying devices have been installed in the ballroom of the Sherman and the adjacent balconies and it is expected that 5,000 persons will hear the address. The speech also will be broadcast by radio.

Every effort has been made to confine the menu at the dinner to coöperatively produced viands. Eggs and poultry will come from the organizations in Utah and on the Atlantic coast. There will be ham from the National Live Stock Producers' association, milk from coöperatives in Illinois counties, maple syrup from producers in Vermont, the President's home state; cheese from Wisconsin associations, fruit and nuts from California and Florida farmers banded together in marketing organizations. Even the cigars will come from the Kentucky tobacco pool.

SENDS MESSAGE TUESDAY

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—With a program before it of legislation of unusual importance, the sixty-ninth congress will begin its first session on Monday. The President will be in Chicago that day, but will return to Washington in time to transmit his annual message to the houses of congress Tuesday noon. He will not read it in person.

The senate was organized and newly elected members sworn in at the special session of that body last March. The members of the house will assemble for the first time on Monday and will organize with the election of Representative Nicholas Longworth [Rep., Ohio] as speaker. Representative Tilson [Rep., Conn.] will succeed Mr. Longworth as majority leader.

In both houses the Republicans will have an effective working majority and will be in a position to put through any program of legislation they may agree upon.

Among the legislative subjects with which congress and the Coolidge administration will deal at this session are the following:

Taxes—The bill for further reduction of income and other federal taxes, embodying Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's original plan for the radical reduction of surtaxes, has been framed by the house ways and means committee with the approval not only of the Republican but of nearly all the Democratic members. It will be reported to the house virtually as a nonpartisan measure. The prospect is it will be passed by the house before Christmas.

World court—The principal controversial matter before the senate will be President Coolidge's proposal that the United States join the world court. Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho], chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, will lead a fight to attach an important condition to our adherence to the court, that condition being complete divorce of the tribunal from the league of nations.

$3,000,000,000 to Run U. S.

Appropriations—About $3,000,000,000 will be appropriated for the expenses of the federal government for the fiscal year of 1927. The end of radical economizing has been reached. The cost of the government cannot be reduced below $3,000,000,000 a year, in the opinion of most authorities, until a large proportion of the public debt shall have been paid and the interest charge thereby materially reduced.

Agriculture—One of the foremost instances before this congress will be that of government aid to farmers. On the one hand will be powerful farm organizations and important agricultural interests in the middle west demanding legislation for the artificial regulation of prices on farm products similar to the scheme represented by the McNary-Haugen bill in the last congress. On the other side will be the Coolidge administration, stubbornly resisting this proposal as a camouflaged price fixing scheme and wholly unsound in economics. The administration will back legislation for government aid in the development of cooperative marketing.

Railroads—With the administration strongly committed to the plan of consolidation of the railroads into a few great systems unusual interest will attach to proposed amendments congress will be urged to make in the law so as to hasten the attainment of this object.

Dawes to Fight Rules.

Cloture—Vice President Dawes intends to wage an aggressive fight for a rule under which a simple majority, instead of two-thirds as at present, can invoke cloture in the senate.

Waterways—The administration is now committed to the development of inland waterways on a vast scale for the purpose of expanding cheap transportation facilities. The middle west is preparing to ask approval of the lakes to the gulf project at this session.

Merchant marine—President Coolidge desires a radical reorganization of the shipping board and Emergency Fleet corporation and the administration will endeavor to procure favorable action on the plan at this session.

Foreign debts—The war debt settlements with Italy, Belgium, and minor European countries will come before congress for approval. No formidable opposition has developed so far to acceptance of the terms by congress.

National defense—About $700,000,000 will be appropriated for the army and navy. The chief feature of interest in the debate on the army and navy supply bills will be the provision for the air defense The agitation stirred up by Col. Mitchell is expected to result in a more adequate povision for the development of military and naval aviation.

Department Reorganizations.

Government reorganization—In the interest of economy and efficiency the administration will ask for passage of the proposed legislation to reorganize the government departments so as to eliminate duplication and wasteful administration processes.

Radio—Congress will be called on to pass a law for the regulation of the use of radio undes which broadcasting will be limited and controlled.

This session of congress will precede the election of the seventieth congress in November, 1926. It, therefore, will be a session filled with politics and resounding with the outgivings of the politicians. By both parties legislation will be advocated and opposed with an eye on the political effect accruing therefrom. The Democrats are convinced that they have a promising opportunity of gaining control of the senate, if not of the house, and already are on the alert to formulate a popular opposition program and to capitalize the mistakes of the Republicans.

KIPLING'S DAY IS GOOD; RECOVERY PROSPECTS GROW

BURWASH, Sussex, Eng., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Rudyard Kipling's improvement was maintained today and the prospects of his recovery are more hopeful. Lord Dawson, the king's physician who is attending the noted author, made this statement prior to his return to London tonight. The fact that Kipling is suffering from broncho-pneumonia and not the ordinary lobar pneumonia gives additional hopes for his ultimate recovery.

Recalls Kipling's Earlier Illness.

LIVERPOOL, England, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Rudyard Kipling's present illness recalls memories of the writer's attack of pneumonia in New York City in 1899, when, after news that the danger point had been passed, the following verse, signed "Tommy Atkins," appeared in the Liverpool Daily Post:

We 'eard as you was fightin' 'ard,
Just as we knew you would.
But we 'ardly 'oped you'd turn 'is flank;
They said you 'ardly could.
But the news 'as come this morning,
And I'm writin' 'ere to say:
There's no British son more 'appy
Than your old friend, Thomas A.

GIRL HICCOUGHS 2 WEEKS; LIVES.

Greeley, Colo., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Gladys Greene, 16, is recovering from a severe attack of hiccoughing that lasted two weeks, although doctors usually set ten days as the limit of a continued hiccoughing spell which permits recovery. During the two weeks the girl neither ate nor slept.

SOCIETY COUPLE RACES ACROSS 2 STATES TO WED

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—After a wild ride through two states, frantically seeking a license and an official who could marry them, Miss Claire Cornell, daughter of Mrs. Claire J. Cornell of 927 Fifth avenue, and Robert Ten Eyck Stevenson of 171 Fifth avenue and Chicago, were married between midnight and daybreak today.

The engagement of the couple was announced a week ago. Stevenson and Miss Cornell, accompanied by two young men, left here just before midnight and drove to Greenwich, Conn., where Stevenson walked into Greenwich police headquarters and asked where a marriage license could be obtained immediately. The astonished sergeant explained that the five day law would prevent them getting married at once. They hurried to Portchester, N. Y., aroused the assistant town clerk, and he issued them a license. Miss Cornell gave her age as 24, and Stevenson as 21.

Barber Admits Crimes; Never Suspected by Cops

Felix Nocny, a former Chicago barber, arrested in Detroit yesterday, confessed several crimes with which local police had never connected him.

In 1922, Nocny admitted, he and Bruno Bolinski escaped with jewels valued at $30,000 in a robbery; he said he was a bootlegger and was wanted for manslaughter in connection with the death of a cousin, Bruno Nocny.

FERGUSONS BEAT FOES; GOVERNOR WON'T BE OUSTED

Neither Ma Nor Pa to Seek Office Next Year.

Austin, Tex., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Developments today indicate that "Farmer Jim" Ferguson, with his tenant-farmer backing had licked the "rich city folk" of Austin, Fort Worth, Dallas and Houston to the extent of saving his wife, "Ma" Ferguson, from impeachment and removal from office as governor.

At the same time it was indicated that Ferguson had given assurance he would keep his hands off highway contracts during the next fourteen months of Mrs. Ferguson's term, and that neither Jim nor Ma would run in the next gubernatorial campaign.

Withdrawal of Representative Ernest C. Cox's signature from the petitions asking for a special session was seen as meaning the "death" of the extra session.

Cox gave Gov. Ferguson authority to remove his name from the petition in her hands. He also asked Speaker Lee Satterwhite to remove his name from the petition circulated by Representative T. K. Irwin.

Against Public Policy.

Attorney General Dan Moody, who has been leading the investigation of the Ferguson administration, issued a formal opinion tonight, holding that it would be against public policy for private interests to underwrite the expenses of a special session of the house of representatives for impeachment purposes, and that there was no authority for the issuance of warrants against the contingency fund of the last legislature to cover the expenses.

This is expected to kill the special session, as individual legislators from the rural districts are not likely to pay their own expenses and the expenses of a legislative investigation during several weeks in Austin. Texas millionaires had previously announced their intention to raise a $300,000 underwriting fund.

Not Expected to Run Again.

Shortly before Attorney General Moody made public his opinion, Arthur B. Edison, chairman of the Democratic state executive committee, announced after a conference with the Fergusons that he did not think either of them would run for governor next year.

Attorney General Moody is expected to run for governor of Texas next year. He is known to prefer the governorship to the nomination for United States senator.

"Pa" Ferguson has made no pledge to keep out of the race for United States senator in 1928, as far as is known.

CHICAGO IS GIVEN NEW MEMBER ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Assignment of Representative Stanley Kunz [Dem., Ill.] to membership on the rivers and harbors committee by house Democrats in caucus today gives Chicago and Illinois another spokesman in that committee's dealings with deep waterway and lake level legislation.

Representative M. A. Michaelson [Rep., Ill.], also from Chicago, will remain on the committee, as will Representative W. E. Hull of Peoria, who will sponsor a new waterway bill in this session.

The Democrats reelected Representative Garrett [Dem., Tenn.] as floor leader after going through the formality of nominating him for the speakership, and also reelected Representative Oldfield [Dem., Ark.] as the party whip in the house.

The caucus, in addition to confirming Sabath [Dem., Ill.] in his membership on the immigration and claims committees, gave him a new place on the insular affairs committee. Representative Doyle [Dem., Ill.], also a Chicagoan, was reassigned to the committee on agriculture.

City Asks Closer Taxing of Estates, Flat Buildings

Assessment of estates at 80 per cent of the value sworn to by executors and administrators was asked of the board of review by Corporation Counsel Francis J. Busch yesterday. During the last two years the city has succeeded in obtaining higher assessments on estates by submitting a list of 300 each of which was valued at more than $50,000. He also asked that apartment buildings be taxed as soon as the water is turned on as that shows when tenants are in. Some escaped for two years, he said.

Agree on New Wage Scale for Illinois Traction Lines

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Trainmen and officials of the Illinois Traction system agreed today on a new wage scale, effective as of Dec. 1. The new scale, an increase of five cents an hour, ranges from 55 cents to 70 cents an hour for motormen, conductors and brakemen. New working conditions were also approved.

FREE TO FORD OWNERS.

Jim May, fighting lieutenant of the A. E. F., now Captain May, has perfected an amazing invention for Fords, called the Wesco Gas Saver and Carbon Remover. Under actual tests the Wesco has enabled Ford owners to get as high as 60 miles on a single gallon of gasoline. To quickly introduce it, Captain May is offering a Wesco free to one person in each locality who will show and recommend it to their friends. Just send name and address to Captain J. A. May, 200 West Ninth Street, Sioux Falls, S. D. Also ask him to tell you how local and state distributors can make $500 to $1,500 a month supplying the enormous demand for Wescos.—Adv.

SABATH WILL ASK LOWER BARS FOR U. S. IMMIGRANTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Amendments, which their sponsors, including Representative A. J. Sabath [Dem., Ill.], assert are designed to humanize the immigration laws by eliminating injustices in certain restrictive features are to be introduced in congress soon.

One, to be offered by Sabath, would lift the bars against the admission of families of declarants whose original application for citizenship had been denied on technical grounds, and who, as a result, may not file new applications for three years.

Another would admit, irrespective of quota restrictions, aliens who, after service in the American forces abroad during the world war, remained in Europe and now seek to return to this country. Another Sabath amendment would repeal the so-called Cable act, which compels foreign born wives of American citizens to be naturalized.

Window Glass Workers Seek Increase in Wages

Cleveland, O., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Requests for an 8 per cent increase in wages of all window glass workers in plants east of the Mississippi river, to be effective Dec. 27, were sent out to window glass manufacturers today. An additional 5 per cent increase for workmen in western plants is included in the new scale.

OLD FASHIONED DOLLS ON SHELF THIS CHRISTMAS

Sophistication Is 1925 Watchword.

That amiable old gentleman who knocks his pipe out on the radiator, who lives above you and lives above me, started out yesterday to do his Christmas shopping early.

He found thousands of others had started out with the same optimistic idea. So he wasn't so forlorn as he might have been several years ago in the lingerie section of a Chicago department store a good nineteen days before Christmas.

But he did have a terrible time getting acquainted with the somewhat sophisticated Santa Claus which this year's cosmopolitan and rather de luxe Yuletide season has brought into fashion.

For instance, this old gentleman wanted a doll for his granddaughter. A sweet pink and white creature, with rosebud mouth and silken curls and a perfect, harmless smile, as he remembered Julia. He searched through the toy sections of a half dozen stores, but he couldn't find his little lady.

Beautiful—but Dumb.

Then a kindly floor walker informed him that a doll can no longer be beautiful but dumb if she wants to get anywhere.

No peaches and cream complexion. Just a sophisticated young woman with a doll of wax personality, perhaps even a wax wrinkle or two and an interesting costume, be it a tailored suit, a peasant's apron, or an evening gown. No lace underthings; no pale pink.

Then there was a gift for the nephew away at college. It was only a few years ago that the amiable old gentleman had packed three pairs of cotton socks three for a dollar, but good quality, in a red box and sent them away with love and advice.

But yesterday he found that cotton socks were as out of the Christmas picture as the gorgeous dolly with the enchanting smile.

Collegiate Gifts.

A raccoon coat, a hip flask, an ash tray from France that played a jazz tune as the cigaret burned: there was the great triumvirate of gifts for this year's nephew.

And the fourth favorite—individual packets of matches with bright colored covering and the owner's monogram in gold. Hundreds of people were giving orders for these novelties yesterday.

Job number three came to the old gentleman when he started out to find something for his wife. He soon discovered that the motion pictures have changed this gift giving business as far as mother is concerned.

Movies Change Tastes.

A few years ago nobody ever saw a boudoir pillow or a Russian wolf hound outside of the movies. But yesterday the expensive gift sections and the more democratic aisles of gifts in the basement realms furnished thousands of boudoir pillows. And thousands were being purchased.

It was the same with negligees. And gold and silver boudoir slippers.

All day, as he was jostled about and jostled back, this amiable old gentleman who knocks his pipe out on the radiator learned that the 1925 St. Nick has made democratic the French wall clock, the Deauville purse, the hand tooled leather novelties from Italy, and the old English prints.

French Motor Horns.

As the crowd rushed through the revolving doors in and out of the shops in the loop here's a cross section of the latest shopping news.

French motor horns are squeaking their shrill way into the stocking of many a motorist.

The latest toy for little girls is an electric cook stove that makes real biscuits.

Costume jewelry is the thing. Not precious stones, but fanciful settings for semi-precious gems. This applies especially to reproductions of the mid-Victorial jewelry of heavy gold.

You'd be surprised to know how popular the goldfish is this holiday season. Not the plebian two for a quarter, carry home in a carton, kind. But glorious creatures with six pointed tails and huge, expensive aquariums of colored glass mounted on wrought iron stands and requiring the services of a landscape gardener to keep in order. Dealers report a record sale of these outfits.

And everywhere, just as the amiable old gentleman discovered yesterday, is the spirit of sophistication. When Kris Kringle carols "A Merry Christmas" the 1925 shopper carols back: "So's your old man."

ROUND OF VISITS OCCUPIES FORMER RUSSIAN PRELATE

The strenuous round of activities attending the visit in Chicago of Archbishop John Cieplak, former primate of the Catholic church in Russia, was said yesterday to be telling on the strength of the visitor.

The archbishop had one of his busiest days yesterday. In the morning he visited the mother house of the Polish Sisters of Nazareth at Des Plaines, Ill., where he also inspected the St. Mary's Training School for Boys and the Chicago Industrial School for Girls.

A luncheon was served to the prelate and his party at noon at Mundelein, Ill., and they spent the afternoon visiting the seminary of St. Mary of the Lake there.

Last evening Cardinal Mundelein gave a small dinner at his official residence, 1550 North State parkway, in honor of the archbishop, after which the visitor went to Holy Trinity church at Noble and Division streets, where he gave benediction and spoke to a congregation of 3,000 Poles.

He will pontificate this morning at a solemn high mass at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's of the Angels church, Wood street and Armitage avenue.

DEAFNESS IS NOW CONQUERED.

Science Aids Thousands.

Some folks imagine that deafness is merely a personal annoyance. But it's far more than that. It ruins the disposition. Upsets the nerves. And taxes the health.

Now science has proven it is needless to remain deaf. A remarkable little personal hearing aid has been perfected by a group of New York scientists. Immediately restores good hearing even to the poorest ears. Results are immediate—there is no waiting—no delay—no danger. You hear at once—clearly, distinctly, naturally.

The inventors are so sure you will be elated with this wonderful little discovery that they offer to send it to you without a string of any kind—for ten days' free trial. No red tape—no deposit—no C. O. D.'s of any kind. To take advantage of this liberal trial offer, simply write to the Dictograph Products Corporation, 1220 Lytton Building, Chicago, Ill. In justice to yourself, please do this now.

If you have lost hope through other methods, we are even more anxious to have you try this remarkable little invention. For it will not fail you; and there is nothing for you to lose. Simply send name and address now.—Adv.

WHEN GOLDFISH MEET DRY LAW—PADLOCK OPENS

When the federal authorities got out an injunction against him and padlocked the front door of his drug store at 915 North State street last week for alleged violation of the prohibition act Mr. E. H. Ladish didn't mind leaving behind the medicaments that line his shelves.

But when he got home and recalled that he had left Henry and Violet locked up in the store he was desolate.

Then Mr. Ladish got to thinking it over. What right, he reasoned, had the United States government to let these two innocent creatures starve to death? So he told his trouble to Assistant District Attorney Mary D. Bailey.

Miss Bailey was touched, but puzzled. The prohibition act doesn't provide for release of starving bystanders held captive by a federal padlock. However, she prepared a petition asking that Mr. Ladish be allowed to return to his store, feed his two friends, and take them away. Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe signed it.

Mr. Ladish, with a packet of food, not a large packet, but adequate, rushed to his store yesterday. He tossed a flake of food to Henry. Henry was appreciative. Then he tossed two flakes of food to Violet. Violet was overjoyed.

Late last night the two ex-hungry goldfish were swimming around in their aquarium at the Ladish home, 450 Deming place.

Railroads Signal Full Speed for River Unkinking Project

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The citizens' committee on river straightening, headed by Theodore W. Robinson, has obtained an agreement of seven railroads to contribute an aggregate of $7,019,408 towards the cost of unkinking the stream between Polk and Eighteenth streets. The total estimated cost of the job is $8,627,054. The difference of $1,607,646 must be paid by the city. Every interest involved in the project now has agreed to it, so that work may proceed as soon as the city officials make out the detailed contracts.

These agreements with the railroads permit the city to unbottle the loop to the south by the opening up of Dearborn, La Salle, Market, and Franklin streets, or equivalent, over the network of tracks. The opportunity also is gained to cut through to State street with east and west thoroughfares. Furthermore, the big obstacle to a south side terminal development, involving perhaps $200,000,000, has now been removed.

Leading Achievement.

The agreements represent the most important accomplishment of the Dever administration thus far and the most liberal viewpoint taken by railroads in Chicago within the last 25 years.

"The railroads are under no legal obligation, nor could they be compelled by assessment or otherwise to make this $7,019,408 or any contribution for such a purpose," says Mr. Robinson in his report. He adds that the roads "have taken a broad gauge view of the situation and have been led to make such a handsome contribution to the proposed improvement largely in recognition of their moral responsibilities to the needs of the community."

But during nine years of effort city officials in the Thompson and Dever administration failed to get the railroads in the right frame of mind until Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, hit on the idea last May of a citizens' committee, selected its members, and prevailed on them to give their ability and time gratis for the welfare of the city. In addition to Mr. Robinson, vice president of the Illinois Steel company, this committee is composed of James Simpson, president of Marshall Field & Co.; William R. Dawes, president of the Association of Commerce; Arthur G. Leonard of the Central Manufacturing district, and Silas H. Strawn, lawyer.

Frame Plan During Summer.

Between May and Sept. 9 the committee produced a plan for river straightening, prepared largely by Edward J. Noonan and Hugh Young, city engineers. This plan proposed rearrangement of land ownership among six railroads. The Rock Island, the New York Central and the Baltimore and Ohio were to be the principal buyers and the Northwestern, Burlington and Pennsylvania the principal sellers, with the Western Indiana playing a minor role.

The plan fixed the price at which each should sell and each should buy and the amount that should be bought and sold. The scheme involved reallotment of raw land valued at $14,765,070, the building of new bridges, moving of one, construction of new freight facilities and rearrangement of tracks and appurtenances. By all of these improvements the committee figured that the value of the railroad land involved would be increased more than $7,000,000. That increased value the railroads were asked to donate for the expense of river straightening. The amount that each one should pay was fixed.

Between Sept. 9 and yesterday the committee prevailed on the railroads to accept that program. Some approved it without reservations and others imposed conditions, but Mr. Robinson's committee urges the city to accept the agreements as presented by the president or vice president of each road involved.

Committee Asks Dismissal.

The committee asserts in its report that it has finished its work and asks to be dismissed. Commissioner Sprague in his reply says that he has transmitted the railroad agreements to Mayor Dever with his "strong recommendation" but requests the committee to continue on the job to iron out troublesome and intricate details.

The most difficult situation involves the Baltimore and Ohio, because the river straightening eliminates its present main right of way, imposes the largest penalty in donation, and gives the smallest advantage and claimed increase in operating costs. Because of those conditions the citizens' committee reduced the contribution asked of this railroad by about $700,000.

President Daniel Willard then wrote his acceptance for the Baltimore and Ohio, subject to minor modifications in land allotment. Presidents James Gorman of the Rock Island and P. E. Crowley of the New York Central accepted, subject to the provision that sound land titles be conferred. President Fred W. Sargent of the Northwestern approved the project pending his directors' acceptance. President Hale Holden of the Burlington also accepted, subject to board action. Vice President Thomas W. Hulme of the Pennsylvania accepted the price and land award and agreed to sell the lands designated for the price stipulated. H. G. Hetzler, president of the Western Indiana has agreed to the plan, subject to board action and minor land changes.

Aldermen to Start Work.

It will be the duty of the council committee on railway terminals to adjust minor conditions, establish the boundary lines of all property, measure its area and obtain formal legal contracts. Ald. Edward J. Kaindl is chairman of this committee. He said last night that he will probably call a meeting for next Thursday, immediately after the report of the citizens' committee is presented to the council committee for consideration.

The aldermen will discuss their procedure, and probably petition the council finance committee for sufficient cash with which to have working plans and specifications prepared for the river straightening. It is probable that Chairman D. A. Horan of the committee on streets will order plans prepared for opening new thoroughfares through the terminal area. He said last night that the sooner these plans are ready the sooner an agreement can be reached with the railroads on the location and width of these streets to fit in with their proposed terminal developments.

RAID BURR OAK HOTEL.

Four women and a man were arrested in a raid by the police on the Burr Oak hotel, said to be owned by "Mike de Pike" Heitler, notorious Chicago character, in Blue Island late yesterday afternoon.

N. Y. DRIVES FIRST RIVET IN ITS NEW SUBWAY SYSTEM

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The first rivet in New York's new $506,000,000 subway system was driven today at St. Nicholas avenue and 132d street by John H. Delaney, chairman of the board of transportation.

Samuel Rosoff, the contractor for that stretch, announced that 45 per cent of the work had been completed in 25 per cent of the time allowed by the contract. Mayor Hylan broke ground on March 14 for the new subway, which was expected to be completed in March, 1928. At the present rate of progress, work will be finished in October of next year, it was said.

Fifteen contracts have been let to date, extending from the Pennsylvania terminal to 174th street and representing an outlay of $63,000,000.

At the point where the first rivet was driven today there will be six tracks, two for locals, two for expresses, and two for storage.

Standardized Eyes

The luring appeal of "cheapness and quality combined," so often disappointing in its application even to ordinary merchandise, has no justifiable application to eyeglasses.

These should be made, as are Almer Coe glasses, to the requirements of each individual, with scientific exactness; and priced accordingly.

As there can be no standardizing of eyes, there can be no scientifically standardized glasses.

Almer Coe glasses, as they are right in quality, are right in price.

Our frames and mountings vary from the lowest price, consistent with durability and comfort, to those of the more expensive materials and designs.

PAT O'DONNELL CENSURED FOR WHISKY GIFTS

Contempt Is Not Proved, Judge Finds.

The conduct of Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell in giving pint bottles of liquor to court attachés during the trial of Albert Anselmi and John Scalisi, Genna gunmen, was characterized yesterday by Judge William V. Brothers in the Criminal court as "revolting and reprehensible."

The judge dismissed the pending contempt matter because he said there could be no contempt where there is not intent, but he took occasion to berate the white haired attorney for his actions, which resulted in the dismissal of two bailiffs and a court clerk.

Attorney O'Donnell after listening in silence to the opinion of the court admitted that his act was a foolish one and that he had been justly criticized.

Bar Association Interested.

The judge announced that the Bar association is also taking an interest in the proceeding. He said at the request of the committee he turned over a copy of the proceedings.

"I have given careful consideration to the subject and have endeavored to view it from all its angles and am convinced that no formal contempt of court was committed or intended," said the judge.

After calling attention to the fact that had the gratuity taken the form of a fountain pen or cigars rather than whisky it probably would have passed unnoticed the opinion reads:

"Practice Unethical."

"The fact remains that the principle involved is bad and the practice dangerous and unethical. While well intentioned persons when indulging in the practice of giving presents to court attachés, whether solicited or not, may have no thought of seeking preference, the inevitable result is that some one may become sullied by the finger of suspicion.

"Mr. O'Donnell, I do not believe you endeavored or intended by your mistaken act of generosity to influence either the recipients of your gifts or any one associated with them in the trial of the case.

"In this matter the court is not called on to pass on the incident in so far as it may be concerned with the application of the Volstead act. That is a phase of the matter concerning which other officials should take action.

"But coming from one charged especially with the duty of respecting the law, the whole matter is made especially revolting and reprehensible.

Condemns Practice.

"I cannot too strongly condemn the whole affair, and believe that you, Mr. O'Donnell, were guilty of highly improper and reprehensible conduct."

Prior to the contempt decision the judge overruled a motion in arrest of judgment in behalf of the two police killers and sentenced them to 14 years each in the penitentiary. It was announced that the second trial would start about Jan. 11.

FORMER EMPRESS OF MEXICO IS AT DEATH'S DOOR

BRUSSELS, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Former Empress Charlotte of Mexico is gravely ill. She is reported to be sinking rapidly. The former empress has acute bronchitis with pulmonary congestion, her physicians announced this morning, after a consultation with King Albert. The queen has been at the bedside and the royal family has been informed of the patient's condition hourly. Slight hopes are entertained for recovery.

Charlotte, the "mad empress" of Mexico, widow of the Emperor Maximilian, is in her eighty-sixth year. She has been in an uncertain mental state since her dramatic interview with Napoleon III., when the French sovereign refused to aid her husband. Maximilian's Mexican adventure came to an end at Queretaro, where he was shot by the revolutionists in June, 1867.

Charlotte, daughter of Leopold I., is the aunt of Albert, king of the Belgians. Her brothers were King Leopold II., whom Albert succeeded, and Prince Philippe, father of King Albert. She was born at the chateau of Laeken June 7, 1840, and was married to Maximilian at Brussels in 1857.

BEFORE KIP LOST HIS SUIT

ment or by said representation, or by both, induced to marry the defendant? No.

If the plaintiff had known that defendant was of colored blood, would he have married her? Yes.

Did the plaintiff cohabit with the defendant after he obtained full knowledge that the defendant was of colored blood? Unanswered.

The court had indicated that the last question need not be answered if the other answers favored Mrs. Rhinelander.

Girl Listens Quietly.

Mrs. Rhinelander listened intently and the only sign that the decision affected her in the least was that she lowered her head slightly. The jury was polled at the request of Mr. Mills. Davis then rose.

"May I, on behalf of the defense, express my appreciation and thanks?" he said. Justice Morschauser also thanked the jury for their long and patient service and told them that he would ask to have them relieved from further jury duty for a year.

Mills demanded to be heard on a motion to dismiss the verdict as contrary to the evidence. Under the law the jury acts as an advisory body as to the facts, but the final decision rests with the court, and he may set aside their findings if he wishes. This is seldom done, but Mills wished to make his motion to clear the record for an appeal, which the plaintiff expects to make.

Judge Asks for Briefs.

Justice Morschauser asked that both sides present briefs to him so that he may in a few days make his formal decision in the case.

The jury all agreed soon after they began their deliberations that they could give only one verdict on the facts as presented to them. Their difficulty was in making up their minds as to how the questions should be answered in order to deliver a verdict for Mrs. Rhinelander.

"We very early made up our minds as to how the case should be decided," said Clarence Pietsch, the foreman. "We took up the questions one at a time, and the number of the questions delayed us somewhat. The only one which gave us any trouble, however, was the sixth, as to whether he would have married her if he had known she was colored. That was the reason we came in and asked for the testimony of Barbara Reynolds and Rhinelander's reply on that point.

Letters Did Not Decide.

"Race prejudice did not enter into the case at all, and neither did the unsavory details in the letters. We decided it merely as a case between a man and a woman, and in reaching our verdict considered Rhinelander as a normal man with normal senses of perception. We didn't consider what the future might hold for them, as that was not up to us for decision."

"There was never any disagreement among the jurors," said Harry J. Shaw, another juror.

William J. Demarest of Rye said:

"We want it clearly understood that not for a single instant did race prejudice enter into the consideration of our verdict. That was gratifying to all of us. We considered and discussed the evidence presented in court and the evidence alone. The fact that we had to argue so long was due to discrepancies in our understanding of certain parts of the testimony. Every doubt in our minds was dissolved, however, before we affixed our signatures to the verdict."

That there was some sympathy for Rhinelander, however, was shown by the comment of Henry M. Weil of Elmsford, who said:

"If we had voted according to our hearts the verdict might have been different."

SALVATION ARMY PLANS HOME FOR STRANDED WOMEN

An emergency home for women and children will be opened tomorrow by the Salvation Army at 1230 West Adams street. A three story building has been remodeled so that as many as fifty may be cared for nightly.

Because of its emergency work the home is equipped with a nursery which will be open day and night. A sewing room to mend clothing and to provide employment for women sheltered there is also included. Hungry people will be provided with food from a self-service dining room, also to be open at all hours.

Past facilities have proved inadequate to cope with the numbers of stranded and destitute women, it was said yesterday.

Other social agencies have been asked to coöperate with the Salvation Army and surplus applicants at other homes will be cared for in the new lodge.

CRIME EXPERTS BACK TRIBUNE PUBLICITY PLAN

News of Penalties Great Deterrent--Chamberlin.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Samuel Washington, murder, death on the gallows; William Head, statutory charge, 1 to 20 years in penitentiary; Rocco Margio, murder, life imprisonment, by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Albert Anselmi and John Scalisi, murder, 14 years each in penitentiary, by Judge William V. Brothers.

Mark Farnsworth, larceny, 1 to 10 years in penitentiary, by Judge Michael L. McKinley.

John S. Wisniewski, embezzlement, 1 to 10 years in penitentiary, by Judge Worth Caylor.

Thomas L. Wilson, murder, 1 year to life in penitentiary; Joseph Lewis, murder, 15 years in penitentiary; Allie Wesson, assault to murder, 1 year in Bridewell, by Judge Marcus Kavanagh.

"Keep up the good work," said Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the crime commission of Chicago, referring to the daily publication in THE TRIBUNE of Criminal court sentences. "You are showing the public the other side.

"Crime usually gets prominent newspaper space. The youth on the brink of criminality now knows that every day men and women are being sent to the penitentiary.

"Punishment is a deterrent of crime and in publishing the punishments you are giving warning to those who may be wavering. Let them take heed."

Collins Backs System.

Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins was also enthusiastic over the daily list of the penalties of crime.

"Much good should result from that little space," he declared. "There is a mistaken idea among some people that it is easy to defeat the ends of justice. The more important cases, of course, are duly noted in the public press.

"Whenever someone is acquitted gangsters and all the criminally inclined gain courage. A daily account of what happens to offenders should serves a warning to all."

Crowe Enthusiastic.

"The public should know the disposition of every case," he declared. "That is probably impossible as the newspapers would then be unable to print anything else. The average law abiding citizen usually knows some one arrested for a crime. After the arrest there is generally nothing more printed about that particular criminal.

"The respectable citizen is interested in knowing the ultimate disposition of the case. THE TRIBUNE now gives him that.

"It is well that the community keep posted on the acts of its officials, judges, prosecutors and all. The more punishment the less crime and the more publicity the more certain of a lessening of crime."

And Chief Collins was not alone in elation. The final report of grand jury contained this:

"We have limited our inquiry to matters in your honor's charge [Chief Justice Thomas J. Lynch] and ha worked as diligently as possible in limited time allowed.

MILKMEN'S CLUB WARNED AS BOMB INQUIRY WIDENS

"The officers are to be called here today," said Mr. Savage. "The very name of the club is wrong. Steve Sumner, business agent of the milk wagon drivers' union, and his man, Henry Barger, both under indictment, are the bosses of the club and they dominate every dealer, large or small. That condition is going to exist no longer."

Prosecutor Savage and his police commander, Lieut. Charles Egan, were instructed to bring all the bombers to jail. The special grand jury had indicted fifty persons, most of whom were under arrest last night and unable to furnish the large bonds required, $25,000 per indictment.

Trials Early in January.

Many more are to be involved, the officials said, and great efforts will be made to find the men who bombed the homes of four policemen during the last year. As the work of uncovering more bombers and their employers proceeds, the present cases will be prepared for trial early in January. The trials will be simultaneous, the cases being distributed among the Criminal court judges.

Yesterday praise was being given the officials for their accomplishments. Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins said that undoubtedly Lieut. Egan and his squad would be given substantial increases in pay. Lieut. Egan may be promoted to the rank of lieutenant of detectives.

Jury Praises Officials.

And Chief Collins was not alone in his opinion. The final report of the grand jury contained this:

"We have limited our inquiry to the matters in your honor's charge [Chief Justice Thomas J. Lynch] and have worked as diligently as possible in the limited time allowed.

"The evidence was collected and presented to us by the state's attorney's office, and we are indebted to State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe for the great assistance his office has given to us and to Joseph P. Savage, assistant state's attorney in charge of the investigation, and those who have assisted him.

"They have impressed the jury with their competence and desire to be of service. The police department, cooperating with the state's attorney, has given efficient service."

Judge Lynch Thanks Jury.

Chief Justice Lynch thanked the members of the jury for their service.

"I want to thank you individually and collectively for your untiring efforts in carrying on this investigation in behalf of the community," the judge said. "When I instructed you I told you to be fearless and that you have been so is proved by the number of indictments you have returned and the number of persons you have uncovered as being responsible for these outrages. You are deserving of the thanks of the community for your work in ridding it of this menace."

Justice Lynch then arraigned eight of the defendants, including Mrs. Lena Rice, who was arrested by Lieut. Charles Egan as she dropped a bomb in front of a hardware store at Fullerton and Monticello avenues on the morning of Nov. 26. She later confessed to many bombings, saying she had deserted her husband and three children to come to Chicago and live with Fred Wanquist, arrested with her.

Butchers' Association Explains.

The National Association of Retail Meat Dealers, representing three branches of the Retail Meat Dealers' association of Chicago and commonly known as the United Master Butchers' association, with branches northwest, southwest and central, writes to The Tribune with reference to the special grand jury's bomb inquiry. The report of the grand jury's work included a statement that "Maxie Eisen, northwest side wine dealer and lately president of the Master Butchers' association, and Abraham Yompolski, head of the Jewish Master Butchers' association, were among those accused."

The letter, from Sonnenschein, Berkman, Leidmann & Levinson, representatives of the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers, says:

"As a result you will understand the charges have been from time to time sporadic attempts by various persons to organize so-called master butchers' associations, but none of these has been under the auspices or sanction of either the national association or the three organizations which we represent."

BEER-DOPE FEUD IS BLAMED FOR SALOON SHOOTING

A battle between beer running gangs and peddlers was said by the police last night to be responsible for the shooting of Charles Sher, west side saloonkeeper, in front of his saloon Friday night as he was about to enter his automobile. Sher was taken to the county hospital with a handful of slugs from a sawed off shotgun in his body. Most of the slugs, however, hit the saloonkeeper in the leg.

It developed Sher was reputed to have been a foe of the Druggan-Lake faction of hijackers and bootleggers. A year or two ago Sher was arrested with Terry Druggan in connection with the murder of "Big Steve" Wisnewski. Both men were released when Assistant State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Cook county that they could throw no light on the slaying.

TRIBUNE SUIT AGAINST EXPERTS IS SET FOR FEB. 16

Case Goes Back to the Thompson Era.

All technical objections having been removed, trial of one of THE TRIBUNE suits to recover more than $2,500,000 in fees paid to real estate and building experts during the Thompson administration was set yesterday by Circuit Judge Hugo M. Friend for Feb. 16.

What's Involved in Suit.

The particular suit involves only the payment of $1,738,079 to E. H. Lyons, E. C. Waller Jr., and A. S. Merigold for street improvement appraisal work. Originally THE TRIBUNE sought to recover the fees paid not only from the experts themselves, but from former Mayor William Hale Thompson, former City Controller George F. Harding, and Michael J. Faherty, former president of the board of local improvements. All three of these have filed answers.

Charges Fees Were Political.

Attorney Howard Ellis for THE TRIBUNE filed an amended bill last spring, in which it was charged that Percy B. Coffin, public administrator, received $70,000 of the fees from the experts for financing two Thompson ward organizations.

Charles M. Nichols was charged with obtaining $75,000 for alleged services for the experts. Arnold H. Brautigan and his partner, Frank J. Koch, were charged with getting $182,000. All have been made defendants and will contest the suit.

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, Dec. 5.—(AP)—It is announced that M. Czerny is to head a temporary government, composed of officials, and that former Premier Svehla later will form a parliamentary cabinet.

THROUGH STREET SYSTEM URGED AS TRAFFIC AID

Chicago has but few streets that extend uninterruptedly through the city a map prepared by the Chicago plan commission for Ald. Charles S. Eaton [5th], chairman of the council committee on efficiency, economy and rehabilitation, revealed yesterday.

Certain industries, cemeteries, parks, railroad yards, rights of way and terminals, lakes and various branches of the Chicago river, prevent the normal straight extension of hundreds of streets that would give quick and easy access to any part of the city, he pointed out.

JURY PROBES IN VAIN TO EXPLAIN POLICE SLAYINGS

6 Leading Citizens Again Continue Inquest.

BY SIDNEY SUTHERLAND.

Did Martin Durkin stumble upon a pair of policemen detailed to catch him in the neighborhood of 53d and Halsted streets, and kill one of them instantly, wound the other fatally and kill a taxicab driver in a saloon shortly before dawn on Nov. 27?

Or were Patrolmen Daniel Carroll and James Henry and Marshall Custer, the chauffeur, shot during a beer runners' battle in McKeone's combination cigar stand, saloon and restaurant?

Or were they the victims of a holdup?

About the most eager question marks in Chicago yesterday were the six well known Chicagoans on the coroner's jury which again took up the problem of which of these three hypotheses is the right one. The jurors are Roy Juul, George F. Nixon, Tomas Deuther, Dr. C. E. Humiston, the Rev. Herbert Wilson, and Edward E. Gore. Yesterday they questioned an assortment of witnesses under the guidance of Deputy Coroner C. T. Kennedy.

Ask Smoking Stopped.

Said Dr. Humiston, to the Rev. Mr. Wilson, as the proceedings started: "Let's make this one inquest a dignified proceeding. Mr. Kennedy, please order everybody in here to stop smoking."

Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker and Fred R. Fraser were the contrasting witnesses of the day, and the most interesting. Under the earnest questioning of the six jurors, interspersed with the shrewd interrogatories of Deputy Kennedy and the examination by Assistant State's Attorney Michael Romano, these contradictory statements were vouchsafed by the six men and two women who took the witness stand:

Chief Quotes Deathbed Statement.

Chief Schoemaker quoted from Policeman Henry's deathbed statement that the two policemen, one of several details watching Martin Durkin's haunts, saw a taxicab suspiciously circling their beat, saw it stop across the street, and saw three men alight and enter McKeone's place at 5253 South Halsted street. The policemen followed them in. Carroll went ahead into the saloon, Henry stopping to buy and light a cigar. Henry Howard, the bartender, then admitted another man, who said:

"How are you?" Henry's statement says he replied; "I don't know you."

"Well, let's get acquainted," the unknown is quoted.

With that he shoved a pistol against Henry's body, told him to stick 'em up, and then shot him in the stomach. Henry says he crawled to the sidewalk and fired his pistol for help.

Meantime, in the general shooting before the bar Carroll and Custer, the taxi man, were slain.

Asked About Durkin.

"Mr. Schoemaker," Juror Deuther is talking, "without wishing to reveal any of your plans, will you say whether these officers were near McKeone's in obedience to your orders to watch for Durkin?"

"They were."

"By following the three men into the saloon, they deliberately disobeyed orders?"

"They did."

"To what do you attribute the shooting?"

"I think," said the detective chief after a long pause, "I think it was a holdup."

"And could it not be possible that the last man admitted by the bartender was Martin Durkin?"

There was another pause. Then Schoemaker replied:

"It might have been. But I don't think so."

Coroner's Chemist W. D. McNally testified that Carroll's organs contained alcohol and showed he had been drinking while on duty.

Labor Agent Testifies.

This seemed to support the testimony of Albert Paul, a labor agent of 837 West 54th place, who testified he was in the saloon at the time of the killings. He said Custer had driven him there; that they were eating and drinking for an hour before the shooting and that during that hour both policemen were seated at a table beside the stove. He ran into a back room when it started, he said, and Custer, trying to follow him, was shot in the back and killed. Paul didn't know what it was all about.

Fred R. Fraser, formerly of the 122d field artillery, is a confessed beer runner, trucking the barrels out of the Atlas and South Side breweries. He delivered near beer to McKeone's where he was also a bartender, he said. Denying it was a beer running war, he was quite frank as to his business in his statement to the jurors. He warned them, however, that he would not reveal the names of his other customers, how much they took, or what they paid for it.

With this the jury adjourned the inquest until next Saturday afternoon, as far as ever from the solution of who did the killing and why.

ARREST YOUTHS IN STOLEN AUTO.

Howard Polzin, 17 years old, 8059 Loomis street, and Charles Ebling, 17 years old, 7613 South May street, were brought back to Chicago yesterday afternoon from Tuscola, Ill., where they were arrested on their way to Florida in an automobile stolen from Fay Peterson, 7307 South Green street.

HONOR FRENCH EXPLORERS ON MICHIGAN BRIDGE

Dedication Is Held in Snowstorm.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

SCENE 1—Michigan boulevard bridge at 2:30 o'clock, the afternoon of Dec. 5, 1925. The roaring traffic river is still for a moment, for police are blocking the impatient automobiles. The unfinished work, the steel skeletons rising on either side, the great blocs of the office buildings are blurred by the driving snow.

A little group gathers at the north end of the bridge between two flags. The men bare their heads nobly, while the women gather their furs against the bitter wind.

"In the name of the Illinois Society of the Colonial Dames," says a woman's voice, drowned by the hoarse whistle of a tug passing underneath. The woman is Mrs. Holmes Forsyth. A man mumbles something in grateful acceptance for the City of Chicago. This is Maj. A. A. Sprague. A sheet is drawn back and a picture in bronze, placed in the stone side of the bridge, is revealed for those who may pause here a moment to read the story of another age and another kind of human achievement.

Honors Juliet and Marquette.

"In honor of Louis Joliet and Pere Jacques Marquette, the first white men to pass through the Chicago river, in September, 1673," reads the inscription.

A similar scene on the south end of the bridge and another bronze story "in the memory of Rene Robert Cavelier, Sieur de La Salle, and Henry de Tonti" is told for generations to come. The signal is given. The group breaks up and the unheeding city hurries by.

Chicago's First History.

SCENE 2—In the dignified atmosphere of old portraits, historic documents, spinning wheels, and records of the past, the program celebrating the gifts of these two bronze tablets to the city is carried into more detail in the hall of the Chicago Historical society, under whose auspices the presentation was made.

George W. Dixon speaks for the society. Maj. Sprague tells of the value of this kind of memory to the youth of today, the memory of brave men. Prof. Andrew C. McLaughlin of the University of Chicago traces the lives and careers of these four explorers on this continent, and fixes their tarry at the Chicago river portage as the first record of history for this city.

Mrs. Joseph Rucker Lamar, national president of the Colonial Dames, tells of the roots of our history and their strength today.

From Marquette's Journal.

SCENE 3—Turn now from the living to the dead. Unroll the screen 252 years and picture another winter day along this river, when Father Marquette, huddled in skins in his cabin or wigwam, held up by the weather from his journey to the Illinois Indians, kept alive only by his great faith and his indomitable courage.

The story is found in part in his unfinished journal, written during that winter, just published in popular form in "The Jesuit Relations." [Albert and Charles Boni.]

"We started with a favoring wind and reached the river of the portage, which was frozen to the depth of half a foot. [The river ran the other way then.] There was more snow there than elsewhere, as well as more tracks of animals and turkeys.

"The land bordering the lake is of no value, except on the prairies. [He may have been looking at the gold coast.] Deer hunting is very good.

Spent Winter There.

"Having encamped near the portage, two leagues up the river, we resolved to winter there, as it was impossible to go farther, since we were too much hindered and my ailment did not permit me to give myself much fatigue.

"Several Illinois passed yesterday on their way to carry furs to Nawaskingwe. I do not think I have ever seen savages more eager for French tobacco than they.

"They came and threw beaver skins at our feet to get some pieces of it. They traded us three fine robes of ox skins for a cubit of tobacco; these were very useful to us during the winter.

"We have had opportunity to observe the tides coming in from the lake, which rise and fall several times a day; and, although there seems to be no shelter in the lake, we have seen the ice going against the wind. The deer are so lean that we had to abandon several which we had killed. We killed several partridges.

Plenty to Eat.

"The blessed Virgin Immaculate has taken care of us during our wintering that we have not lacked provisions and have still remaining a large sack of corn with some meat and fat."

Father Marquette died at 38, in the year following this adventure, after he had been on a mission to the Illinois Indians and was trying to get back to Canada on the other shore of the lake. Father Claude Dablon writes in his journal:

"He always entreated God that he might end his life in these laborious missions, and that, like his dear St. Xavier, he might die in the midst of the woods bereft of everything."

La Salle and Tonti passed this way on their great journey to the mouth of the Mississippi, where they took Louisiana for France. They had been looking for China, by way of the Pacific, but found a new empire. This journey forms one of the great epics of history and of human endurance.

DEDICATE TABLET TO MARQUETTE

JAPANESE ARMY SENT TO MANCHU LEADER, REPORT

Tokio Troops Aiding at Mukden, Claim.

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

PEKING, Dec. 5.—A reliable authority who has just arrived from Mukden has revealed details of a sensational story which must be telegraphed with reserve, because, while they probably will be denied in official quarters, nevertheless contain such important consequences that they should be given immediate publicity. The informant, who came to Peking to tell the government of the situation in Mukden when he left there, Nov. 30, arrived here last night. His story is that Gen. Yang Yu Tang, chief of staff of Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian dictator, went to Dairen when Gen. Kuo Sung Ling rebelled. Gen. Yang, he said, made a secret agreement with the governor of the Japanese leased zone, which was to the following effect:

Provides Jap Aid.

The Japanese were to provide 40,000 troops to support Gen. Chang Tso-lin in order to enable him to suppress the rebellion and restore his authority. Gen. Yang signed the agreement on the behalf of Chang, which was tantamount to reviving the Manchurian clauses of the famous twenty-one demands which Japan made on China in 1916. Gen. Chang also will secure a Japanese loan, the informant asserts. Ten thousand Japanese troops already have arrived in Mukden from Dairen, have changed to Chinese uniforms, and are living in Chinese barracks, it is asserted. The Japanese railway guards of Mukden ten days ago began to police the Chinese city, wearing the sleeve brassards of Chang's service. These details were carried past a strict censorship.

Manchuria Alarmed.

The foregoing events greatly displease and alarm the people of Manchuria, especially the officials, who fear Japanese control of the eastern provinces. The immense importance of the foregoing information is evident, since the Tokio government has often stated its complete aloofness from these events, asserting that it had no purpose to interfere or assist either Chinese faction and that such action would be a violation of the clauses in the Washington treaties, in which the powers agree not to interfere in Chinese internal affairs or warfare. The international reactions to such moves by the Japanese may be serious. They may disturb the powers or even destroy present amity of relations.

Unearth Skeleton Near Waukegan; Skull Crushed

The skeleton of a man about 40 years old was unearthed from a shallow grave of sand yesterday by Paul Lamar, a Waukegan trapper, at work along a small creek three miles north of town. According to Sheriff Edwin Ahlstrom, the man probably had been murdered about ten years ago. The skull was crushed above the right eye. A complete examination will be made by A. J. Link, coroner's chemist.

A checkup on missing persons was being conducted by the sheriff's office last night.

MAN GOLDDIGGER, NOT WOMAN, SAYS JUDGE SABATH

Men, not women, compose a majority of the gold digger class in Chicago, Judge Joseph Sabath, veteran jurist of the Superior court, declared yesterday, speaking at a luncheon in the Elks club.

The judge produced some unusual statistics on the 15,000 divorces he has heard. He lauded the women divorce seekers who had appeared before him and absolved them of the term "alimony diggers" recently applied.

He said that men, more often than women, marry with money in mind.

"When women marry, the great majority marry for love. When men marry, in many cases, they are thinking of financial advantages. At least, the masculine gold digger is more numerous than the feminine.

"Some judges say a woman should be given no alimony when she has no children. I was of that opinion for a while."

Judge Sabath then told of a woman who asked for a divorce, charging her husband with cruelty. She had been married ten years. Before her marriage, she had worked, earning $75 a month.

"You can earn enough to support yourself," Judge Sabath told her, he narrated. "You need no alimony from your husband."

"I've given up the best part of my life to my husband," the woman replied, according to the judge. "I've lost my earning capacity while I slaved for him. If I attempt to work now no one will want me. Why shouldn't my husband support me?"

"I decided that the woman was right," the judge concluded. "And I give alimony to women when an investigation warrants it. But Chicago wives are independent. They don't want support from their divorced husbands unless they are unable to care for themselves."

CONFESSIONS OF THE EDITORIAL WE.

The editorial "we" sometimes has its place in the sun. Every one knows how the giver of advice generally fares. Who are you? And so's your old man. Human nature from childhood to the undertaker devotes fifty per cent of its time to objecting to advice, rejecting it, hating the adviser, and doing otherwise than advised for no other reason, now and then, than because it is otherwise.

In editorial rooms which have had any long experience with popular reception of newspaper advice it is well understood that few immediate effects can be had from advice, admonition, and injunction. We do not know in a rational world, if it is rational, why this should be otherwise.

Shall a man merely because he owns or publishes or edits or writes for a newspaper of great circulation have, for that reason alone, some autocratic voice in the community? His circulation may be that of the comic strips, the want ads, the store news, advice to the lovelorn, most embarrassing moments, and sports and markets.

The editorial department scolds and preaches, exhorts and damns, and on the immediate readers, few or many, this may fall sometimes as a mixture of bad manners, inaccuracy and rotten reasoning.

Such as may read this editorial shall be let in on the ground floor. Even editorial writers have a conception of immediate futility, caused by the different human rejection of advice whether it is good, bad or indifferent. If it is advice it is out.

But persistence is the drop after drop of water. It wears a hole or a groove even in granite. Enough drops and there is an impression in the hardest substance. In some cases results are not expected under twenty years. In others the indicated time may be ten or five or two.

There are instances in which a sharp rap at the official individual or a group of officials may have results the next day. That is the tour de force and we understand its causes to lie in the individual's apprehension of something in public opinion which might be aroused to his detriment.

There is now, as the immediate reason for these speculations, the apparent success of the midwest waterways, particularly the success of the gulf waterway. It is probably now within assurance.

Through a whole generation of Illinois citizens THE TRIBUNE has backed this generally uninspiring subject. There have been five different administrations in the state. There has been every block of granite which private interest and public inertia could put in the way, but the drop, drop, drop of promotion has broken them down.

The federal waterway legislation is still some ways off, but we think that a patient, persevering editorial department which singly and alone stood to these guns in years of discouragement may pin a rose on itself. No one else will.

Editorial policies can afford to be unpopular. They are not dependent on elections. A pay roll is not dependent on them. They do not have to have a good show to keep from starving to death. They can be unpopular. They can include subjects which do not interest the public much. They do not need to be afraid of public controversy. Sometimes people say they are quitting the paper because an editorial offended them, but most of the time they don't, and most readers are fair minded. They can stand a little opposition or much opposition, if they think it is on the square.

Many things are too hot for politicians and public men. They side step and evade. They must compromise. The editorial page is not required to do so.

NOT SO GOOD FOR THE SHEIKS.

Mr. Valentino, who found an artistic cramp in matrimony, arrived in Paris to indulge his wife in her divorce suit by establishing residence and putting himself willingly under the jurisdiction of the agreeable French courts, and was disappointed to find that his wife had not obliged him by starting the suit. It may be disconcerting to get all dressed up for a divorce and then have nowhere to go.

Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten arrives in New York to see his wife and infant son, and finds that in anticipation of his visit his wife had skipped to Florida with the infant. It may also be disconcerting to have a domestic picture imaginatively bright and then find that a train has run over it. The intensity of the devotion of the count to the Rogers' solvency is unquestioned.

It is also unquestioned that the corn fed American male citizenship takes kindly to the misfortunes of the sheiks. The corn fed citizen is a person whose job is to earn a living. It may be pretty soft for some people, but it isn't soft for him. He knows that his trousers get baggy at the knees and that his hair isn't pretty. He is in luck if he keeps it and his job and his teeth.

He hasn't time to be fascinating if he knew how. When he isn't working he's likely to be sleepy. Women never see him when he does his stuff as the hard boiled executive at a clean desk in the pickle factory. The stenographer sees him then, and she may think that he is Napoleonic, but probably she doesn't. It is difficult to have any admiration for a boss in tweed. Napoleon in plus-fours would have been a fizzle. One thing that counts for Washington and against Lincoln is knee breeches.

A lady, we imagine, would rather work for Hamlet if he were crazy or Othello if he were a murderer than for Bottom if he were a genius. That is what gets the corn fed goat. The corn feds would not so much mind if the Goths took the gals away from them, but when sleek haired Paris does the job instead of Hector the boys like to see Paris step on banana peels.

A lady recently wrote to the Voice of the People that Valentino was the feminine refuge from a world of fact to a world of illusion and romance. The sheik represented a world that in fancy ought to be and in reality could not be, just as Cinderella might be the dream of the goose girl.

This feminine disposition to get away from the cold facts of bread and potatoes and idealize something which cashes in on appearance and deportment is what frosts the realistic go-getter, who knows that some one must pay the coal bill before romance can have a nest. He objects to making the dough and allowing the sheik to make the love. He is mad when he sees the technique of: "Baby, where have you been all my life?" win over his persistent program of skinning the other pickle manufacturer before the other pickle manufacturer skins him.

AMERICAN?

Upon reflection it has been decided that there shall be no names used in this editorial. If it loses in authenticity it gains in charity. The facts are these:

Some time ago, a matter of two or three weeks, a professor in a state university wrote THE TRIBUNE a letter discussing prohibition. He was not for it, on grounds of political philosophy and social good. The letter got to the Voice of the People in ordinary routine and as it got there it was without any indication that it was not for publication. It was published. It seems that in the intent of the writer it was not to be. Of that the Voice of the People was uninformed.

Thus this professor was publicly attached to an opinion. He is vulnerable. He is on a pay roll. He may have a family to support. He probably has.

The other day THE TRIBUNE had a letter from a Chicago citizen. He wrote that he had seen this professor's letter in THE TRIBUNE and that it was so violently pro-liquor he had written to the president of the state university to inquire if such expressions were permitted the staff. The president replied that the instructor had been on the carpet to defend himself and had said there had been a misuse of a private communication in THE TRIBUNE office. The Chicagoan wrote to inquire if THE TRIBUNE had abused a confidence. It did not intentionally, but that is aside the point and it leaves the facts as they are.

A man in a state university is being hounded possibly there and evidently elsewhere because he had an opinion. A Chicago business man is interested to the extent of trying to drive a man out of his job, possibly to pauperize a family, because he has seen in print an opinion with which he does not agree. He is willing to promote a possible case of human unhappiness and misfortune because his victim has come to one judgment and be to another in habits of life.

It would seem that the president of the university has sympathy in this cause of most inhumane intolerance. If this could be regarded as an isolated and strange case in the American democracy we'd not give it another thought.

We are afraid it is anything but that. We fear that this Chicago business man's name is legion and that he represents quite accurately the persecuting instincts of an American faction.

Bad as crime is in the United States we could stand it, profligate, murderous, dissolute, and depraved as it may be. It is not so ruinous as the inhumanity which would willingly take another citizen's means of livelihood away from him because there was objection to the victim's opinions.

That is an unforgivable sin, the meanness of mind and soul. A cancer of the body would be better than this cancer of the soul. Much better a Gothic or Hunnish invader for a nation than a dominance of such moral savagery. Is America to revert to physical torture because of opinion?

ADVERTISING ETHICS AND THE ONE HAND GUN.

The management of THE TRIBUNE does not accept advertising matter seeking to promote the sale of pistols, revolvers, or automatics. It believes that in so refusing such matter it performs a service to the public which supports it.

Other publications, which maintain an otherwise high standard in accepting advertising matter, do print advertisements of small firearms. We believe that in so doing they perform a public disservice.

We have reiterated our stand time and again, but it will bear further repetition; for not until the production of those firearms which may be classed as one hand guns has been rigidly restricted will the present wave of crime and lawlessness be put down.

The one hand gun fulfills only one purpose, the killing of human beings. Its other uses are negligible. In the defense of the home, in its very limited use on the farm or in the hunting field, the rifle and the shotgun are even more efficient substitutes.

The one hand gun is made and used to kill people. It has its legitimate users in this field of action. The soldier, the policeman, the sheriff, the mail and express guard should be permitted to carry one hand guns. Their duties, sanctioned by law, take into account the possible necessity of shooting others.

But aside from these uses there is no other that is lawful. The principal use of the pistol, the revolver, and the automatic is in holdups and murders. With the big money of a prosperous country as incentive, with bootlegging and its attendant graft paving the road, with the automobile for a getaway, and the one hand gun making success through murder and terrorism almost a certainty, with all this making crime so easy and alluring, it is no wonder that the murder and holdup lists keep on growing.

No one wants to stop the sale of automobiles, or halt prosperity, and all the law enforcement in the country has failed to dry up the flow of bootlegged liquor. The one element that can be removed is the one hand gun. Its manufacture should be rigidly controlled by federal authority. Its importation should be stopped entirely. Its sale should be drastically regulated. The laws against carrying concealed firearms should carry a maximum penalty, and they should be enforced.

This should be done or crime will continue to become more and more a menace to human life.

Until it is done, and after it is done, THE TRIBUNE will do its best to curtail the use of one hand guns by refusing all matter advertising their sale. We do not think any publication can accept such advertisements and still maintain its self-respect or deserve the respect of others.

AFTER LOCARNO.

The Locarno treaties have been signed and sealed with impressive ceremonies in London. They will do much to keep the peace in Europe, but it would be unfortunate if the impression should become general that there is no more danger of war in Europe. Much danger remains.

Locarno has left Europe with four kinds of national boundaries, considered from the point of view of security. Most secure of all is the western frontier of Germany. England and Italy at Locarno guaranteed that boundary by agreeing to go to war against any power which trespassed against it. Next in order of security is the eastern frontier of Germany. We do not entirely understand the treaties between Germany and Poland and Germany and Czecho-Slovakia. What they seem to say is that France will guarantee the Polish and Czech frontier against German invasion and that any quarrel between Germany and her eastern neighbors must be submitted to arbitration. Germany's eastern and western frontiers are guaranteed also by the league of nations.

A third kind of frontier is that guaranteed by the league of nations and nothing else. The recent boundary trouble between Greece and Bulgaria is a case in point. If it is to be taken as a precedent, we may conclude that the league will interest itself in any boundary dispute in Europe in which a member of the league is concerned. How far the great powers of the league will go in enforcing peace is another question. The mere threat of intervention was enough to restore order between Bulgaria and Greece. The fourth type of boundary is that which delimits Russia. That is the least stable of all.

Two conclusions, we believe, can be drawn from this examination. The first is that so long as Europe has not reached an understanding with regard to Russia the danger of a general European war remains. Germany is willing to give up Alsace, but she is by no means so resigned with regard to the Dantzig corridor and Silesia. If Poland becomes involved in a war with Russia, we think it entirely possible that Germany will take advantage of the situation, treaty or no treaty, to get back her old possessions. In those circumstances a general European war could scarcely be avoided.

A second conclusion is that Europe itself has no great confidence in the league of nations alone as a guarantor of security. As Sir Austen Chamberlain pointed out in his defense of the Locarno treaties before parliament, Britain undertook nothing at Locarno which she had not already undertaken when she signed the Versailles treaty and the covenant of the league. Theoretically Locarno added nothing. Practically it added much. It is fair to conclude, then, that the European powers put little confidence in the generalities of the covenant. They want the guarantees of the covenant restated with specific reference to their individual cases. The fact that the Locarno treaties were thought necessary clearly suggests that some of the powers do not intend to go to the defense of any country which is attacked. Most of Europe's eastern and southern boundaries are guaranteed only by the league.

Locarno has removed much of the menace of a German war for the recovery of the lost provinces, but it has by no means removed the danger of a general European war, precipitated by an eastern European quarrel. There will have to be more than one Locarno before Europe can feel secure

INVITING A GAS ATTACK.

Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, head of the army's chemical warfare service, says the appropriations for his section in recent years have been far too small. He warns congress and the country in his annual report that chemical warfare must get a substantial increase in the money allotted it, or we shall be committing national suicide.

Gas warfare was outlawed by the Washington disarmament conference. Every country which has the chemical industries to enable it to fight with gas is pledged to fight without it. Maybe the others will keep the pledge, and maybe they won't. We have plenty of reason for thinking they won't. When their existence is at stake, nations have a way of disregarding anything that stands in the way of victory. We do not think that point has to be argued at length with men and women who lived through the last war.

Gen. Fries says this country is storing no chemicals in anticipation of another war. We are living up to the terms of the treaty faithfully, and, he adds, we are going farther. We are assuming the enemy is going to be equally observant of his treaty obligations, for we are not providing gas masks for our own soldiers. The consequences of that neglect are too horrible to contemplate.

Editorial of the Day

"MA" FERGUSON'S PLIGHT.

[Peoria (Ill.) Transcript.]

The unfortunate aspect of what now appears to be an inevitable overhauling of "Ma" Ferguson's administration as governor of Texas by the legislature of that state is that "Ma" was elected both to justify the administration and to prove that a woman can conduct the affairs of government as efficiently as a man.

There is little doubt that "Ma's" reputation will suffer if impeachment proceedings are instituted. At this distance it ill becomes one to attempt to pass on the truth or falsity of charges against Gov. Ferguson. Nevertheless, it does not reflect credit upon any governor to face impeachment unless it is so obvious that it is a political move that those sponsoring it are put to rout by their own overconfidence. "Ma" Ferguson may prove herself innocent, a martyr, even, to politics and love for her husband. It is conceivable that the same political group in Texas which made her husband's administration a nightmare is leading the present attack upon the wife. In that case she doubtless is more to be pitied than blamed.

At the same time, students of politics know that only a good pragmatist can be a good politician. Results are all that count. No governor can be considered efficient if the state is converted into a political cockpit. A governor must not only be the state's chief executive, but must be the titular head of his or her party, and be able to crack the whip sufficiently to keep political enemies at bay. This is not an ideal situation, but it is inevitable in state governments as presently constituted.

"Ma" may be a success as a state executive. She gives every indication of having failed as a party leader. Therein is revealed the greatest weakness of women office holders as the game of politics is played today. Although women may be elected to office, as was "Ma" Ferguson, they are rarely party leaders—either by force of personality or by strength of political alliance. As yet, their strength as vote getters depends upon their sex. And while chivalry may count at the polls it is absent in backroom conferences.

Unless "Ma" can avoid impeachment she will have failed.

HOLIDAY GORGING.

THANKSGIVING has come and gone. Thanks to Nature's great tolerance, many are alive to tell the tale. The day was given over to idleness and then we capped it by eating like ditch diggers. What's the use of talking about it now? Some of us got off with our lives and it will be almost a year before another Thanksgiving. A man can forget a lot in a year.

The reason for talking about it is that Christmas is just over the hill. Christmas will be another day of idleness, plus a gorge. It's too late to advise people to go light on the "eats" for Thanksgiving, but Christmas is close enough at hand to make a warning worth while. Recollections of the tight waistbands on Thanksgiving night will help to impress the lesson for Christmas.

The sickness rate always goes up right after Christmas. Children have been out of school—there was no school inspection; there were Christmas parties. The opportunities for contact with infective colds, sore throats, cases of impending measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and diphtheria have been great. The reassembling of students after the interval of liberty causes contagion to be brought into susceptible groups. Then there are the effects of intemperate eating on Christmas day. Parents know what this means in the case of children. In consequence, they keep the castor oil bottle close at hand at Christmas time.

The grownups don't know as much about the subject because the effects are more subtle and less obvious. A very heavy meal throws a great strain on the liver. It is made to work overtime. The man whose liver is equal to the extra strain is fortunate. Wonder how many people there are who develop gallstones and infected gall bladders as the result of the annual gorge days! Who knows?

A strain is thrown on the kidneys, particularly if the dinner is a heavy meat meal with cranberries and stuffing on the side. A strain is thrown on the heart. If you do not believe it count your pulse after eating a heavy meal. Watch the heaving of your heart. Doing so will do you some harm, but it may make you eat less next Christmas day.

The blood pressure is temporarily increased. Why not get out into the air for a few hours and then go home and eat about as much as you do on other days—or less? If you want to eat a dessert, save plenty of room for it.

EATING FRUIT AT NIGHT.

Iowa writes: I always heard that to eat apples at night was healthful, and that there was nothing better for the bowels. A lady's family physician said the other day that there was nothing more unhealthy than eating raw fruits at night, as it caused auto-intoxication. Is this true?

REPLY.

Young people eat fruit at night with advantage.

Old people who do so sometimes complain of gas pains and cramps.

CHILD EATS DIRT.

G. C. C. writes:

1. What makes my 22 months old child eat dirt?
2. What is a cure for it?
3. Will infantile paralysis affect a boy 15 years old?

REPLY.

1. Probably several causes are operating. One is an improper diet.
2. Give your child vegetables, soups, fruits, cereals, bread, meat, and milk.
3. Yes.

THE LAW FOR DOGS.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What is the city law on dogs? I know of some people who live in a rooming house, and they have a dog. They often go out at night and leave the dog in their room, and it barks and howls by the hour. The landlord says that the law mentions only about dogs biting and not being a nuisance. J. S.

Section 1063 of the city code is in part as follows: "At the time and place set for trial in any branch of the Municipal court of the city of Chicago for any cause referred to in this chapter, if it shall appear that any dog has in any manner disturbed the quiet of any person or persons, or caused an abrasion of the skin, or attempted to bite or snap at any person or persons within the city, the owner or keeper shall be fined not less than $5 nor more than $200."

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NO JOB, NO PAY.

Blue Island, Ill., Nov. 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I signed a contract with a school for a telegraph course, and they promised to get me a job where I could work in the daytime and attend school in the evening. They did not find me a job, so, of course, I could not go to their school, but went out and found a job myself. I now receive a letter from them saying I owe $138 for the balance of the course. Do I have to pay, inasmuch as they did not get me the job as promised? I. H.

If their promise to get you a job was not incorporated in your written contract you probably are not in a position to take advantage of it, in which case you would be liable unless you can prove additional facts such as minority.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CUTTING THROUGH CATALPA.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—[Friend of the People.]—For several years there has been talk of cutting through Catalpa avenue from Ashland to Clark street. As a Clark street property owner I am interested in seeing this improvement completed. When does the city intend to start on the work? M. E. S.

We have a proceeding now in court for opening Catalpa avenue from Ashland avenue to Clark street, and expect that the case will soon be reached for trial. When the assessment is confirmed by the court, it will be certified for collection, and the awards will be paid from the assessment as collected. We will get order of possession when we have paid for all the awards allowed by the court for property to be taken or damaged.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 6, 1865.

MILWAUKEE.—A man named Frohn was arrested in Burlington, Wis., for the murder with an ax of two girls and a boy while their parents were away at church.

CHICAGO.—Repeal is sought of numerous "small, vexatious, and inquisitorial taxes," in the published report of the secretary of the treasury, Hugh McCulloch. The country must stop inflation and get back to a specie basis.

LAWRENCE, Kas.—Quite a temperance revival is being carried on in Kansas. Lawrence recently voted against the license system. Oil has been struck 35 miles southeast of town.

NEW YORK.—Hoffman, Tammany candidate for mayor, was elected over his Republican opponent, Roberts, by a small majority. The election passed quietly with no murders reported.

NEW YORK.—News from Cape Haytien confirms accounts of its bombardment by the British. The cholera plague at Guadaloupe and Martinique is so fatal that ships are refused right of entry.

CHICAGO.—Cautious, patriotic, and dignified, was the general tone of the President's message to congress as described here.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 6, 1900.

CHICAGO.—The engagement was announced of Miss Vora Adelaide Lawrence of Saginaw, Mich., to John Alling Jr. of Chicago.

CHICAGO.—Pastors and members of Congregational churches in Chicago held a massmeeting at Union Park Congregational church and demanded that the dives and crime be swept from Chicago. The meeting marked the first organized crusade against gambling dens, dance halls, and other notorious resorts. Speakers blamed the mayor for conditions.

CHICAGO.—The board of review of the American Trotting association issued an edict of expulsion for W. A. Jones, James Williams, W. J. Wilson, Harrie Jones, John Sail, W. W. Wilson, J. S. Vance, J. D. Hiner, C. F. Vance, C. B. Lore, and R. F. Scudder, all of Rushville, Ind. The offense was unique, being the "faking" of an entire day of alleged trotting and pacing over the Rushville track on Sept. 16, 1899. The returns from the "races" were sent in on official blanks and the "records" made by the horses added materially to their value.

CHICAGO.—The Rev. J. H. Bitler, Methodist Episcopal evangelist, who recently was given Cripple Creek mining property worth $1,000,000, has come to Chicago to do reform work. One of his projects is to erect a "good will temple" that will be 500 feet high and surmounted by a luminous cross 100 feet high and 50 feet wide. He has secured the coöperation of Chicago capitalists.

ST. PAUL.—Gov. Lind has appointed Charles A. Towne of Duluth to the United States senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Cushman K. Davis. Mr. Towne accepted the appointment.

CLEVELAND, O.—As a cure for deafness caused by scarlet fever, Miss Alta Rockefeller, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, is having new ear drums grown under care of physicians in Vienna, according to a letter of a young medical student in that city to his family here.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 6, 1915.

WASHINGTON.—The 64th congress will convene at noon today in what is regarded as the most important session of a generation. Important measures to come up include President Wilson's new ship purchase bill, which he regards as second only to the national defense in his program of legislation. The new ship bill has been materially changed from the one which was defeated at the last session. The plan now is for the government to build or purchase ships which may be used as available auxiliaries and sell or lease them to private corporations for operation.

ABOARD PEACE SHIP OSCAR II.—[By Wireless.]—Despite regulations governing passports, Henry Ford is determined to cross German territory on his way from Copenhagen to The Hague. His passport authorizes him to visit neutral countries only, not to stop at or pass through any of the belligerent countries. Some of the peace ship passengers are apprehensive that he and his party will be arrested if they attempt to set foot on German soil.

CHICAGO.—Congressman Frank Buchanan of Chicago and another member of the house may lose their seats if the federal authorities connect up the labor national peace council, of which Buchanan formerly was president, with alleged German plots to tie up munitions plants by strikes.

WASHINGTON.—Former Secretary of State William J. Bryan called on President Wilson in a formal statement to renew his offer of mediation to the warring countries of Europe.

WAR NEWS.—The Serbians, driven back to the Albanian frontier, turned on the Bulgarians, but were overwhelmed, losing many cannon and large quantities of munitions, Berlin reports. Paris claims that between the Somme and the Oise French trench guns destroyed German posts to the north of Harbecourt and a shelter for machine guns near Tilloloy. Mine fighting continued in the region of Frise.

CHICAGO.—The tough dance hall in Chicago must go. Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, commissioner of public welfare, has said it. Hereafter every public dance will be held under the supervision of "a carefully selected committee of volunteer investigators."

A NEW LOOP.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—In reference to the loop traffic problem, permit me to offer a few suggestions based on observations made during residence in New York, London, and other centers.

If there is no demand for elevated trains within the loop, then why are street cars allowed to clutter up practically every street within the loop? Why can't street cars be diverted at the edge of the loop and operated around the loop and not through it?

Also why are all the lumbering trucks that have no destination in the loop floundering around in the loop every day?

The solution is to construct a wide roadway, up to 250 feet wide, at the edge of the loop. Street car traffic would then be routed around the loop, just as the elevated trains are now, and not through it. Lumbering trucks would also pass around the loop on this roadway and would not venture within the loop unless they had definite business there. Private automobiles could be parked on this roadway at the edge of the loop instead of jostling human beings for space within the loop, as at present. Taxicabs could spend most of their time cruising around this roadway, for it would be towards this roadway that all loop workers would turn when desiring to leave the loop district by street car, elevated train, taxicab, or private automobile. Grass and shrubbery could be grown along the middle of this great roadway, giving the impression of a park encircling the city.

The loop then would be a spot consecrated to human beings—who would then be able to do their office work and shopping with a peace of mind they cannot now enjoy while threatened every minute they are on the streets by street cars, automobiles, and trucks.

FRANK H. WILSON.

ROAD MARKERS.

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 2.—I was amused when reading an article signed "Observer" in your column, which referred to too many road markers in Illinois along the paved roads. This "Observer" is only thinking of himself and not of the strangers who use the Illinois paved roads. He wants a few markers at intersections of paved roads and by-roads and then a few leading to and from the towns traversed.

How about passing up at night, or even in the daytime, the few markers at intersections, with no markers occasionally to identify the road? "Observer" should drive through a strange territory where his theory has been put into practice. Then he would condemn the state and road officials for lack of consideration of the tourists. A CITY COLLEGE FOR CHICAGO.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—In reference to Mr. Cutcheon's cartoon of Nov. 17, "Chicago Takes Stock of Advantages and Defects," I was greatly surprised to find the omission of the well known defect, "Chicago lacks a four year municipal college."

The need of a four year municipal college is illustrated by the almost miraculous growth of the Crane Junior college on the west side. The new four year college should be an enlargement of the present Crane college.

LESTER R. JAMES.

THE SITE FOR A MUNICIPAL COLLEGE.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—At present a movement is on foot to establish a four year municipal college at the Crane Junior college. Soon, even if the high school is entirely withdrawn from the building, and even if a four year course is established, space will not be sufficient at Crane to accommodate all of the students. New buildings will have to be erected. Why should not Chicago erect a large modern building on the front in Grant park?

The advantages of this location are numerous. The students could have plenty of fresh air, ample campus ground, and excellent boating facilities. The building would be within immediate distance of the Field museum, the Art institute, the loop, and the public library.

BENJAMIN HUBERT.

ONE BILL FOR GAS AND ELECTRICITY.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—After mailing one hundredth and some check to the People's Gas company and another to the Commonwealth Edison company, a thought struck me.

Why could not these two checks be mailed to one address at one time? There they could be separated and through a clearing office and turned over to the proper companies. It would save the people many thousands of dollars in postage, and they would not be annoyed by two separate bills at two different times.

The two bills might be delivered at the same time, reducing thereby the expense of the companies by many thousands of dollars.

JOHN S. KONOPA.

WHY WOMEN WON'T VOTE.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—There has been considerable criticism lately of the citizens who fail to vote and who have been termed slackers. I am one of them. I have not voted for two or three years, for the simple reason that I object to telling my age and life history to the whole neighborhood. I am pretty certain, too, that that is the reason for most of the nonvoters, especially among the women.

TRIBUNE PICKS 3 POLICE HEROES; EACH GETS $100

Men Who Killed Bandits in Battles Named.

Unusual courage and bravery of members of the Chicago police force in tackling desperadoes single handed in the face of gun fire causes THE TRIBUNE again to depart from its usual custom of making but one award of $100 each month for acts of conspicuous bravery.

Three men in the month of November faced gunmen's bullets and returned the fire, which resulted in the death of the bandit in each case.

Three Heroes Draw Award.

For their unflinching devotion to duty in the protection of the lives and property of the people of this city each of the following three is given an award of $100:

Patrolman George Wanland of the Shakespeare avenue station, who single-handed faced two armed bandits and killed one of them after they had opened fire on him.

Patrolman Napoleon Sutton, colleague policeman assigned to the Cottage Grove avenue station, who killed a notorious ex-convict in a gun battle after Sutton's partner had been killed and then captured the dead bandit's partner after a running pistol fight and a hand to hand struggle.

Patrolman Demitry Cal of the Shakespeare avenue station, who advanced upon an ambushed gunman in the face of gun fire and, after being wounded, killed the bandit, who had a long criminal record.

Why Three Are Named.

Under the rules governing the award one act of bravery has been singled out for distinction each month and honorable mention given others who risked their lives in the performance of duty.

In departing from its usual custom and making three awards THE TRIBUNE is not only recognizing exceptional acts of bravery and devotion to duty but feels it is performing a service to the community in ridding it of desperate characters.

Wanland's Battle to Death.

On Nov. 30 Policeman Wanland, while driving alone in a police car on Fullerton avenue near Kimball avenue, noticed two suspicious looking men. Calling one of the men to the car, he asked:

"Where are you going?"

"Up the street," was the reply.

"Where do you live?"

"On the northwest side."

Being suspicious, Wanland stepped to the curb and started to search the men. As he did so, one of them drew back, reached for his back pocket, and said to his partner:

"Give it to him, Frank. Croak him."

Kills One; Pursues Other.

The other man by this time had brought his gun into play and fired six shots at Wanland. Wanland drew his revolver as he backed up against the building and returned the fire. One of the men, later identified as Raymond Luby, wanted for several robberies, dropped to the pavement, shot through the heart. He died a few minutes later.

Wanland then started in pursuit of Luby's partner, but he escaped.

Detectives a few minutes later picked up two armed men who admitted they were to meet Luby and Halvorsen, his partner, but made their getaway when they saw the shooting.

Sutton's Partner Slain.

Policeman Sutton, with his partner, George W. Thompson, on the night of Nov. 14, followed two colored men on information that they were armed and had threatened to kill a woman. They caught up with them on 30th street near Dearborn street.

With revolvers drawn, after stating they were police officers, they ordered the men to hold up their hands.

Instead of replying one of the men, later identified as Floyd Battles, an ex-convict, drew his hand from his overcoat pocket and fired point blank at Sutton and Thompson. Thompson dropped, fatally wounded, and died a few minutes later on the way to the hospital.

Desperate Hand-to-Hand Fight.

The second man, who later said he was Claude Huddelston of Houston, Miss., moved out of the range of fire, got behind Sutton and jumped on him. Sutton managed to shake the gunman off, continuing to fire upon Battles. Three of Sutton's bullets took effect and Battles slumped to the ground fatally wounded.

Huddelston started to run. Sutton followed him, firing as he ran, and after a chase of nearly a half a mile through streets and alleys caught up with the fugitive. They grappled. Sutton's gun by this time had been emptied twice and he finally ended the conflict by knocking Huddelston on the head with the butt of his revolver.

A coroner's jury commended Sutton for his bravery and held Huddelston to the grand jury on a charge of murder.

Wounded, but Slays His Man.

Policeman Demitry Cal, off duty, early on the morning of Nov. 8, was halted on the doorsteps of his home at 1621 North Girard street, by the sound of pistol shots. Hurrying to the scene he found a man lying on the sidewalk with a bullet wound in his leg. The man said his assailant had taken refuge in a building at 1623 West North avenue.

Without calling for aid, Cal, with drawn revolver, entered the hallway. Despite the fact that it was dark, he started upstairs. A shot rang out and Cal felt a sting in his left arm. Although wounded, he went on.

As he reached the second floor landing three shots blazed in the darkness, one of them wounding Cal in the left side. He still went on.

By this time he brought his flashlight into play and focused it upon his assailant, five feet away. The ambushed gunman, later identified as William Dober, raised his gun to fire again when Cal started firing. Dober fell, fatally wounded, and died a few hours later.

REYMONT, NOBEL PRIZE WINNER FOR NOVEL, DIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Dec. 5.—Ladislas Reymont, famous Polish novelist, whose monumental work, "The Peasants," won him the Nobel prize in 1924 and huge success in America, died this morning.

M. Reymont was born in 1868 in what was then Russian Poland. One of a family of fourteen, he was brought up on a farm. He managed to go to school in Warsaw, gaining only an ordinary education, but he was well educated in life's school. As a young man he wandered a great deal, taking any kind of a job. Among other things he was an actor, monk, railway clerk, storekeeper, telegraph operator, and farmer.

When he was 26 M. Reymont found his real calling—writing. His first novel was published in 1894. He wrote twenty novels and many short stories and plays, of which a few have been translated into English, although they may be found in German, French and Swedish. His greatest work, however, was "The Peasants," which is divided into four parts—autumn, winter, spring, and summer. He began work on it in 1902 and finished it in 1906.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

More than 225,000 farmers and city visitors attended the International Live Stock exposition which closed last night with the horse show, exceeding by many thousands the attendance of any of the other twenty-five stock shows held in Chicago.

LABOR'S BILL TO SHARE PROFITS STIRS MEXICANS

Demands Workers Get More Rights.

Mexico City, Dec. 5.—(AP)—A feeling ranging from uncertainty and apprehension to positive alarm prevails among business leaders here, both Mexican and foreign, regarding the proposed new labor law, which, among other things, requires profit sharing with employés.

Fostered by organized labor, the bill has passed the chamber of deputies and is pending in the senate, where efforts are being made to modify it by amendments. The labor leaders demand its passage unamended, denying the charge made by some industrialists that it is unduly burdensome or unfair to the employers.

They say the Mexican workman has known extreme exploitation and miserable living conditions, and has been notoriously underpaid. Some improvements have been made since the revolution, they admit, but more reforms are needed, and the proposed law merely follows enlightened labor legislation in other countries.

Lets Workers Examine Books.

The bill, as passed by the chamber, empowers employés' committees to examine the books of their employers, ascertain earnings and profits, and fix the amount of profits to be divided among the workmen. It gives employers the option of declining this inspection, and, instead, paying a flat 10 per cent salary bonus to all employés.

It requires that 80 per cent of the employés of every concern be Mexicans, and stipulates an eight hour working day, with overtime payments. Workmen are to be compensated for injuries received during their work. Employers also must provide medicines and medical attention, pay hospital bills, and pay wages while the ill or injured employé is unable to work.

Sets Minimum Wage.

Employers are required to pay a minimum wage sufficient to provide the necessaries of life, with some money left for amusement purposes. Workmen's committees are to determine the exact minimum wage.

Employers must educate some of their workmen in technical colleges and large establishments must provide homes for a certain number of their employés.

300 Leave Tomorrow to Spend Xmas in Sweden

Three hundred Swedish-Americans will leave Chicago tomorrow at 11 a. m. to spend the Christmas holidays in Sweden. Their trip across the Atlantic will be made on a new motor ship built for the Swedish-American line in Germany. Friends of the travelers will see them off at the Dearborn station annex.

ASK FOR DELAY IN HALTING PARKING ON WABASH AVE.

Members of the Wabash District association, recently organized to promote business interests on Wabash avenue, yesterday asked delay in the enforcement of the Wabash avenue no parking order until the Association of Commerce has completed its traffic survey of Chicago, which includes the loop.

The members contended that abolition of parking on Wabash avenue was discriminating against business interests on that street. In a resolution adopted they agreed to be guided by whatever recommendations the Association of Commerce may make.

By agreement between E. J. Schoen, attorney for Lake street merchants, and First Assistant Corporation Counsel Leon Hornstein automobiles will be permitted to park on Lake street long enough to discharge and load passengers and deliver and unload parcels.

Twelve parking rule violators were fined $1 and costs.

Paris Suffers First Real Cold in Eight Years

PARIS, Dec. 5.—The first intense cold snap since the winter of 1917, when the United States entered the world war, hit Paris today. The freezing weather caused the cancellation of the steeplechase racing at Enghien.

The thermometer registered ten degrees below zero centigrade at sundown this afternoon, with more intense cold in the provinces, especially in eastern France.

40 DRAMATISTS JOIN TO BATTLE FOX 'MONOPOLY'

Plan Use of Strike for Play Protection.

New York, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Forty leading New York dramatists, composing the Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League of America, Inc., are considering applying for membership in the American Federation of Labor or taking some drastic action to forestall what they construe as an attempt on the part of William Fox, motion picture producer, to corner the New York play market.

A meeting of the playwrights last night was attended by Arthur Richman, Channing Pollock, Hartley Manners, Owen Davis, George Middleton, Rol Cooper Megrue, and other authors of like standing.

Ready to Sign Contracts.

Maurice Revnes, production manager of the William Fox corporation, admitted that Fox representatives have approached New York's leading producers and that "contracts are about to be signed."

As explained by Mr. Revnes, the negotiations have the following features:

Mr. Fox agrees to finance a producer. He gets his share of the profit and reserves the right to pass upon the play before it is purchased. He also, of course, has the opportunity to bid against other producers for the motion picture rights.

Writers Want Competition.

Fox spokesmen insisted that the action is considered because the Fox company finds it impossible to get a sufficient number of stage hits for filming each year, and that, by financing producers of stage plays, Mr. Fox hopes to have a greater number of plays from which to choose.

The dramatists charge that the arrangement would eliminate competition when the motion picture rights to plays were up for sale. They feel that with the leading New York producers working in a combination, the field for marketing their plays would be greatly restricted.

Comparatively few plays are adapted for the screen, they assert, and such an agreement would force them to write plays with a view toward their ultimate adoption for the screen.

In addition there is the fear that Fox would run a play on the stage just long enough to fulfill the terms of the standard contract—fifty performances—then take it off the stage for screen adaptation.

PUBLIC SERVICE WANTS TO BUY CITY LIGHT FIRM

Permission to purchase the properties of the Chicago Suburban Power and Light company and to extend its super power electric light and power facilities to the communities now served for the former company is asked in a petition filed yesterday by the Public Service Company of Illinois with the Illinois commerce commission.

Coincident with the filing of the petition the public service company made it known that in case the state commerce commission approves the plan the company officials will start a large construction program in the communities served.

These communities will include West Chicago, Winfield, Villa Park, Westmore, Wayne, and High Lake, Batavia, Geneva, St. Charles, and Lombard, as well as the territory adjacent to them.

INDIANA SOCIETY LEARNS SECRET PLANS OF EUROPE

Many crowned and uncrowned heads of Europe were visited by Capt. Norman Allan Imbrie of Culver Military academy, chief speaker at the banquet of the Indiana society last night in the gold room of the Congress hotel. Introduced as a special observer and secret ambassador, he interviewed the rulers on economics being effected in Europe which could be put into effect at the banquet of the society. Real measures of economy were revealed.

Mussolini confided to Imbrie his ambition to harness the energy of Vesuvius for the operation of all the power plants of Italy.

From Trotsky Capt. Imbrie learned of the great economic retreat from 90 per cent communism to the sort of Volsteadian capitalism that now prevails in Russia.

Edward, Prince of Wales, revealed to the captain the true cause of his frequent descents from horseback when he said that riding breeches were so expensive that he tried to make them last longer by spending as little time as possible in the saddle.

Carries Official Advice.

Coolidge and Mellon, declared Imbrie, had commissioned him to assure the budget economy commission of the Indiana Society of their determination to rid the members of the enormous income tax load they are now carrying.

Cartoons by John T. McCutcheon of THE TRIBUNE, and a former Hoosier, were thrown on a screen. They were followed by George Ade, noted humorist, who introduced the speakers.

Dinner was served to the society by girls dressed to represent leading members of the foreign nobility.

Among those at the dinner were: Gov. Ed Jackson, George Ade, former Gov. Winfield T. Durbin, and former Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky, ex-Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, Federal Judge Albert Anderson, William A. Heath, and Congressman Fred Burnell.

3,000 BANKERS PLAN GALA DANCE AND A CHARLESTON CONTEST

WM. APPLEGATE.

The Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Banking, the educational arm of the American Bankers' association, will hold its annual dance at the Hotel La Salle Tuesday night, according to an announcement yesterday from William Applegate, president of the chapter.

There will be a contest in the latest dance craze, the Charleston. There are 3,000 members of the local chapter and plans for an elaborate affair are being made.

KEY TO PATTEN HOME STOLEN AT LECTURE; FOUND

A key to the home of James A. Patten, millionaire wheat trader, and a woman whose name the police withheld, who said she was a house guest of the Pattens, created a flurry in Evanston yesterday.

The woman reported to the police her purse, containing the key and a diamond brooch, was stolen while she was attending a lecture at Northwestern university Thursday night. The purse, with only the key left in it, was found the following day near the coast guard station on the campus.

The police yesterday refused to say who found the purse. Servants at the Patten home, Ridge and Greenleaf avenues, Evanston, also refused to discuss either the woman or the story of the theft.

YOUR first thought about Christmas buying probably doesn't turn to a furniture store. It might not be a bad idea, at that. But your second thought might bring a realization that the best sort of a Christmas gift is something somebody really wants; and the next thought might well be—"Give something he'll have to buy for himself (or herself) eventually."

It's rather a nice idea to take the needed thing, the thing not only wanted, but that will have to be had anyway, and give it the charm and flavor and joy of the Christmas spirit.

The easy chair so much needed for the living room; the comfortable davenport; the writing table; the nest of tables; the lamp; the humidor for his cigars; the book-ends; even the larger things, such as a dining-room or bedroom suite; any of these can be touched with so much of the Christmas flavor that the fact of their being badly needed, the fact that "we're going to buy them anyway" will be lost sight of.

Whatever is bought in this store is "Scholle-quality"; satisfaction guaranteed or money back. If anything bought here is duplicated, or if the reciver of the gift would rather have something else, bring ours back, exchange it fr other goods, or for the money.

Satisfaction is one of the things we want our customers to get hre.

When You Visit Scholle's

You will see many attractive things for Christmas. We list a few of them.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Public regulation of the anthracite industry is looming up as an issue in the coming session of congress due to the prolongation of the hard coal strike. It brings into high relief the recommendations of the United States coal commission in 1923 that anthracite, being a limited natural monopoly, ought to be regarded as a public utility and regulated.

Senator Borah's bill already is drawing criticism on the ground it would put government into business. The New York chamber of commerce declared it a "most dangerous" measure, radical and drastic. But to some extent the Borah bill is an embodiment of some of the suggestions of the coal commission, which had John Hays Hammond for chairman and five conservative members.

U. S. Investigators' Work Lost.

What happened to the coal commission is a fine illustration of the lack of continuity in dealing with the fuel situation with its vicious circle of periodic strikes, walkouts, lockouts, shortages and price boostings. Back in 1922, when the commission was created as the aftermath of a strike, it was hailed as the coming of a millennium in coal. The commission hired many experts and spent $600,000 in preparing a report. It submitted its findings in 1923. Nothing was done in congress towards carrying on tthe recommendations. No provision was made for continuing the fact finding work. Today, after spending $600,000, all we've got is a report in five volumes with its figures three or four years old.

The first suggestion of the commission was that anthracite should be treated on the principle of maximum service to the public rather than maximum profit to the owners. The report is being widely studied in the present controversy.

"It is clear," says the report, "that in the operation of coal mines the public interest must be respected and served, and that this requirement places limitations on the rights of owners of coal lands, operators, mine workers, carriers, and dealers.

Free Competition Impossible.

"The commission believes that the public interest may be adequately safeguarded by the creation of a governmental authority with power to require financial and operating reports, to prescribe uniform methods of cost accounting and to determine the conditions under which coal may be shipped in interstate commerce."

The commission based its suggestions on the fact that anthracite is a natural monopoly in which there can be no "free competition because the supply is limited and controlled." The deposits are in eastern Pennsylvania, within an area of some 500 square miles. Eight large companies affiliated to some extent with the anthracite carrying railroads produce 74 per cent of the annual output and control 90 per cent of the unmined coal.

"The fundamental evil in the anthracite industry is that of monopoly," says the commission, "the treatment of limited natural resources as if they were like other private property. Reliance on competition without supervision has resulted in the persistence of a permanent level of high prices, above which extortionate increases were made whenever a suspension of mining or other disturbances gave rise to the phenomenon of premium coal."

On margins and profits it remarks: "Limitation of margins to reasonable returns on legitimate investment and the elimination of monopoly profits, whether in the form of royalties, operators' and dealers' margins, or freight rates, are perfectly reasonable demands of the public."

The commission's view was that the main remedy against extortionate prices lies in the consumer's readiness to resort to substitutes.

U. S. WAR FORCES IMPOTENT, SAYS SECRETARY DAVIS

Report to President Asks More Men and Money.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Calling attention to a rapid deterioration of the country's $700,000,000 war plant and an inadequate condition of strategic defenses, Secretary of War Davis today, in his annual report to the President, urged the adoption of a ten year program for strengthening the army.

Striking straight from the shoulder in discussing the policy of economy in connection with the handling of the property of the war department, Mr. Davis declared that the appropriations allowed the army for maintenance of its material during the last few years have been so small that the plant is running down at the expense of true economy. He declared that neglect of material had cost the army $40,000,000 in the last three years and that if continued it would result in the wiping out of a large portion of the army plant now valued, exclusive of real estate, at $708,140,000.

Says Army Is Too Small.

The secretary did not mince words in discussing the state of the nation's defenses. He told the President that he had made a thorough inventory of our whole defense system as it applies to the army and had found the personnel of the army too small even to take care of the demands of the civilian components of our national defense as provided for in the national defense act of 1920. He said the harbor defenses of the United States were inadequate.

The secretary declared that the air service was insufficient; that more men and more armament were needed at both the Panama canal zone and in the Hawaiian islands to make them safe against attack, and that housing condition in the army were terrible and millions of dollars worth of property and thousands of lives were daily imperiled because of neglect in voting appropriations to better housing conditions and care for material.

Short on Ammunition.

The secretary asserted that our ammunition supply was far too small and that the National Guard should be increased if it is to carry out its mission imposed under the national defense act.

If his program meets with executive and congressional approval, Secretary Davis would, within the next ten years, build up the National Guard to 250,000, increase the size of the regular army; build up the ammunition reserve to the point where it would support two field armies of 1,000,000 men for one year; bolster up the organized reserves; repair past neglect of army material and maintain it economically, and complete the harbor defenses of the country, the defenses in the Panama canal zone and in the Hawaiian islands.

Army Desertions Numerous.

"The situation in the regular army is very serious," Secretary Davis said. "The rate of desertions remains at a high and discouraging percentage. Over 40,000 troops are at present quartered in wooden war time barracks, and no graver problem faces the war department today than that of providing adequate shelter for these men. Almost without exception, in all such quarters, the timber has shrunk, the underpinnings rotted, and the roofs require repairs after every storm.

"Temporary war time barracks have resulted in severe fire losses. The wooden buildings today are mere tinder boxes, and a harrowing loss of human life might ensue as the result by the burning of one of these buildings, especially as many are used for hospitals."

Discussing the ammunition reserve, Mr. Davis declared that the question of an adequate ammunition reserve could no longer be deferred.

"Men can be mobilized," he said, "but unless they can be furnished with the means to do battle, to thrust them into the vortex of modern war is to offer them as mere sacrifices on the altar of unpreparedness."

DEVER TAKES UP ARMS FOR HOLLOW TILE

Brick Men Fight Change in Building Code.

Mayor Dever yesterday renewed his fight for revision of the building code to permit the use of hollow tile as well as brick for retaining walls in building construction.

In a conference in his office he asked for the immediate passage of an ordinance shelved last June by the council committee on buildings and zoning which would permit the use of tile as well as brick in building.

Nine members of the committee, Aldermen O'Toole [14th], chairman; Powers [25th], Smith [32d], Fick [20th] Toman [23d], Pontow [50th], Jensen [40th], Jackson [3d], and Wilson [11th], were present.

Dever Backs Measure.

Just what occurred in the conference is not known, but loud voices were heard from time to time. The mayor was frank in saying that he had advised the committee that he wanted the measure recommended for passage without delay.

"I told the committee that this matter had been hanging fire long enough and the people of Chicago ought to be given a chance to use tile. Our building code should be amended immediately so as to permit its use and that of hold public hearings and invite tile, other materials as well as brick."

The committee suggested that they, brick, and other material manufacturers to advise them and then draft an amendment that would satisfy all. The committee promised action in four weeks.

Brick Men Fight Change.

The brick manufacturers for years have been fighting the amendment to the building code that permits the use of hollow tile. They say tile cannot carry the load and is unsafe.

Opposed to their arguments the bureau of standards approve its use. The tile interests charge the brickmakers' opposition is due to the fact that use of tile would cut down the brick consumption.

The thirteen aldermen who last spring voted originally to recommend passage, only to reconsider two weeks later, voted solidly to shelve the revision until this fall. Only Ald. A. J. Horan [29th] stood with the mayor and voted for immediate passage.

Mayor Dever yesterday said it was time to call a halt and the conference was the result. The committee will hold its first meeting tomorrow morning.

To Chicagoans of Good Income:

suggesting a superlative Christmas gift

Louis XV Period Model—FISCHER GRAND

Louis XVI Period Model—FISCHER-AMPICO GRAND

THIS is a straightforward discussion of something which every man has dreamed. To those men, year after year, has come the thought . . . . "Some day I'll be in a position to give her a truly royal Christmas gift—something immeasurably beyond what I'm able to do at this time."

Perhaps there are 5,000 Chicagoans who could actually make that dream come true, this Christmas. Perhaps 10,000.

To these men—who have good incomes, and who still have the unfulfilled wish—here is a suggestion:

* * * *

On Michigan Boulevard, just south of the Boulevard Bridge, you will find an exhibition of beautiful pianos.

People prominent in Chicago—social, financial, artistic and intellectual leaders—come to these studios for instruments worthy of distinguished homes.

Culture, talent, wealth—that will not even consider the ordinary—have thus established this a headquarters.

* * * *

Here you will find all that human genius, so far, has been able to put into musical instruments of the kind.

Bring a great musician with you, and he will find perfection of tone and playing ease fit for the most exacting concert performance.

Bring with you an authority on furnishings—and he will find instruments designed and finished flawlessly in the most noteworthy historic periods, as well as in the modern modes. Fitting additions, as he would tell you, to the most magnificently furnished rooms, in whatever style or period.

These are not suppositions. Such opinions have been given, many times.

For Your Christmas

Here you could spend $10,000—or $1,000—and make a gift that really merits the word "superlative." Deep in your heart you know who deserves just such a gift. You know . . too . . how it would be received.

You now have a piano. You will use it till you can imagine how much pleasure there would be in such a new one; how much the beauty of that room would be accentuated. Your old instrument becomes part of the initial payment . . . and the balance is most conveniently extended.

It is really a question of whether one is to wait still another year—for this "Christmas of a lifetime"—with the dream perhaps growing a bit less distinct.

Note this list of beautiful piano gifts your money will buy here. The period models referred to embrace Louis XV, Louis XVI, William and Mary, Italian Renaissance, Hepplewhite, Sheraton, Georgian, Early American or Colonial.

Exquisite Tone

The true superiority of the KNABE Piano is discovered in its ravishingly beautiful tone. One hundred and thirty-four of the world's greatest musicians have chosen the KNABE Piano for their concert performances and homes. (Complete list sent upon request.) Such endorsement is the earned reward of the KNABE'S eighty-eight years of uninterrupted tonal supremacy.

The Fischer Piano is second only to the Knabe, the slight shade of difference being indicated in a comparison of prices. The Fischer tone is superb, the designing harmonious and very beautiful.

To these master works are now added the magic of the re-enacting AMPICO. Simply by touching a button you call forth the genius of the world's greatest masters of music. The AMPICO catalog of available recordings list three hundred fifty-one pages of classical and popular selections, played by such world-famous artists as are named here.

* * * *

In a 15-minute visit, some day soon, you will discover much that cannot be told here. Or you can have—at home or office—information considerably more detailed than space here permits. The coupon, at right, brings this to you. And Christmas is not so far away—as you are reminded on every hand.

PHYSICIANS ASK SMALL TO ACT IN MILK CRISIS

Want Executive to Take Stand for Eradication.

Twenty-four leading physicians of Chicago yesterday entered the pure milk controversy in a letter to Gov. Len Small in which the executive is urged to take an out and out stand for the eradication of tubercular cows throughout the state.

In another statement officials of the Illinois Agricultural association denounced the "misled minority" of dairymen who oppose the tuberculin test and challenged the charge of nonprogressiveness against the state made by Dr. Oscar Dowling of Louisiana, declaring that Illinois stands second as to the number of tested herds.

Outline Stand on Injunction.

Meanwhile Corporation Counsel Busch is expected to outline within a few days the official attitude of the city toward the Kane county injunction prohibiting Health Commissioner Bundesen from regulating Chicago's milk supply.

The Shurtleff act, by enjoining any Illinois community from insisting upon milk tests, has made of the state a dumping ground for infected cattle, according to the statement of the doctors, headed by Dr. Morris Fishbein, of the American Medical association.

As a result, at least 80 per cent of the cows in McHenry county alone, the source of one-fourth of Chicago's milk supply, are known to be tuberculous, it is declared.

Basic Food Needs Protection.

"Recognizing that milk is one of the most complete foods that a human can have, and that it forms the basic part of practically all human diets, no safeguards can be considered ass too efficient," says the statement.

"Tuberculin testing of cattle is a necessity if the milk supply is to be guarded from overwhelming numbers of living tubercule bacilli. Tubercular cows are a menace to all the other live stock, hogs particularly.

"Milk distributors are willing to cooperate to secure pure milk, even at financial loss; and a large number of the dairymen are also ready to cooperate. But in a considerable number of instances, as expressed by the proceedings for the injunction against the health commissioner, there is unwillingness to aid in this work.

"A part of the opposition apparently comes from the fact that dairymen, particularly in severely infected territory, such as McHenry county, doubt that funds, voted to reimburse losses because of destroyed cattle, are available.

Hope for Statement.

A statement from the governor to the effect that he and his administration are ready to coöperate in establishing this life saving principle, which, in the end, must redound also to the economic benefit of the state, would be a welcome message to the citizens of Chicago.

"We hope this statement will be speedily forthcoming."

Besides Dr. Fishbein, the statement was signed by Drs. Frank Billings, Ludvig Hektoen, David J. Davis, Thomas R. Crowder, E. C. Jordan, E. R. LeCount, Olis West, William A. Pusey, James P. Simonds, George B. Weaver, Clifford O. Grules, Joseph B. DeLee, Arthur J. Cramp, B. Gideon Wells, Joseph L. Miller, Oscar T. Schultz, William F. Peterson, Josiah J. Moore, Daniel N. Eisendrath, Ernest E. Irons, John M. Dodson, Bernard Fantus, James A. Britton, and Nathan S. Davis III.

"No state has a more progressive, business-like or more resultful tuberculosis eradication program than has Illinois," declared the agricultural association statement.

"This program is based on coöperation with the federal government, the state agricultural department, the county and the dairyman himself. Over 60 per cent of our milk cows have been tested and are under state and federal supervision, a percentage that rates Illinois near the top with other states.

"Thirty-four Illinois counties were testing on the coöperative area plan on Dec. 1, 1923," continues the statement. "Twenty-four more began in 1924, and now 67 counties are included in the tubercular eradication program. In thirteen of these counties the program is 96 per cent accomplished, and are on the threshold of being declared 'accredited counties.'"

750,000 Under Supervision.

"Only one state, New York, has more tested herds than has Illinois. Illinois has over 750,000 cattle under state and federal supervision, only two states, Iowa and Wisconsin, exceeding her.

The producers may seek a conference early in the week with Dr. Bundesen and representatives of the retailers in an attempt to bring the fight to a peaceable end, it was intimated yesterday.

"The dairymen want to give Chicago the kind of milk Chicago wants," declared Weymouth Kirkland, their counsel. "But many of these farmers have their last dollar tied up in cattle, and in addition perhaps have used them as collateral with banks. Slaughtering of the herds would mean worse than bankruptcy. It would mean tragedy."

DEANS OF WOMEN HOLD CONVENTION

WOMEN'S CHARM FADES IN SMOKE, DEANS ARE TOLD

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

There isn't a man in existence, Dr. Lena K. Sadler believes, who isn't disappointed when he sees a woman for whom he cares anything, smoke a cigaret.

That is one of the three arguments against a woman's smoking which Dr. Sadler gave yesterday afternoon at the closing session of the 6th annual meeting of the Association of Deans of Women in Illinois, held at the University of Chicago.

The Rest of Argument.

The other two-thirds of the argument, as the doctor outlined it, is this:

A girl is an inspiration to young men and should set a good example.

Smoking, by women, is the loss of a subtle sex appeal to men.

Discussing three factors in the life of the modern youth: sex instruction, the chaperone and petting parties, Dr. Sadler had this to say:

"I advocate the teaching of sex hygiene through courses in physiology in high school, college and university.

"The chaperone, is she dead or alive? And if she is dead, should she be interred or revived? I believe she should be revived until the young people can be properly educated and restrained. I believe in sensible, sympathetic chaperonage.

"'Petting parties' is only a new name for an old game. It means much more than a gentleman putting his arm around a girl."

At the morning session, Dr. William S. Sadler, Chicago nerve specialist, pointed out that by the time a child is fourteen years old there really isn't much to do for him, mentally. When the child enters first grade his training already is almost completed, the neurologist maintained, and about all even the most zealous educator can do is to patch up the results or lack of results achieved by the parents.

Calls Fear Dangerous.

Fear, sex and religion, Dr. Sadler declared, as the basis for most of youth's physical ailments.

"An hereditary fear," he asserted, "plus a college education, plus a chronic worry, equals a nervous breakdown."

Overwork and overstudy, the doctor told the deans, never did cause a breakdown, and probably never would. It's the monotony of emotions that turns the trick.

When it comes to work he stressed the old copybook axiom: like your job; learn to like your job, or get another one. Sleep, he believes, rests the muscles, but doesn't rest the nerves.

Amazing! Startling! Unbelievable!

Yet absolutely true!

Super-cut DIAMONDS

©O & E 1925

We occupy almost the entire 4th floor in the REPUBLIC BUILDING 209 South State Street

Something Entirely New!

OUR reputation stands squarely behind this wonderful proposition. It may be hard to believe, but it's absolutely based upon "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth." We have over 18 years of honorable business dealing to our credit and we're not going to say or do anything to discredit our established reputation.

Something new and unheard of has been accomplished with diamonds and we are the first institution in Chicago to tell you about it and give you the opportunity to benefit.

For many years diamonds have been cut by a certain geometrical formula accepted as the best to secure the most brilliancy without detracting from the scintillation and with the least waste of the rough stone. Rough diamonds, as you know, are ugly and dull, and their beauty of color and of brilliancy is not brought out until they are cut and polished. If a diamond is cut too thick it loses a lot of its possible brilliancy, as well as surface-size. If cut too shallow it likewise loses its brilliancy and then, too, develops a weak, lusterless center called a "fish-eye". Therefore, to cut diamonds "just right," a happy medium method was followed to get the most and best out of the rough stone. For these many years everybody thought a "just right" standard had been found, which was accepted as such.

But now comes one of the oldest and biggest and most reliable diamond-cutting establishments and proves that the so-called "best method" was not the "best" after all. By dint of scientific application, covering many years, they discovered a new and better way of cutting diamonds, now called "the super-cut method." By virtue of this entirely new and successful method they

—and lose none of the possible brilliancy and scintillation

Just think what that means! 25% more surface-size; the same material, the same weight; the same or more brilliancy and scintillation, and at a lower price.

Of course that requires new measurements, new instruments, new knowledge, newly trained experts and a new order of things. Only one establishment in this country is putting out these wonderful "super-cut" diamonds but, of course, their output is necessarily limited.

They Came To Us,
We Saw, And They Won Us Over

And you, too, will be convinced the minute you see these "super-cut" diamonds and make comparisons.

We are pleased to give you a convincing demonstration! We will lay the old style and a "super-cut" diamond side by side; weigh them before your eyes and then let you judge which is the better. You will choose the "super-cut," every time.

Isn't that the most interesting and best news you have heard of for many a day? Remember, as yet, the output is very limited, and in Chicago only one or two of the largest jewelers have these "super-cut" diamonds and then only in small quantities compared to the large stock we have on hand. Better get yours without delay.

We are the only CREDIT-JEWELERS in Chicago who have "super-cut" diamonds.

Come and investigate and be convinced!
Prices Range from $125 to $1250

The sizes of the DIAMONDS and their wonderful spread, color, brilliancy and scintillation will speak for themselves

OPEN TODAY (Sunday) for Demonstration

WORLD'S BIG OIL MEN BEHIND WAR FOR MOSUL RULE

League to Decide Turk and British Row.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, British secretary of foreign affairs, left London this morning for Geneva to attend a session of the council of the league of nations. With him is L. S. Amery, colonial secretary, who will also represent Great Britain at the session. Both are ready for the great oil struggle which is to be staged there.

The council must give its decision at this meeting on the Mosul boundary, and on that decision rests, not peace or war, for few believe the Turks are doing anything more than bluffing when they talk of fighting, but which of the great oil groups is to control the Mosul fields.

Standard Oil May Get Share.

There is one group in Europe headed by Sir Henri Deterding of the Shell-Royal Dutch combine and another by Lord Inverforth, British business peer. If Great Britain secures control of the Mosul fields the Deterding group wins. His group controls the Turkish Petroleum company, whose claims to the Mosul fields are recognized by the British government and which is owned jointly by British, French, and Belgians.

The Standard Oil company has a call on 25 per cent of the shares, and the Germans were promised shares as a result of the Locarno treaty.

If the Turks get control of the fields presumably the Inverforth group will win, for they have secured some of the recent Turkish concessions. This influence is seen behind the raging campaign against the British policy in Mosul, which is now going on in a part of the British press.

U. S. Government Eyes Struggle.

The position of the Standard Oil company, and incidentally of the American government, in the matter is interesting. When the oil under the ownership of the Turkish Petroleum company, which was seized from the Germans during the war, was divided, the Standard Oil company made a claim for a share. After considerable negotiations, the American company was allotted 25 per cent, and it was supposed that it had taken up the allotment.

A few weeks ago the public was surprised to learn that the Standard Oil company had not taken this up and its share was still held by the Anglo-Persian Oil company. I now learn that the reason the Standard Oil company failed to take up this allotment was the intervention of the state department at Washington, which told the Standard Oil company that it considered the Turkish Petroleum's claims invalidated by the Chester concessions.

Chester Concessions a Mystery.

The Chester concessions have been one of the mysteries of the near eastern situation for years. It has been cropping up whenever an attempt was made to divide the oil fields of the former Turkish empire, but they have never reached a stage of working or producing oil.

Turkey thinks British opinion is against any fight over Mosul and that the British government will not dare to resist their claim if it is pressed hard enough. It will be one of Chamberlain's tasks at Geneva to convince the Turks that the British government means business if it renews the Irak mandate and to convince them also that France and Great Britain have a firm agreement for a united front in the near east.

Turkish Representatives Arrive.

GENEVA, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Tewfik Rushdi Bey, Turkish foreign minister, and three assistants arrived at Geneva today to defend Turkey's position in the Mosul controversy before the league of nations council, which will begin its sitting on this question Monday.

LEAGUE INJECTS U. S. ANGLE INTO ARMS CUT TALK

Blockades and Navy Limits Come Up.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Supplementary information from French sources concerning the discussions of the league of nations council's subcommittee on disarmament, now meeting in Geneva, reveals the enormous importance of the questions under discussion, particularly those affecting the United States indirectly.

The subject of a blockade under Article 16 of the covenant of the league brings up all the claims and contentions of the United States against the allies—particularly Great Britain—during the early part of the war before America joined.

Talk Naval Limits.

The employment of submarines, aircraft carriers, and the limitation of the size of the navies of the smaller powers not included in the Washington conference in 1921 compose another important phase under consideration, as well as the use of asphyxiating gas, economic blockades, and extremely long range artillery like the "Big Berthas" which bombarded Paris. Rules concerning territorial waters and neutrality will also be discussed.

In fact, an examination of the various questions on the agenda indicates that the very discussions and decisions of the forthcoming disarmament conference will go a long way toward "codifying international law," insofar as war is concerned, in which Senator Borah is demanding that the United States take the initiative.

Study Arms Cut Plans.

The Geneva subcommittee now is studying three plans proposed by Great Britain, France, and Spain, as the bases for a reduction of armaments conference. Paul Boncour of France and Lord Robert Cecil of England will try to formulate a single draft from the three.

The knottiest problem that has thus far appeared in Geneva is a proportional schedule allotting the size of armies of the powers during peace times, taking into consideration the potential ability of each state to augment its forces and munitions during war times.

League to Invite U. S.

GENEVA, Dec. 5.—(AP)—If the council of the league of nations follows the views expressed by the league's disarmament council, Argentina and Chile, like the United States and Russia, will be invited to sit officially on the special commission preparing for the proposed disarmament conference.

The disarmament council, which met today, did not succeed in concluding its labors, as difficulties arose over the common test of the program of study which will be placed before the new preparatory body. Great Britain and France differ, but various members said after the meeting that a joint program would undoubtedly be found Monday.

Great Britain favors making the agenda more elastic and less specific than the French.

DIES OF TRAIN INJURIES.

John Ruzella, 50, of 557 West Thirteenth street, died at the County hospital of a fracture of the skull and the amputation of his right leg after he was struck by a Pere Marquette railroad train while picking up coal on the tracks of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, Friday.

GERMAN CABINET OUT; HINDENBURG SEEKS MINISTRY

Luther's Bills Put to Reichstag.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—Chancellor Luther, tendering the unanimous resignation of his cabinet to President von Hindenburg today, was asked to carry on the governmental business until a new cabinet was formed. Following the German republican constitution, President von Hindenburg will confer with the leaders of Germany's strongest party, the socialists, as prescribed by the constitution, before choosing the new man to form a cabinet.

Tomorrow morning President Loebe of the reichstag, who has just returned from a trip to America, will confer with President von Hindenburg and submit the suggestions of his party leaders in parliament. On Monday President von Hindenburg will call the Democrats and other party leaders, but it is believed no definite decision is likely until Tuesday.

Call Socialist Parley.

The socialists entered a party caucus today to draw up a program of the condition on which they would be willing to join the cabinet or grant it their silent support. They are not willing to work with Herr Stresemann's People's party.

Chancellor Luther has conferred with many high officials to induce them to accept posts as ministers.

Propose Price Cuts.

Before resigning the government published the text of a series of new laws it is submitting to the reichstag national council for immediate discussion in an effort to cut prices in Germany. An anti-trust law, bankruptcy law, and reduction in the rates of interest on government money are the main features. Herr Luther also has insisted that the next cabinet support the provisions of the Locarno treaties.

POLICE SEARCH FOR LOST BOY.

The police were asked last night to search for Louis Berman, 14 years old, 1350 South Avers avenue, who disappeared from his home early yesterday.

BOYS ORGANIZE POLICE FORCE TO CURB AUTO TOLL

Will Watch for Speed Law Violations.

Alarmed at the slaughter of boys by automobiles, more than 400 youths, members of the Boys' Brotherhood republic, yesterday organized an unofficial police force and will attempt to curb motor accidents.

Every one of the boys will be on the lookout for infractions of the speed laws, according to Supt. Jack Robbins. They will note the number of the automobile caught breaking a law and determine the owner. Then a deputation of boys will visit the driver and ask him to drive carefully.

Manager Is Injured.

The boys adopted the plan of their own accord after their business manager, Al Turner, 16 years old, 1106 Independence boulevard, had been knocked down Friday and probably fatally injured. Last Nov. 6 another member of the republic was killed by an automobile.

One fatal accident was reported in Cook county yesterday. The motor death toll for the year is now 734.

An unidentified woman, about 20 years old, died at the Keystone hospital last night after she was struck by an automobile in Elmwood. Edward Cowin, 4420 North Menard avenue, the driver, was held by the Cragin police.

Killed in Gary.

Virgil Oatout, 18 years old, 1563 Roosevelt street, Gary, was fatally injured when the delivery truck he was driving was demolished by a South Shore Electric train at Third and Tyler streets, Gary.

Passengers in a crowded west bound 47th street surface car were shaken and bruised when the car collided with a heavy motor truck. The front end of the car was caved in, but no one was seriously hurt. E. C. Delant, 37 years old, 4100 South Western avenue, was driver of the truck.

HANDS OF DEATH

The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1. Yesterday was the three hundred and thirty-ninth day of 1925.

THE ART OF GIFT-MAKING

The true gift is flavored with the thoughtfulness of the giver. A gift should delicately convey a sympathetic understanding of the friend's preferences, and a due regard for them. Time and nice judgment are required to make a true gift. Writing a check, even though it be in several figures, often leaves the recipient cold. It reveals laziness and indifference. Real friends are worthy of true gifts, into which you put a bit of your own personality, and express theirs.

SCOFFS AT PERIL IN AIR ATTACK ACROSS OCEAN

Mitchell Trial Witness Tells Need of Navy.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The flight of the around-the-world flyers did not prove that a cloud of airplanes could sweep on their own power across the Atlantic from European outposts and attack this country.

On the contrary, it proved to Lieutenant Commander Bruce Leighton, who was scouting in the North sea for the world flyers, that such a feat could not be accomplished.

"But," he told the judges to the Mitchell court martial today, "if the enemy country had airplane carriers, and if those carriers were properly protected by a fleet, such an attack would be feasible."

Controverts Mitchell.

The lieutenant commander was called to testify regarding Col. Mitchell's charge that all that the Richmond's officers and crew succeeded in doing for World Flyer Leigh Wade when he came to grief in the North sea was "to smash his plane when it was turned over to them by the fishermen."

The witness said the colonel's statement was untrue in that it was "elements," with which the Richmond was not equipped to contend, that did the damage.

In his cross-examination of the witness, Representative Reid, senior counsel for the defense, leaped upon that admission and gave the sailor an uncomfortable half hour.

Did Best They Could.

In reply to Reid's question, "Were you prepared to help the world flyers if their planes stranded?" the witness admitted that the Richmond was to do "the best she could"; that she was not "prepared for a salvage job" of the extent of the one she undertook to perform, that the Richmond's hoisting gear was for handling planes weighing 2,500 pounds each, whereas Wade's plane weighed twice as much, and that to have gone to the expense of making the gear strong enough for this particular job of salvaging would have been "utterly foolish."

Admiral Edward Walter Eberle, chief of the bureau of naval operations, was today's only other witness. He was hearty in his admissions that the holding of state fairs in early September was a factor in determining the dates for the airship Shenandoah's appearance in the middle west.

Over and over again the admiral told the court that Commander Lansdowne had not protested against the trip as scheduled—"requested no change in the schedule as finally approved . . . told me and others he was satisfied to make the trip on Sept. 2."

Singers at Benefit

Juror Wins 11 Others to Guilty Murder Verdict

One juror, after thirty-seven hours, finally persuaded his eleven comrades that they were wrong in their determination to acquit George Snow and Arthur Mason, colored, charged with the murder of Adam Davis, also colored, before Judge John P. McGoorty in the Criminal court. From the start of deliberations Thursday night it was reported that the jury stood 11 to 1, and sometimes 10 to 2, for acquittal.

Shortly after noon yesterday a verdict of guilty was announced. Punishment was fixed at 14 years for each defendant. A motion for a new trial was set for hearing Saturday.

ALLA NAZIMOVA BITTERLY TELLS OF BLASTED LOVE

14 Years Unwed Wife of Bryant, She Admits.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 5.—[United Press.]—As moving a love story as Alla Nazimova, noted Russian actress, ever portrayed upon the stage or screen is revealed today in a story published by the Hartford Courant.

Charles Bryant, formerly Mme. Nazimova's leading man, and who was believed by the world for fourteen years to be her husband, was recently married at New Milford to Miss Marjorie Gilhooley. In response to the usual questions, Bryant swore it was his first marriage.

Married to Russian.

In the dramatic interview published by the Courant, Mme. Nazimova declared this statement true. The man with whom Mme. Nazimova lived for fourteen years was not her husband. The actress, according to the story, was married years ago to a Russian. Coming to America as an actress, she met Bryant, who became her leading man. The world accepted them as man and wife.

The purpose of one of Mme. Nazimova's recent visits to Europe was to obtain a divorce decree, that she might be free to marry Bryant. Then came word of the marriage of Bryant and Miss Gilhooley.

"All that has happened since Bryant was married the other day has greatly hurt me," Nazimova declared. "I have been living at the top of a volcano. I am worried to death. For the last several days I have been hunted like an animal of the woods."

Actress Is Bitter.

When asked if she did not think it would be better to place the entire situation before the public just as it is, she answered, "Better for Bryant."

When the interviewer said that it would place Bryant in a better position before the world, the actress snapped, "Bryant can look out for himself."

"Wouldn't it also be best for Mme. Nazimova?" she was asked.

"What more can happen to Mme. Nazimova?" the star replied.

Nazimova admitted that she knew of the affair between Bryant and Miss Gilhooley sometime before the two were married and said that she had only hopes of happiness for them.

The story leaked out when Bryant was threatened with prosecution for perjury, because it was thought his statement that his marriage to Miss Gilhooley would be his first, was a variance with his supposed marriage to Nazimova, but Bryant's counsel presented the facts to the New Milford authorities and Nazimova admits they were true.

ITALIANS CHEER 'GREAT AMERICA' FOR DEBT PACT

Mussolini Asks Chamber to Approve Deal.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, Dec. 5.—The chamber of deputies today, on the occasion of the formal reception to Count Volpi's mission and the presentation of a bill ratifying the Washington debt agreement, stood and enthusiastically applauded for one minute "the very great, young people of America."

"I pay homage to the conqueror who overcame difficulties running into figures belonging in astronomy, 50,000,000,000, [the Italian debt to America amounted to about 50,000,000,000 paper lire], but these figures are opening a new chapter in this history of Italy," Premier Mussolini said. He declared the members of the debt mission had accomplished their objective with "dignity, energy, speed, clarity and sincerity."

"The Americans are a great people," Sig. Mussolini said, "and their system is sufficiently severe despite the statue of Liberty in New York harbor, as to present rigorous control over the interior. When facing Italy the mutual sympathy necessary for a speedy settlement was discovered.

Friendship With U. S. Established.

"Between us, the oldest people of Europe, who possess the marvelous secret of the revival of youth and rebirth in blood, and the very great, young Americans there have been established friendship and collaboration which we can pursue together for a long time.

"Thus another big obstacle has been overcome as we are overturning every other obstacle in the way of the grandeur and prosperity of our country."

Credits People of Italy.

Count Volpi thanked his predecessor as finance minister, Sig. Stefani, and then declared it was "the marvelous people, knowing every sacrifice of blood and money of grand Italy who is being carried by the enthusiastic hearts of 1,000,000 young Fascisti to a marvelous future," who were responsible for the success.

He asked the chamber to send greetings to the American commission "which understood our demands" and in front of which the Italian delegation never "felt humiliated."

"Not once did they act as creditors, they knew Italy as the creditor of the whole world for the heritage for which civilization owes it," he continued. "Nor did Italy ask concessions."

Sig. Mussolini, after Count Volpi's talk, presented bills ratifying the Washington accord, the Locarno treaty, and the treaty of amity with Albania.

NEW $200,000 SCHOOL BURNS.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Dec. 5.—(AP)—The Lincoln consolidated school, six miles south of here, completed last February at a cost of $200,000, was destroyed by fire early today.

MORE IRREDENTA

Switzerland has lodged protest with Italy concerning the activities of Fascist organizations formed with the aim of restoring the canton of Ticino to Roman rule, according to a dispatch from Geneva. The canton was wrested from the dukes of Milan more than 500 years ago. It still is referred to in Italian textbooks as "Italia Irredenta," however, and Switzerland fears Italy may resort to war to regain it.

CHICAGO DIVORCE SUIT IS STOPPED BY INTIMIDATION

Charges that Mrs. Florence Mondi was intimidated in her divorce suit against Jimmy Mondi, wealthy alleged gambler, partner with John Torrio in the ownership of "The Ship," Cicero resort, were made by Attorneys Edgar J. Cook and Arthur Albert in a suit filed in the Circuit court yesterday.

The attorneys asked for $10,000 attorneys' fees which they say are due them for services rendered Mrs. Mondi.

"Mrs. Mondi told us she was terrified," Attorney Albert said, "at the threats of her husband. Later we received a notice signed by her in which she directed that action be stopped.

"I will file a bill later containing Mrs. Mondi's story about the reason gangsters are permitted to operate in Cicero and Chicago unmolested."

Mr. Albert added that he expected gang action against himself as a result of his suit.

BELOIT SAVANTS FIND ANCIENT SAHARA VENUS

Thousands of Years Old, 'Atlantis' Seekers Say.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—(AP)—An account of how proof was found of the existence of an advanced ancient civilization where desert winds now sweep over the shifting dunes of the south central Sahara, and of the discovery of a "legendary tomb" that is not a legend any more, was brought to Paris today by the Count de Prorok-Beloit college expedition, just returned from its labors in the sun-scorched desert.

The expedition's leaders, Count de Prorok and Bardley Tyrrell, a trustee of Beloit (Wis.) college, said their discoveries in the Hoggar country, which some antiquarians have regarded as the "lost Atlantis" of the ancient world, had fully repaid their work.

"The primary object of the expedition—establishment of the fact that in ancient times there were Saharan trade routes between Carthage and the great civilization then existing in the Hoggar country—was achieved," the sun-burned count said today. "The tomb of Tin-Hanan [the discovery of which was announced Nov. 28] is, I believe, the greatest archaeological treasure Africa has ever produced. The statue of the Libyan Venus we found there alone would more than pay the entire cost of the expedition.

Ancestress of Kings.

"Tin-Hanan's tomb stands on a high volcanic rock overlooking the desert. It is built in a circular shape with rectilinear blocks, covered with Libyo-Berber inscriptions. Tin-Hanan was the the ancestress of the Tuareg line of kings, whose rule descended through the female side. Legend appears to link her with the great goddess of the Carthaginians, Tanit, and with Athena of the Greeks. The tomb resembles the so-called 'Christian's tomb' at Algiers, but is better preserved.

French soldiers are now guarding the tomb, which the French government has declared a national monument.

"Carthage and Utica were not the first states to exploit the Sahara country. We found all along the way neolithic stations marked by heaps of black stones and ancient flints, in the dry river beds, indicating that still more ancient trade routes had passed that way. These flints were the handiwork of man at the dawn of history, and might be ten thousand years old. We found fourteen in the same river bed within half an hour, showing that it was once a thickly populated region."

Teach Natives Rotary Songs.

The count said the natives, the Tuaregs, a white race, were hospitable everywhere, but that they became excited when the treasures were taken out of Tin-Hanan's tomb. The greatest diplomacy was required to quiet them. The expedition, he said, was unarmed. They treated the natives courteously and taught them to sing college and Rotarian songs.

"On our return from the Hoggar country," the count said, "our automobiles were caught in a terrific sandstorm amid dunes of moving sand 1,500 feet high in the greatest dune country of the Sahara. Mr. Tyrrell and I reached Ouargla, but the other two cars were lost for four days."

The Libyan Venus to which Count De Prorok referred is a small stone statuette of great antiquity found near the tomb of Tin-Hanan. Count De Prorok said it might have been made thousands of years before the Christian era. The treasures found in the tomb, in which a skeleton was discovered, included "a golden diadem dotted with stars, five necklaces of precious stones, eighteen bracelets, nine of them gold and nine silver, furnishings of delicately carved wood, a complete set of toilet articles, and a little mound of precious stones."

"The expedition packed up forty-six cases of these marvels," Count De Porok said, "and presented them to the governor general of Algeria."

Finds St. Theresa Painting, Believed Work of Rubens

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—A painting of St. Theresa, said to be a genuine Rubens, has been discovered by Dr. Ludwig Burchard, art critic and an expert on the paintings of Rubens. The work was executed in Antwerp, he says, shortly after Rubens' return from Rome, where the beatification of St. Theresa, "the Spanish mystic," was celebrated in 1614. For more than 200 years the picture was supposed to be lost, but a short time ago Dr. Burchard discovered it in a private collection.

FRENCH CAPTURE DRUSE FORTRESS; LEBANON FREED

U. S. Warships Ordered to Leave Beirut.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BEIRUT, Syria, Dec. 5.—The French stormed the heights of Hasbeiya at 3:30 p. m. today. The capture of the Druse stronghold frees Christian Lebanon of the rebel tribesmen, who had been overrunning it. The French have been engaged for days in an encircling movement designed to sweep the rebels back of Mount Hermon. Hasbeiya is about 40 miles southwest of Damascus.

Damascus Fears New Attack.

DAMASCUS, Dec. 5.—(AP)—All street traffic in Damascus was forbidden after 6 o'clock this evening as the result of Druse bands gathering around the city and threatening to attack. Troops were standing by at various vantage points and barricades had been strengthened. The French bombarded brigand elements in some gardens near the Shagour quarter of Damascus today.

U. S. Withdraws Warships.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—(AP)—The American destroyers Coghlan and Lamson will be withdrawn immediately from Beirut, Syria, the state department having decided today that they no longer are needed for protection of American lives and property there.

A dispatch from the consul at Beirut said full agreement had been reached that the situation in the coastal region of Syria was such as to make the further presence of the ships unnecessary.

The destroyers were dispatched from the European fleet at Gibraltar to Alexandria, Egypt, in the early days of the revolt in Syria against French mandate authorities and following the disturbances in Damascus as a result of which portions of the city were bombarded by the French.

OF C. DELVES NTO MYSTERIES OF COSMIC RAY

Professor Tells Nature of New Discoveries.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Dr. R. A. Millikan, Nobel prize winner, has opened the door upon a new and fascinating horizon in the study of the nature of the universe, in his cosmic ray discoveries. It is announced, after careful study and trials of this theory at the University of Chicago laboratories.

Cosmic rays are so small that they are to imagine them ends in vague light. There is no indication yet as to their possible utility, such as that that carry light and sound.

The cause of the rays is unknown. Dr. Harvey B. Lemon, one of the leading physicists at the University of Chicago, offers this explanation:

"That these rays are signals coming from electrical interactions between electrons, atoms, and molecules that exist throughout the space around us.

"These radiations from cosmic space have a wave length, Prof. Lemon explains, one thousand times shorter than X-rays and one-fiftieth shorter than the shortest gamma rays of radium, which heretofore have been the shortest wave length radiations which we possess any knowledge.

Length of Waves.

The actual length of the waves is but one hundred-thousandth part of a millionth of an inch.

Prof. Millikan's work on the rays is important chiefly, Prof. Lemon points out, because of his precision determinations of their character. He says the existence has been known for years of a highly penetrating radiation present in minute amounts in places on the earth's surface. This radiation is detectable by virtue of its power, similar to that of X-rays, of ionizing the atmosphere slightly conductive to electricity. This conductivity can be measured by means of a delicate electroscope.

These rays were at first ascribed to the presence of minute traces of radio-active material in the rocks and soil of the earth's crust. It was found, however, by several European investigators that the intensity of this radiation increased as one ascended into the earth's atmosphere to heights of several miles. Millikan, in his experiments, first confirmed this fact by sending small balloons, equipped with self-recording apparatus, to a height of thirty ten miles in the atmosphere. At these levels he found the penetrating radiation was approximately twice as intense as at the earth's surface. This precluded any hypothesis which ascribed the origin of these rays to the earth's crust.

No Opinion on Cause.

Prof. Millikan expresses no opinion as to the cause of these rays. His observations are conclusive in showing that they are being poured in upon the earth in all directions from cosmic space. They show no variation in intensity throughout twenty-four hours, hence cannot be ascribed as coming either to the sun or any particular region of the stellar universe, as, for example, the milky way. Since there is every reasonable assumption to believe that space contains minute traces of material debris, since also the sun in our immediate vicinity sends out vast amounts of charged particles, such as electrons, alpha particles, etc., it is suspected that these penetrating radiations are signals coming to us from electrical interactions between electrons, atoms, molecules that exist here and there throughout the space around us.

This precluded any hypothesis which ascribed the origin of these rays to the earth's crust.

No Opinion on Cause.

"Prof. Millikan expresses no opinion as to the cause of these rays. His observations are conclusive in showing that they are being poured in upon the earth in all directions from cosmic space. They show no variation in intensity throughout twenty-four hours and hence cannot be ascribed as to origin either to the sun or any particular region of the stellar universe, such as, for example, the milky way. Since there is every reasonable presumption to believe that space contains minute traces of material débris and since also the sun in our immediate vicinity sends out vast amounts of charged particles, such as electrons, alpha particles, etc., it is suspected that these penetrating radiations are signals coming to us from electrical interactions between electrons, atoms, and molecules that exist here and there throughout the space around us."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 5.—[Special.] Red Grange, the only football player who ever enjoyed the luxury of a manager and a substitute manager, scored two personal touchdowns and a personal victory over the Frankford Yellow Jackets of Philadelphia in one of those muddy football battles this afternoon. The closing count was 14 to 7, and some 35,000 soggy customers melted away in the early dusk, drenched but satisfied.

JOHNNY MOHARDT

Grange excused himself along toward the last of the second quarter and did not appear until his team, the Chicago Bears, had sloshed through the mud to an opportune position for his emergence from the blankets. Then he leaped up and, shedding his wrappings like a suddenly resuscitated mummy, waded back into the game to score his second touchdown. This happened in the last period of the game.

Crowd Wants Grange.

It was lucky for the Bears and also for professional football that the star of the occasion came back when he did, because the crowd had been lured into the rain in the expectation of seeing him play a game and the customers were beginning to howl in the pained accents of the trimmed sucker over his protracted dalliance on the sidelines.

Red neatly caught a forward pass for a 24 yard gain in the first quarter and then he and Knop banged away at the line for a first down just a step from the goal as the quarter ended. On the first play of the second period Red went over for the touchdown.

Red Given Second Touchdown.

After a monotonous traffic in punts, Chicago went back into the game in the fourth quarter as the Bears got the ball on their 43 yard line. He at once hung a pass to Mohardt, the Notre Dame boy, for a 13 yard advance, and then carried it himself for a nine yard gain around the end with tacklers sinking in the mud on his trail.

The Sternaman brothers, Ed and Joe, assisted by Mohardt, maintained the rushing advance to the one yard line, where Grange again was given the honor of scoring, which he did with ease. Joe Sternaman kicked both goals for the Bears.

Jones of the Jackets, a big substitute who once played with the University of Nebraska, scored the opposition touchdown, tying the score temporarily in the third quarter.

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The magic name of Red Grange will complete fill the Polo grounds tomorrow. Seventy thousand will see the New York Giants and Chicago Bears clash in the final National Pro league game here, but many thousands of the record crowd will be chiefly interested in the performance of Grange.

Unless he is disabled Grange will play the entire game against the Giants and will be especially assisted by Earl Britton, his powerful running mate at fullback.

Grange's share of the gate receipts will be $12,000, officials of the Giants estimate.

Rain Slows Field.

While every precaution is being taken today to protect the playing field, the steady rain of the last three days is sure to prove a great handicap to the former Illinois star.

Despite the personal power and skill of Grange, the Giants rule 6 to 5 favorites to win the intersectional battle. There is unlimited confidence in the strength and experience of the formidable New York line and that the powerful Giant field will uncover greater running power than the Bears. Robert Folwell, veteran coach of the Giants, predicts that the New York team will win by two touchdowns and one.

The Giants have won seven consecutive league games.

Englewood Is Sunk, 13-0, in Eastern Mud

Lockhaven, Pa., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Lockhaven High school eleven, undefeated and Pennsylvania state champions of 1924 and 1925, sent Englewood back to Chicago tonight beaten, 13 to 0.

C. RICHARDSON.

The westerners fought hard, but Lockhaven was superior. The field was wet and soggy and a heavy driving rain turned the gridiron into a quagmire which made fast football out of the question.

First Score on Blocked Kick.

Lochhaven scored early in the first period. After working the ball up to Englewood's 2 yard line, they lost it on downs. Englewood punted but the ball was blocked and recovered back of their line by McCloskey for a touchdown. Their other score came in the last period when end runs by Slopey ad Kunes put the ball on the westerners' ten yard line, Kunes taking it over the next play. Kunes also made the extra point with a placement kick.

Englewood played well in the second quarter but showed up best in the third period, when they outplayed the easterners. They had an excellent chance to score in that period, but could not gain through the stubborn Lockhaven line.

Lockhaven Shows Edge.

Englewood made five first downs and Lockhaven twelve. The Chicagoans made ten yards on one forward pass, while Lockhaven tried one pass which was unsuccessful.

Thompson, Singer, Richardson, and Bradley starred for Englewood and carried the brunt of their attack. On account of bad weather, Coach Palmer and Coach Wolfe of the locals agreed to cut the last period to twelve minutes.

The lineup:

Good Fellow Tells How Aiding Others Makes Real Xmas

A little more than a fortnight remains before the departure of Santa Claus on his annual and justly famous world girdling reindeer gallop. Between this Sunday morning and Christmas morning there are eighteen days, few enough to prepare for the gigantic task confronting the city's Good Fellows.

An early survey of the Christmas situation among the city's poor families shows that just about 4,500 Good Fellows will be necessary this year. That means that unless 4,500 Good Fellows enroll in the gloom chasing army approximately 16,000 poor children will find their stockings empty Christmas morning.

Wesley Barry, the well known freckled-faced movie kid, will be at the Good Fellow bureau tomorrow from noon until 2 o'clock to help in welcoming Good Fellows. Wesley is appearing at the Palace this week, and wants to do something to help the poor kids while he is in the city.

Here's One Experience.

Listen to the story of a last year's Good Fellow.

"Something prevented me from taking my little gifts to the children allotted to me on Christmas eve," he said. "I'm a bachelor. I have no relatives in Chicago and my Christmas would have been terribly lonely if I had not gone to the Good Fellow office. But I had gone, had secured a family of three kids, and had been prevented from visiting them on Christmas eve.

"I awakened early Christmas morning and at 8 o'clock was in a taxicab bound for the west side with a lot of toys. I arrived at the K—— home on S—— street at 8:30 and the mother and three children were awake. Now, those kids were crying. They had rushed to the chairs around the stove. On those chairs were six empty stockings. You see, they had been optimistic kids, each hanging up two stockings. And the stockings were empty.

Kids Crying Quietly.

"The kids weren't crying out loudly, just sort of whimpering and biting their lips. I have never seen such genuine sorrow in my life. It nearly broke my heart. The littlest girl was just sitting on the floor near her chair and sobbing softly. O, boy, that made me feel terribly bad.

"Well, of course, my presents changed things. In a moment they were whooping and hollering and banging the drums, and it wasn't ten minutes before the new little railroad train I had purchased was hopelessly wrecked. I can't describe the fun they had—nor the pleasure I had. I felt good for a month after that. Say, I wouldn't miss being a Good Fellow. It's the best sport I know."

Go to the Good Fellow bureau, 11 South Dearborn street, early tomorrow morning and ask for the name and address of a poor family. Clip the coupon on this page or telephone the Good Fellow bureau tomorrow. Do not delay.

Big Ten Smiles Unworried Smile at Pro Grid Threat

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Assumption of a passive attitude on the question of professional football, limitation of the Big Ten track and field meets to members of the association, and approval of a curb on football scouting were the features of the annual meeting of the faculty committee of the Western Conference held yesterday at the University club.

PROF. O. F. LONG.

It was the opinion of faculty members, athletic directors, and the coaches the professional gridiron situation is not alarming. The question was discussed informally, but was not deemed important enongh for drastic action. It was hinted the pro sport will be watched carefully and every precaution taken to safeguard the game in the Big Ten.

No reports were received from the athletic directors or coaches on the sudden growth of professional football, and faculty members are of the opinion college football will not be endangered if kept as clean as in the past.

Change Track Meet Rules.

No reason was advanced for limiting the Western Conference outdoor track and field meet to members of the Big Ten only. This suggestion has been made several times but no action was taken until yesterday. The faculty also voted to place the actual handling of the track and field games in the hands of the athletic directors. The graduate managing committee or board of managers, which has looked after all details of both meets, will function in an advisory capacity.

A committee of Profs. Skinner of Purdue, Aigler of Michigan, and Long of Northwestern; Huff Illinois, Luehring, Minnesota, and St. John of Ohio State was appointed to serve with a committee of alumni composed of Bond, Johnson, and Howe, to work out reorganization plans for both meets.

The faculty representatives also adopted the resolution presented by Prof. Paige of Minnesota at the June meeting that all conference teams play at least four football games with other members of the association. This resolution was adopted at the morning session and the action conveyed to the football coaches before they met in the afternoon. It affected the schedules of several coaches who had practically agreed upon dates.

This was a mighty good move, but caused no end of trouble for the coaches. The new rule will make it easier in the future to arrange suitable slates and will enable each team to meet at least two conference opponents on the home field. It proved very satisfactory for Minnesota, Iowa and Indiana, which have had trouble in arranging satisfactory schedules.

As a result of a recommendation from the athletic directors, the committee retained the present policy of assigning officials to football games. The work of this committee was lauded by athletic directors. Prof. Ralph W. Aigler of Michigan will serve as chairman of the officials' committee, with Prof. O. F. Long of Northwestern and Maj. John L. Griffith, the Big Ten athletic commissioner.

The committee frowned upon the point of sending so many scouts to football games. It was the general opinion that one and not more than two should be sent to scout future opponents. The action of the athletic directors in prohibiting the use of moving pictures for scouting purposes was sustained.

Refer Eligibility Question.

Prof. Banderbogart of Hibbing Junior College of Minnesota appealed to the committee on the point of eligibility of athletes who compete for minor colleges. It was Prof. Banderbogart's opinion that competition in minor colleges should not count when athletes enter the major institutions. The report was referred to a committee which will be named later and action taken at the next meeting.

Courses dealing solely with applied physiology, anatomy, historical or administrative phases of physical education may be considered as academic courses for the purpose of making athletes eligible for competition, when such courses are taken during the summer term, the committee ruled. There had been a question on this point.

Action of the athletic directors in reelecting Maj. John L. Griffith as athletic commissioner for another term of two years was sustained by the faculty. The work of the commissioner was highly praised by both the athletic directors and faculty members.

No action was taken on the recommendation of rotating football schedules. R. D. McHargue, a Purdue baseball player, was reinstated to the amateur ranks. This player has been barred from intercollegiate competition for accepting five dollars for playing a baseball game in his high school days.

N. U. Gets Track Meet.

Michigan was awarded the swimming championships and they will be held at Ann Arbor, March 12 and 13. The indoor track and field meet was awarded to Northwestern and will be held on the same days in Patten gymnasium. The tennis championships were given to Chicago and the athletic directors given power to name the dates in May.

The dates for the outdoor closed track and field games were set at May 28 and 29, and the athletic directors empowered to name the place. There is a strong likelihood the games will be held on Soldiers' field in Grant park. They may also go to either Chicago or Minnesota, but a majority of the directors favor Soldiers' field if conditions are favorable. The athletic directors will determine the time and place of the annual cross country run.

Prof. F. C. Woodward of Chicago was chosen chairman of the faculty committee and Prof. O. F. Long of Northwestern reelected secretary. Other faculty representatives present were G. A. Goodenough, Illinois; W. J. Moenkhaus, Indiana; Louis Pelzer, Iowa; R. W. Aigler, Michigan; James Paige, Minnesota; T. E. French, Ohio State; J. H. Skinner, Purdue, and J. F. A. Pyre, Wisconsin.

HOREMANS AND SCHAEFER MEET AGAIN JAN. 4-6

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Edouard Horemans, Belgian, who won the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship from young Jake Schaefer last week, will meet Schaefer in a return match in Chicago Jan. 4, 5, and 6, according to an announcement made by James Gillon, Horemans' manager, who was in Rockford today arranging for exhibitions here Wednesday and Thursday between Horemans and Marcel Lesmput, junior Belgian star.

GOPHERS AND INDIANA FORCED TO DOUBLE UP

Coaches Deadlocked on Schedules.

For the first time since the nineties, members of the Western conference will play two football games with each other. Michigan and Minnesota will meet twice and the same is true of Indiana and Northwestern.

This unique situation was brought about by a new faculty ruling making it imperative for Big Ten elevens to play at least four games with each other. The conference coaches went into session yesterday afternoon at the Auditorium hotel at 2 o'clock, and at 6 o'clock were hopelessly deadlocked.

Spears' Challenge Accepted.

A committee composed of Maj. John L. Griffith, the Big Ten athletic commissioner; A. A. Stagg of Chicago, and George Huff of Illinois was appointed to iron out the situation. This body of experienced slatemakers tried every combination imaginable to bring about the desired result, but every switch made the situation more complicated.

Only a few teams cared to play Minnesota, while Iowa had difficulty to arrange its four games. Finally the coaches became boastful, and Dr. Spears of Minnesota agreed to meet any team twice during the season. His challenge was immediately accepted by Coach Yost of Michigan, with the result the teams will battle twice next fall.

Purple Meets Indiana Twice.

To give Indiana the required number of four games Northwestern agreed to meet Indiana in home and home engagements. It was the only solution to one of the most complex problems football coaches ever have had to solve. It was made even more perplexing because of the fact Illinois, Chicago, Michigan, and Ohio State had previously slated contests with eastern elevens.

Chicago will leave Stagg field to meet Northwestern, the game being planned as the dedicatory feature of the Purple's new stadium. Coach Zuppke broke off negotiations with Nebraska by claiming the trip so early in the season to Lincoln is a hardship instead of a benefit.

Notre Dame will meet Northwestern at Evanston Oct. 23, and Coach Rockne's eleven will clash with traditional eastern opponents. Indiana had added two southern schools in Kentucky and Mississippi A. and M. to its schedule. Following is the schedule as drawn by the coaches:

WRONG PYLE HIT IN ST. LOUIS SUIT, SAYS ATTORNEY

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 5.—(AP)—A denial that C. C. Pyle, manager of Red Grange, has any liabilities or that any court judgment has been given against him was made here last night by O. W. Hammer, attorney for Grange and his manager in the garnishment served on the football star here Wednesday.

The Pyle mentioned in a $20,000 damage judgment obtained in St. Louis Circuit court by a Negress is Everett Pyle, owner of a fleet of dairy trucks

MICHIGAN AWARDED THREE PLACES ON FIRST STRING

Grange Called Best Running Back in History.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Pictures in rotogravure section.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

With the exception of Michigan, which was represented by one of the best elevens in its history, a team which played the old and the new game successfully throughout most of the year, caliber of other teams in the Western conference, or Big Ten, was not up to the usual standard this season.

WALTER ECKERSALL.

Although Michigan was defeated by Northwestern, 3 to 2, in a sea of mud, the Wolverines were by far the best team in the conference. Following the setback by the Purple, the Maize and Blue won from Ohio State and Minnesota in commanding fashion. Michigan also defeated the Navy in one of the big intersectional contests of the year.

Purple Are Good Sports.

Following Michigan's victory over Minnesota in the final game of the year, Northwestern athletic officials showed splendid sportsmanship by informing Coach Yost of Michigan that their team had no claim to the title and that the Wolverines were deserving of the undisputed Big Ten championship.

Northwestern lost but one conference game, and that to Chicago. It engaged in four struggles, while Michigan lost but one of its six Big Ten contests. The Purple, however, played the suggested number of four conference games and experienced the most successful year since 1900, when a Northwestern eleven had some claim to a Western championship. Close followers of football, together with Northwestern coaches, knew that Michigan was a better team on a dry field, and Purple authorities are to be congratulated for acknowledging the ability of a team which is one of the outstanding elevens of the 1925 season.

Wolverines Classed with Dartmouth.

Michigan is not only the Western conference champion but also it has a strong claim to the western title and should be placed alongside Dartmouth and Washington as the strongest in the country. Coach Yost developed a versatile eleven, one which could execute plays of any type. The team was equipped with formations to penetrate any style of defense, and Yost is to be congratulated for turning out a team which, he claims, is the best he has ever developed.

Although defeated by Tulane in an important intersectional struggle, the Purple boys showed they were made of real football stuff by rallying to defeat Michigan and Purdue. Indian previously had been defeated and the team succumbed to Chicago after a bitter struggle, 6 to 0. In their final clash of the season with Notre Dame, the Purple led until the second half and were beaten only by a whirlwind third quarter attack by Coach Rockne's eleven. Coach Thistlethwaite and his able assistants have every reason to feel proud of this year's record.

Maroons Lacked Open Attack.

Other teams in the conference played inconsistent football. Chicago had a poor year. The Maroons lost their intersectional games to Pennsylvania and Dartmouth and were beaten by Illinois and Wisconsin, while Ohio State held the Midway eleven to a tie. Coach Stagg had bright prospects at the beginning of the season, but a ground gaining open attack was lacking.

Illinois received three defeats during the season, but finished strong. Coach Zuppke's eleven was defeated by Nebraska in its opening encounter and then lost to Iowa and Michigan. The Orange and Blue coach was shy of line material and the backs did not give Capt. Grange the proper support on most of ground gaining attempts.

Iowa started out like a real championship contender, but faded in midseason. The Hawkeyes lost to Wisconsin and then were trounced by Minnesota. The team's season was capped by a defeat at the hands of Southern California in an important intersectional game. Coach Ingwersen did well, however, as injuries handicapped him in the Minnesota and Southern California games.

Badgers Have Good Year.

Wisconsin, under the guidance of George Little, had a great year. Although defeated by Michigan early in the season and held to a tie by Minnesota, the Badgers showed the true Wisconsin spirit by rallying to such an extent that Iowa and Chicago were defeated in the remaining games. This writer has contended right along that Little is a capable coach, and if left alone will give Wisconsin football teams which will either be champions or strong contenders.

Minnesota made a strong bid for conference honors, only to have its hopes dashed by Michigan in the final game of the year. The Gophers engaged in only three Big Ten struggles. They were tied by Wisconsin, defeated by Michigan, and won from Iowa. Dr. C. W. Spears, the new coach, is an excellent teacher of the game, and if given a free hand at Minneapolis will develop teams which will be a credit to the institution.

Ohio State did not come up to expectations. The Buckeyes were tied by Chicago, but lost to Iowa, Michigan, and Illinois. The Scarlet and Gray, however, won from Columbia in an interesting intersectional clash and numbered Indiana as its only Big Ten victim. The team was handicapped most of the season by injuries to Marek and Capt. Cunningham.

Hoosier Squads Lack Material.

Purdue and Indiana did not fare so well. Neither won a conference game and in their final game of the season the two teams battled to a scoreless tie. The coaches, Jimmy Phelan of Purdue and Bill Ingram of Indiana, did not have the material of other football teachers in the association.

In the matter of intersectional games, conference teams did fairly well. Michigan trounced the Navy and Illinois gave Pennsylvania a similar dose, while Ohio State kept up the good work by winning from Columbia. Chicago fell before Dartmouth and Pennsylvania and Indiana went down in defeat by Syracuse. Northwestern fell before Tulane and Iowa was beaten by Southern California. Illinois lost to the strong Nebraska eleven and Chicago won from Kentucky.

Despite the inconsistent playing of most of the teams in the conference, the year produced the usual number of players whose general work throughout the season was commendable.

Old Names Abandoned.

Before going into detail regarding the selection of players for the first three mythical conference elevens, fans should remember there is no such thing in football any more as a quarter back, left half back, right half back, and full back. The ball carriers are simply backs. A player may be in the full back's position on one play, he may be a wing back on another, or a near or far back on another. Each of the backs is intrusted with the responsibility to crash the line, slant off tackles, run the ends, block, or forward pass. Any of the backs may call signals and it was not an infrequent case during the year to have a back go into the line and a tackle or guard dropped back 5 yards to advance the ball. However, the old names of positions are used in this selection for convenience of the readers.

Makes Grange Captain.

First and foremost of this selection is Capt. Red Grange of Illinois, who is placed at left half back and made captain of the first honorary eleven. Grange must be acknowledged as the greatest running back in the history of football. While the great gridiron game has produced other backs who possessed greater all around ability than Grange, none was his equal in advancing the ball. Ted Coy of Yale, Jim Thorpe of the Carlisle Indians, George Gipp of Notre Dame, Eddie Mahan of Harvard, Heston of Michigan, and Oberlander of Dartmouth had more all around ability than Grange. So much has been said and written about this wonderful player that no further comment is necessary except that his name is stamped in football history forever.

Doyle Harmon of Wisconsin, who will lead the 1926 Badger eleven, is placed at right half back. This player was one of the reasons why the Cardinal tied Minnesota and defeated Iowa and Chicago. He can carry the ball, kick and pass. He knows the game and picks the opportune times to spring unexpected formations. He is a strong defensive player and his general all around play makes him an ideal running mate for Grange.

McCarty to Get Needed Yard.

Austin McCarty, one of the greatest line plungers who ever wore the Maroon, a player who will rank with Hugo Bezdek, Slaker, and John Thomas as Midway battering rams, is given the full back position. Statistics of Chicago's athletic board show that McCarty has averaged better than five yards throughout the season. He was a respected player who showed vast improvement in his defensive play and blocking. He is just the type needed on any team to gain that yard so necessary for a first down when the oval rests in a precarious position on the field.

Capt. Marks of Indiana was another great back whose work would have been more prominent had he been a member of a stronger team. Lewis of Northwestern did sterling work all year and should be one of the greatest players in the conference in the next two years. Karow of Ohio State performed admirably all season, as did Joesting of Minnesota, Wilcox of Purdue, Molenda and Gregory of Michigan and Britton of Illinois.

Marek of Ohio State and Kutsch of Iowa, while they played well in certain games, are sophomores and need more experience. Both were handicapped in late games by injuries and they should be wonderful assets to their teams in the next two years. Earl Britton of Illinois, although overweight most of the year, was an important factor in his team's games through his punting alone.

Freidman Is Smart General.

Benny Freidman of Michigan is awarded the quarter back position. This player is one of the smartest generals Coach Yost has ever developed and Hurry Up has some good ones at Ann Arbor. The only blot on Freidman's career was his attempt to handle the wet ball in the Northwestern game. This blunder gave Northwestern its chance to score the field goal early in the game. Outside of this mistake, Freidman played a bangup game all season, his passing, field goal kicking and excellent selection of plays being no small matter in Michigan's great season.

Schirmer of Iowa, Almquist of Minnesota, and Crofoot of Wisconsin were other good quarter backs. Curley, Drain, and Abbott of Chicago did well at times, but none was the equal of the Michigan quarter back who will captain next year's eleven.

Oosterbaan of Michigan and Kassel of Illinois rate with the best ends in the country. Both are expert in receiving forward passes and both are strong in all other departments of end play. They always turned plays to the inside and were ever mindful to drive runners to the inside when covering punts and kickoffs.

Lampe of Chicago, Flora of Michigan, Mathews of Northwestern, and Romey of Iowa were the other leading flank players of the conference. Capt. Cunningham, a great end last year, was handicapped all season by injuries. The Buckeye leader is a great player and it was unfortunate he was disabled.

Two Guards Hard to Fool.

The tackle positions are given to Edwards of Michigan and Henderson of Chicago. These players charged with plenty of drive throughout the season and were hard to box. They rushed forward passers on most occasions for the desired results and at times hurried kickers to such an extent the desired results were not obtained from the punts.

Brown of Illinois, Hawkins of Michigan, Hobscheid of Chicago, Nelson of Wisconsin, and Bruce and Johnson of Northwestern were the other leading tackles in the conference.

Hess of Ohio State and Walsh of Minnesota are placed in the guard positions. Hess is the outstanding guard of the conference and one of the best forwards in the country. Walsh, while not a flashy player, is of the type who has permitted few gains to be made through him and has been reliable all season. Neither was drawn by offensive shifting or delayed passes.

Stipek of Wisconsin, Mitterwallner of Illinois, Krususki of Iowa, Lovette of Michigan, and Hibben of Chicago were the other guards of merit.

Center Lowry Has Rare Judgment.

Tim Lowry of Northwestern is given the center berth because of his great playing in the Michigan, Purdue and Notre Dame games. In the Wolverine struggle, he passed the wet ball accurately and used rare judgment in calling for a safety at a critical stage of the game. He did the same thing in the Purdue game and against Notre Dame recovered a fumble for his team's only touchdown. He played hard, consistent football all year.

Brown of Michigan is nearly the equal of the Purple warrior. The Wolverine leader played a whale of a game against Illinois and Minnesota and should be rated among the best pivot players in the country. Reitsch of Illinois and Griffen of Iowa were the other good centers in the conference.

These teams would be strong in every department. On the first eleven Freidman could be used to direct the team's attack and would do most of the forward passing and all the field goal kicking. Grange could be used for the open field work, Harmon to drive off the tackles, and McCarty to crash the line for short needed gains for first downs. The open attack could be used splendidly with Oosterbaan and Kassel on the receiving ends of forward passing, while Harmon could be called upon to punt out of danger.

Deceptive formations could be evolved, in which open plays could be sprung, not to mention line smashes, with the ball being passed to the near backs. Flank and lateral forward passes could be executed because of the known strength of the line, which would match any selected in the country.

The same situation is true of the second and third elevens, which are fortified with punters, forward passers, field goal kickers, and players who can run, drive off the tackles, or smash into a line. In fact, no football team is complete unless it has players who can efficiently perform in the various styles of attack, and such warriors must be equally efficient on the defense.

PRO FOOTBALL IS MOTION WITHOUT EMOTION: ZUPPKE

"Professional football will never hurt the college sport because it has motion without emotion," Coach Bob Zuppke of Illinois declared in a speech to members of the Illini club and the football team from Illinois last night.

Zuppke, declaring himself a friend of Red Grange, directed caustic remarks at the press for statements made in reporting his address at the university several weeks ago.

Other speakers were George Huff, director of athletics at the University of Illinois; Chuck Kassel, captain of the Illinois varsity next year; Ben Wham, president of the Illini club, and Burt Ingerwersen, coach at Iowa.

MIZZOU VALLEY LOOP BANS PROS IN ANY CAPACITY

Conference Stiffens Rules on Eligibility.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Professional football was dealt a heavy blow by Missouri valley conference representatives here today.

Following the lead of the western conference, the valley representatives ruled that any one who had been connected with professional football as player, coach, official, manager, or publicity agent could not be employed by conference schools in any athletic capacity. The ruling was made retroactive and called for the dismissal for such men from present staffs.

Stiffen Eligibility Rule.

Another blow was aimed at professionalism in a ruling adopted declaring ineligible any athlete who engaged in competition on the same program with a professional athlete. The ruling resulted from an Oklahoma university case where two football players were suspended temporarily for appearing in a boxing show with professionals, although the football players declared they received no compensation themselves.

All questions of eligibility were placed in the hands of the conference eligibility committee, instead of leaving such matters to individual schools.

Golf was abolished as a conference championship sport, but schools were permitted to hold invitation tournaments. No reason for the action was made public.

The outdoor track and field meet was awarded to the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and set for May 21 and 22, a week earlier than usual so as to avoid conflict with examinations. The valley tennis tournament would be held at Lincoln about the same dates.

Indoor Meet to Ames.

A decision to hold the indoor meet at Ames was reached upon reconsideration of an earlier decision to abandon the event temporarily because of the inability of obtaining in Kansas City a convention hall for the desired dates.

The wrestling tournament was awarded to Oklahoma A. and M. college, Stillwater, March 12 and 13. The swimming meet was awarded to Washington university, St. Louis, for the same date.

The officials ruled that athletes from junior and class C colleges would be allowed to play their full quota of years upon transfer to valley schools, but that athletes from class A and class B colleges would have their previous play deducted. The athletic directors were still working on football schedules with the prospect they might not complete them before tomorrow. Schedules partly completed are:

Seven Little 19 Members Form New Conference

Seven members of the Little Nineteen conference yesterday at the Big Ten meeting organized a new association, to be known as the Central Illinois conference. These schools will still retain their membership in the Little Nineteen. They wanted an organization, however, with stricter eligibility rules than govern the older circuit.

The colleges in the Central Illinois body are Illinois Wesleyan, James Millikin, Illinois college, Knox, Monmouth, Eureka, and Augustana. The following officers were elected: President, Prof. F. L. Muhl, Illinois Wesleyan; vice president, Arthur Swedberg, Augustana; secretary-treasurer, Herbert Hart, Monmouth.

The golf, tennis, and track meets of the newly formed circuit were awarded Illinois college for May 21 and 22.

William Harmon of Illinois college resigned as president of the Little Nineteen and C. P. Lantz was elected to fill the office. Other officials elected were: Vice president, Louis Omar, Carthage; secretary, Dr. V. Swaim, Bradley; treasurer, Prof. L. M. Cole, Millikin.

Southerners Ban Pro Gridders as Coaches, Officials

Athens, Ga., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Professional football players were banned as coaches, or in any other official capacity, by the Southern Intercollegiate conference at its annual session here today. Resolutions were adopted, effective Sept. 1, 1926, providing that no member of a conference team coaching staff shall have participated in professional football and that no person who has played professional football may officiate in any conference games.

Dr. S. V. Sanford of the University of Georgia was reelected president of the conference.

Alabama, southern football championship claimant, was granted permission by the conference to accept an invitation to play a Pacific coast eleven at Pasadena New Year's day. The conference rule prohibitions postseason games was waived at the request of Coach Wade of Alabama.

TROJANS DRUB OREGON AGGIES BY 28-0 SCORE

Submerge Passing Attack of Invaders.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—University of Southern California's football team fanned the dying embers of the gridiron season into a flareup which netted a 28 to 0 victory over Oregon Aggies in the Los Angeles Coliseum this afternoon.

Thirty-five thousand persons, clad in summery togs befitting the 76 degree temperature, saw the battle, which was one of vindication for Coach Howard Jones' charges, who suffered unexpected humiliation last week at the hands of Washington State.

The Trojans showed supremacy in every style of play and squelched the forward pass efforts of Coach Paul Schissler's farmers.

The Trojans intercepted eight Aggie passes. The last play of the game was an interception by Quarter Back Elliott, who raced thirty yards for a touchdown. Lineup:

Dove of Peace to Flutter Back as Baseball Moguls Gather

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The annual congress of major league baseball clubs will go into session in New York next week, and the prospects are the meetings will be as quiet and peaceful as could be desired. The alarums and mutinies of a year ago have been stilled, and it is likely that Kenesaw Mountain Landis and Byron Bancroft Johnson will assembly in the same room without exchanging anything more than scowls.

The National league will meet Tuesday at the Waldorf-Astoria, and the American league at the Commodore on Wednesday.

Not even the trading market holds out any promise of unusual action. Many Decembers have come and gone since an important trade was made at the annual meetings, although there always has been plenty of smoke beforehand. This year the trade talk has amounted to nothing, which may mean that several reverberating deals will be flashed on an unsuspecting public.

Looks Like Much Talk.

The meetings themselves will be devoted to routine matters of great interest to the magnates but of no serious moment to the average baseball fan. The club owners will merely get together and go over the prosperous season of 1925. Reports will be approved, conventional actions taken, and then the various magnates will struggle to their feet and orate on several subjects.

Possibly the most interesting topic of discussion will be the shortening of the season by a week or more. Following the sloppy weather at the recent world's series there was a great outcry in favor of an abbreviated campaign, the season to end before Sept. 30 instead of being padded out into October. So the question will be duly debated at the joint meeting Thursday, with sturdy opposition expected from the New York Giants and other clubs.

Much Noise, No Trades.

As far as player trades go, the outlook is extremely muddy. Here and there a few whispers are heard, but that is all. True, all the managers will be present with check book in hand, and each will proclaim loudly his intense eagerness to put over a few transactions. The only difficulty is that the other fellow wants something for nothing.

A struggle between the White Sox and Athletics for the person of Joe Boley, Baltimore shortstop, is said to be pending.

At the National league meeting the Pirates will be voted the 1925 pennant and a cash prize of $1,000 and a medal will be awarded to the most valuable player, in this case undoubtedly Rogers Hornsby.

Plan Golden Jubilee Dinner.

The senior league also will complete plans for the Golden Jubilee dinner on Feb. 2 in this city, when the exact fiftieth aniversary of the organization will be celebrated.

At the American league meeting the owners will discuss President Johnson's suggestion to award the most valuable player prize after the world's series instead of before; Clark Griffith's plan to admit free at a later game holders of coupons for a tie game in the world's series, a scheme aimed to prevent the cry of commercialism being raised if the commission should call a series with the score tied.

The joint meeting will debate on the shorter season, possibly the player-writer question and the suggestion that players be sent out on option for three years instead of two as at present.

Much More Than Beauty--
Matchless Performance

If the New Franklin brought nothing more dramatic to the motoring world than its beauty of line, it would still be a real contribution.

But back of its style leadership is a standard of performance that has no counterpart today.

Easy-riding that is perceptibly better than anything you have experienced in the past.

Easy-handling and high power that combine with this to make possible more miles, as well as better miles, per day.

Efficiency and long life that pay dollars-and-cents dividends in lower upkeep cost and higher resale value.

And always, under all conditions, the complete freedom from trouble which only air-cooling can give.

This double leadership—appearance and performance—makes the New Franklin a doubly fine value.

Nature and the loyalty of a million careful smokers—a combination hard to beat—have combined to make White Owls taste better than ever.

Not that the quality has ever been anything but the highest. The constant patronage of such a vast army of smokers proves that. But when a tobacco ever is unusually fine—such as that now being used in White Owls—it is only natural that it should add an extra sweetness of taste, a greater mellowness, an additional fragrance.

But Nature, alone, could not give you this extra value that all the judges of good cigars are so quick to note in White Owls.

Were it not for the millions of loyal White Owl friends it would be impossible to use this super-fine tobacco and still maintain the low price of 2 for 15 cents.

Small wonder, then, that so many men who can afford to pay much more smoke White Owls. They judge them by quality alone. They know that the low price of White Owls is due solely to the unbeatable popularity that makes it necessary the astounding production of millions of White Owls are outstripping production that no longer can be taken as an indication of cigar quality.

The National Professional Football league championship hangs in the balance today when the Chicago Cardinals and Pottsville, Pa., elevens clash on the gridiron at Comiskey park. A victory for either team carries the national title, for the Cardinals have swept over all opposition in the western half of the league, while the Pottsville eleven holds the eastern crown.

BOB KOEHLER.

The game was scheduled by Manager O'Brien of the Cardinals as a post-season contest to decide the championship, as the Cards and Pottsville elevens both have closed their regular league season. As the schedules worked out the Cardinals could claim the title without meeting Pottsville, but Manager O'Brien wanted his team to meet the eastern champs with the view of settling definitely the title claims of the rivals.

Eastern Record Impressive.

Indications point tone of the toughest games of the season. Both teams have pointed their attacks for the last week for the contest today. Pottsville has a number of well known collegiate stars in its lineup and the fact that the Pennsylvanians won nine games and lost only two during their schedule season, both of those defeats being by close scores, has caused the Cardinal players to work long hours in their drill sessions.

Four of the Pottsville linemen who have gained renown for their work on the gridiron during their college and pro careers are Charley Berry, the all-American captain of Lafayette, who plays at left end; Herb and Russ Stein of Washington and Jefferson, center and right tackle respectively, both of whom won all-American recognition during their college careers, and Russ Hathaway, the huge tackle from Indiana.

Wallie French, who piloted West Point elevens a few years back with considerable skill, is the field general and quarter back of the Pottsville pros. La Tone and Flanagan are at half backs and Wentz will start in the full back position.

Red Dunn Back.

The return of Red Dunn, the brilliant Marquette back, who is ready to perform at quarter back again, has brightened the Cardinals chance of victory. Dunn was injured nearly three years ago. The irrepressible Paddy Driscoll, the expert field goal kicker, runner and passer, will play at one half back position with Erickson at the other and Koehler at full back for the Cards, while Ike Mahoney will be held as a reserve back.

The score of the Bear-New York game in New York will be announced from time to time during the afternoon.

The contest will start promptly at 2 o'clock and the gates at Comiskey Park will be opened at 12:30.

Oak Park and Morton Elect Football Captains

Oak Park and Morton High schools of the Suburban league have elected captains for next year. The former school will be led by Robert Halperin, who plays full back, while Ray Capouch will pilot the latter eleven. Morton also has selected a new basketball captain, Eric Anderson replacing Kaspar, who resigned.

The Sporting Goods by WESTBROOK PEGLER

An Oracle Speaks Through His Millinery.

Seated last night at the typewriter, idly socking the keys, we were struck by the notion that it would be quite all right if certain athletic prophets should learn to mind their own business and not to speak out of turn.

WESTBROOK PEGLER.

A noted athletic director, or Nth power coach, separated himself from some very tart conversation about Red Grange when the celebrated ice vendor decided to quit the football sport and enter the football business. He would have preferred that Red Grange should use his sinews to hoist some sagging sector of the movie drama or that he should ally himself with journalism, two crafts which it may be assumed that Red Grange knows nothing about.

Aside from the fact that it was none of the noted athletic director's business what Red Grange decided to do upon the completion of a football career in the course of which he kicked a few divots in the noted athletic director's own face, there was an ethical point to be considered which escaped the noted athletic director, but not Red Grange.

"I am going to play football," Mr. Grange said, "because that is the thing I do best."

In other words, he perceived, where the prophet did not, that it would have been much less virtuous to become a fake movie actor or a fake writer than a genuine football player for wages.

The noted athletic director may have been deceived by the success of the Messrs. Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey, both of whom made their marks, not to say gaping gashes, on the arts that he recommended to Red Grange. But if he wished young Mr. Grange to emulate the artistic careers of these gents, why did he object to a short course of professional football for an athlete who was good enough to tear through a whole era of college football like a pewter quarter through a stud game?

An oracle in any line of work should use his millinery to keep his toupe in place and not for a loud speaker.

THE OVERCROWDED PROFESSIONS.

There is dense congestion in the insurance and bond and mortgage professions.

The financial and social outskirts of Boston, New York, and Chicago are becoming overcrowded with genteel young drones from various varsities who emanated from school with a caviar appetite, a corned beef earning capacity, and a pardonable misimpression that their brief glory was a permanent voucher for the luxuries of life. It happens too often that a young man who has become famous for socking some kind of ball with some kind of utensil, on casting about for an occupation that will keep him in leisure and swell clothing, is advised to sell insurance or bonds and mortgages, though he may have no talent for the business.

A young eastern athlete who won much esteem by carrying a leather bag full of wind through certain deployments of other young athletes recently was tempted to become a professional. He was eyeing sin with a friendly orb when a deputation of monied alumni called on him to promise that if he would only refuse the unclean wages of professional football they would start him off in the insurance business and guarantee him the nucleus of a clientele.

LOST: ONE-EYED CONNELLY; NO REWARD.

It has been nearly two months since wandering One-Eyed Connelly, the gate crasher, was made the victim of an unassisted putout at the Pittsburgh ball yard. An ordinary Pittsburgh patrolman repulsed Mr. Connelly just before the second game of the world's series, hurling him a great distance.

Although the brave officer did not know it at the time, he really gave One-Eye a flying start toward the retirement which now seems to have swallowed him. There are those who want to give the brave officer a medal for that.

That night One-Eye rode to Washington as an informal passenger on one of the specials and the next morning he put the finger on this correspondent for bucks to the number of two.

"Brother," Mr. Connelly said sadly, "this is the last time you will deuce One-Eyed Connelly. You have been a good customer and I will recommend you to my successor, if any, as a very reliable two dollar touch."

It was a rainy morning following a bitter night, and Mr. Connelly was wet and he had a deep cough after his ride on top of the Pullmans.

"I am on my way to Florida," he said. "I am retiring from public life. I seem to feel that the writers and fighters who used to laugh at me and use me as a training camp roustabout have made progress and outgrown me. They used to call me One-Eye and send me on errands. Now they call me a dirty bum and turn me off when I speak to them.

"It was pretty good fun in Toledo and Shelby and Saratoga and Atlantic City. I didn't eat so regular or so good, but if you have a few friends you can do without a lot of things. So now I am on my way, and the Gunga Din of the press row will never be around any more with the water bucket and the tin cup on hot nights. You guys will miss me when you have swallowed a few pounds of rosin dust some night because I won't be there. One-Eyed Connelly is going to wash up."

And that was the last of One-Eyed Connelly. He snubbed the rest of the world's series and he hasn't attended any of the big football games this fall.

Has any one seen One-Eyed Connelly? He is fat and not exactly tidy, but he is very democratic. He is, or was, the living Happy Hooligan, always trying to do some unsolicited service for some one, and always spilling the chowder down somebody's neckband.

He will answer to the names of Mugg, Egg, Sap, Bum, or Hey.

If he is still living he is a pest.

If that cold carried him off he was a well meaning and often helpful guy, after all.

THE RAVAGES OF REFINEMENT.

In the bad old days of yore
All the fighters smoked and swore,
And they often wrapped their knuckles up in lead.
And there were no financiers
Wearing cauliflower ears,
And a book was what a fighter never read.
Then they fought on fens and dunes,
And in stables and saloons;
In seclusion, in the valley or the high land,
Save, occasionally, they
Were allowed to get away
With a modicum of strife at Coney Island.
Now the atmosphere is pleasant,
And the fighters of the present,
Though they may be rather rough to one another,
Never mention "dose" and "dese,"
And they read from Socrates;
And they bust right out and bawl at thoughts of Mother.
Well, I guess that's fair enough,
Though I like 'em coarse and tough,
I appreciate the moral realignment.
When a guy learns double entry
And is welcomed to the gentry,
I suppose he must surrender to refinement.

SKATING BOARD SETS DATES FOR 13 ICE TOURNEYS

Officials Expect Season to Break All Records.

Dates for thirteen ice skating tournaments were awarded at the last meeting of the Board of Control of the Western Skating association, the governing body of the amateur ice sport in this section of the country, President Frank M. Kalteux of the association announced last night. Included in the award of the thirteen tournament dates are five championship meets.

The annual Silver Skates Derby of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the largest ice skating meet in the world, will be held Jan. 23 and Jan. 24 in Garfield park. The dates were sanctioned by the W. S. A., and officials of the organization again pledged their full support to the tournament which has developed more championship skaters than any other meet staged in this country. Last year the tournament was run off in a single day but the increasing number of entries has moved officials of THE TRIBUNE A. A. and the Western Skating association to allow two days for the big program.

Five Championship Meets.

The five championship tournaments scheduled include the Central States championships of the Elgin Skating club on Jan. 2 at Elgin, Ill.; the western championships on Jan. 3 by the Antlers Sportsmen's club at Humboldt park; the Chicago championships on Jan. 10 to be held by the Norwegian-American A. A. at Humboldt park; the Illinois State championships at Douglas park, Jan. 17, under auspices of the Opal A. A., and the Tri-State championships on Jan. 31 by the Northwest Skating club at Humboldt park.

Five New Clubs.

Five new clubs were admitted to the association. The new organizations are the Barrett A. C., Interstate A. A., Ravenswood A. C., Belmont Park A. C. and the Lake Shore Skating club.

The sanctioned dates awarded follow:

Dec. 27—Lake Shore Skating club at Lake Shore park, Clarendon and Leland avenues.
Jan. 1—Sleipner A. C. at Humboldt park.
Jan. 2—Elgin Skating club at Elgin, Ill. [central states championships].
Jan. 3—Antlers Sportsmen's club at Humboldt park [western championships].
Jan. 9—Northwest park district at Kosciuszko park.
Jan. 10—Norwegian-American A. A. at Humboldt park [Chicago championships].
Jan. 16—Ravenswood A. C. at Winnemac park [carnival and Derby].
Jan. 17—Opal A. A. at Douglas park [Illinois state championships].
Jan. 23-24—CHICAGO TRIBUNE A. A. Silver Skates Derby at Garfield park.
Jan. 27—Henry Playground club at Humboldt park.
Jan. 30—Barrett A. C. at Garfield park [evening carnival and Derby].
Jan. 31—Northwest Skating club at Humboldt park [tri-state championships].
Feb. 7—Alverno A. A. at Humboldt park.

KICKING DEMON

Frosty Peters, University of Illinois freshman star, who established record of 17 drop kicks in a game in Montana.
[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

Frosty Peters Shivers in His Role as Illini

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Frosty Peters half back on the University of Illinois freshman squad, is starting out his varsity football career carrying a heavy burden. Some newspaper caption writer styled him a "successor to Grange."

Now Peters has excellent possibilities, but so far he has not shown symptoms of possessing talents which would indicate that he will follow the glorious path that Red Grange blazed. He made good as a regular on the first freshman eleven and the coaches believe that they can develop him into a mighty good player—how good can only be told when he is tested in the big games.

Sets Drop Kick Record.

Peter's prime talent just now is drop kicking. It is a matter of record that he booted seventeen drop kicks in a game played by the University of Montana freshman eleven. According to the rule book statistics, this is a record. He is a good punter as well.

Peters has latent talents as an open field runner. He is fast despite his weight of 175 pounds. But he has a lot to learn about blocking and tackling. When Bob Zuppke takes hold of him at spring practice he ought to learn a lot about all departments of the game. If he responds to teaching he has a mighty good chance to win a job on the varsity and he ought to make a name for himself.

Not Another Grange—Yet!

But the Illini coaches prayerfully appeal to the sport world not to label him or any other freshman at Illinois as a "successor to Grange." They don't believe there will be any such person—at least, not for a long time. They do expect that Illinois will be scoring touchdowns now and then and they will not be surprised to see Frosty helping a lot to this end.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

PRO FOOTBALL.

COACH JESS HAWLEY of Dartmouth's championship eleven advances an argument, new to The Wake in that application, why professional football never will equal in quality the collegiate brand.

"Do you know where a coach gets his best material?" he asked us in a fanning bee. We didn't, so he continued: "From the sophomores! They're more ambitious and responsive. Being on the varsity squad is a novelty to them. In the junior year they have improved in experience, but not in enthusiasm. To the seniors it is an old story. They are more mechanically perfect and make fewer mistakes, perhaps, but that team spirit we call morale is less. I don't mean they 'lay down,' but they're harder to arouse emotionally. I never want an eleven which is all seniors. If this is true in college, how much more so in the pro field, where there is not the spur of college loyalty?

"I saw the Thanksgiving day pro game in Chicago. To a college coach it was not good football. It pleased and satisfied the public. It looked better than it was. Defense is largely individual play. One reason the defense looked so good was because there was no diversified attack. It was either a line plunge, an end run, or a pass. Deception was utterly lacking, and deception is a prime factor in all modern attack.

"I do not deny pro football its right to exist, but I feel it never will take the place of or even be a serious rival of college football."

"Give Me Juniors," Page Says.

We expounded Hawley's theory of class values to Pat Page, once assistant to Director Stagg at Chicago, who has since put Butler college of Indianapolis on the western athletic map.

"I wouldn't go so far as to call sophomores better than juniors," Pat replied. "The boys are going well as juniors in their second year on the team, with enough college experience to steady them. But Hawley is absolutely right about seniors. I had twelve on my team at Butler this fall and we weren't getting anywhere. They were too self-satisfied and sure of their places. Finally I dropped two seniors from the team and told all the others they were not regulars unless they earned their places. From that time on we had a better team."

Commonwealth Grid Dinner.

The Wake congratulates President E. S. Ballard, Toastmaster Albert R. Brucker, and members of the Commonwealth club on the success of their first gridiron dinner Thursday night. In attendance of football notables and their exchanges of thought on current problems it was the biggest thing of its kind ever held in Chicago. We feel safe in saying that every one of more than 600 guests hopes the affair will be repeated next year.

Snow—A Nursery Rhyme.

There's an old lady up in the sky, so high
Her home looks down on the clouds;
The sun and the moon are her candles,
And the stars hang round her in crowds.

This old lady keeps a big flock of white geese,
During summer she fattens them up;
And then in the winter she barbecues geese
That all of her children may sup.

So when you look out of your window at dawn
And you see that the whitest of fleece
Is spread in profusion all over the lawn,
You'll know she is picking her geese.

Simple Signals.

Coach Knute Rockne of Notre Dame told one of his characteristic stories at the Commonwealth club dinner. It concerned a colored team he saw play at Atlanta, Ga. "The signals called by the quarter back," said Rockne, "were all in big figures, 1,000,000, or 800,000, or 600,000, never less than 100,000. Meantime the star full back sat on the side lines. Finally at a psychological point he was called into the lineup. He strutted to his position, and as the quarter back began rolling off the numerals the big fellow shouted, 'Never mind the signals. Interference, follow me.'"

"Player of Greatest Value."

Voting for the award of THE TRIBUNE's second annual trophy for the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team during the season just ended is so close that comment on its progress is withheld until all the ballots are in.

The award is based on votes of the ten coaches, nine officials, Commissioner Griffith, and The Wake. Two coaches and one official who went east to see games there after the Big Ten season asked more time for consideration of their first and second choices.

Ride like the royal families of Europe

TO-DAY on the cars of the great royal families of Europe, on the very cream of the world's finest pleasure cars—Fiat, Peugot, Delauney-Belleville, Isotta Fraschini, Lancia, Delage, Austro-Daimler and Minerva—Hartford Shock Absorbers are standard equipment.

Why? Simply this. Only Hartfords make possible "aeroplane" motoring, that gorgeously satisfying sensation of smooth bird-like flight.

People who can afford to pay any price for motoring comfort use Hartfords—yet Hartfords cost only $19 to $50 a set, depending upon the weight and model of your car.

In racing, where "vibration is death," all the great drivers insist on Hartfords. The tremendous speed, the vicious side sway, the sickening "leaping" that vibration sets up can only be smoothed away by Hartfords.

For 14 years, every winner of the 500 Mile Memorial Day Sweepstakes at Indianapolis has used them. In 1924 and 1925 every car that finished was Hartford equipped.

Try "aeroplane" motoring on your own car for 30 days.

Under the now famous "Hartford Trial Contract" we are authorized to install on your car a set of 4 Hartford Shock Absorbers for a 30-day trial at the maker's risk. If you want to know a motoring thrill unlike anything else you have ever experienced, this is your opportunity.

BELGIANS FLASH TO VICTORY IN BIKE RACE FINISH

Goosens-Debaets Lap the Field in Last Minutes.

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Cæsar Debaets and Alphonse Goosens, Belgian team, lapped the field tonight in the closing hour of the six day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden and carried off the premier honors of the thirty-ninth international grind in this city—the first in Tex Richard's new arena.

CAESAR DEBAETS.

A crowd of nearly 20,000 shrieking cycling enthusiasts saw the riders from the land of Albert circle their field of nine rival teams in one of the most spectacular riding orgies a six day race close has produced in recent years.

Sprint Three Miles for Lap.

With their advantage of a lap gained through terrific riding through the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth mile sprints and within a few minutes of the close of the race, Debaets and Goosens snatched victory from the veteran Reggie McNamara and his young Italian partner, Franco Georgetti.

Two teams entered the closing hour deadlocked mileage, but with McNamara and Georgetti leading on a point basis by a score of 243 to 218. The crowd went wild as the Belgians, two of the gamest ever to push a pedal, rode around the rest of the field to a lap advantage and victory.

Kockler-Stockholm Sixth.

McNamara and Georgetti finished second, one lap behind the Belgians. Tied for third position on mileage covered during the race were the teams of Bobby Walthour Jr. and Freddie Spencer, Harris Horder and Harry Horan, Otto Pstri and Willie Coburn and Ernest Kockler and Carl Stockholm. On the point basis, however, Walthour and Spencer finished third, with 196 tallies. The Chicago team of Kockler and Stockholm were sixth. The final standing:

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question E. J. Felke, 1210 West Washington street, Wilmette, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Should a professional football team have cheer leaders to pep up the crowd?

Where Asked.

Adams street and Michigan avenue.

The Answers.

Irvin H. Bowman, 3520 Sheridan road, architectural student—Cheer leaders at college games add color to the occasion and keep the crowd at a high pitch of excitement, and the cheering lends moral support to the combating elevens. The business of cheer leaders is an important one, for it helps to keep the spectators amused during the half time intermission. I believe that pro football should also have its cheer leaders.

Thomas A. Madden, 550 Ash street, Winnetka, Ill., student—I don't think they should. The financial compensation the players receive, coupled with the realization that the better the games the larger the crowd peps up the play sufficiently. The crowds would be more interested if something to hold their interest were introduced between the halves.

Joseph Albano, 1538 Edgemont avenue, student—No. I don't think the professional teams need cheer leaders. Football fans are not paying to hear a lot of cheers; they want action. There is not the same spirit in pro football and the college sport, which means that cheer leading would be a failure.

A. W. Sullivan, architectural student—I believe that cheer leading at professional games would help the sport. Partisanship among the public for certain pro teams is almost as strong as that of college rooters. Organized cheer leading would create more interest in pro football.

Edwin C. Jorgensen, 1319 Wilcox street, Joliet, Ill., student—Professional football should have cheer leaders to pep up the players and the crowd. College football presents a good example of how cheer leaders stir the spectators, and if the Bears or Cardinals should introduce the cheer leader novelty I believe it would be a success.

Pointers, Setters Getting Ready for Big Field Trials

BY BOB BECKER.

The January dog days will soon be here as the pointers and setters campaigning like chautauqua performers on the quail circuit are due to gather in Grand Junction, Tenn., during January to participate in the field trial classics national championship.

Dog lovers who want to see a great collection of college bred bird dogs, representing the last word in blue blood and scientific training, romp through a lovely quail country and handle the tricky Bob Whites, won't be disappointed if they put in a few days at Grand Junction, as the field trial dogs know how to circle the ends, crash the tackles, and forward pass to the quail coveys that inhabit the quaint old cotton country.

The national championship field trial is slated to begin Jan. 18. This is usually rated as the top-notcher, because the winning of the national championship blue ribbon is enough to make any aristocratic setter or pointer put on the dog and enables him to strut around as "champion." Incidentally there is a purse of $1,000, as well as the Col. Arthur Merriman trophy, both which go along with the coveted first place.

Grand Junction is just a little more than an overnight ride from Chicago. Considering the accessibility of the place we have often wondered why more dog fanciers and dog lovers, hunters, quail fans, and other outdoorsmen do not attend the January field trials held there. The dogs are an education and an inspiration, although frequently envy creeps in, as who can help but covet such dogs as McTyre, Phil Essig, Muscle Shoals Jake, Mo Gold, Master Rodfield's Doctor, Major Kid, Man o' War, Dough Boy, and a hundred other beautiful bird handlers that represent the last word in blood, bird sense, and training.

ARMY'S CHARGES SWAMP SAILORS ON GRID, 17 TO 6

The army triumphed over the navy again yesterday when Fort Sheridan's doughboy team beat the gobs from Great Lakes Naval Training station, 17 to 6, in a game which was played in a snowstorm on the frozen gridiron of Soldiers' field before 2,000 fans.

The navy got the first break in the game by blocking Taylor's attempt at a place kick and recovering on their own twenty-five. The doughboys held, however, and when the second quarter began they started a march from their 40 yard line straight for the navy goal. Wurst broke away for a run of over 30 yards from scrimmage, putting the ball on the navy 23 yard line. After a series of line plays Wurst scored.

Taylor kicked off deep into navy territory and when the gobs could not gain Wingfield got off a short punt which was downed on his own forty-five. Here O'Brien got away with three successive long gains and Taylor and Wurst shoved the ball to the five yard line. Twice the navy was off side and was penalized half the distance to the goal, so that Taylor didn't have far to plunge for the second touchdown.

Emwell, who went in for O'Brien, took the navy kickoff back to the 35 yard line and on the next play went to midfield. Taylor and Wurst carried the ball to the twenty-five yard line. After the army was penalized for off side Taylor dropped back to the 35 yard line and put over a pretty place kick for the last army score.

Horses Worth $2,000,000 Ready for Show Here

The Chicago Riding club has been successful in its effort to offer Chicago and the middle west the greatest horse show ever held in America.

MAX CORPENING.

The stage is set, a record breaking number of show horses are on the scene, there are close to 2,000 entries in the different classes, and every indication last night pointed to capacity crowds for every session of the brilliant pageant which opens in the new $1,500,000 Riding club at 8 o'clock Tuesday night.

Five hundred show horses were quartered at the Riding club and in the near vicinity last night awaiting the signal from President Coolidge which will send the great show into motion. All day yesterday, the thud of the hoof beats resounded in musical rhythm in the picturesque tan bark arena as many of the contestants went through final drill for their bid for the American championships.

$2,000,000 in Horses.

Every day last week witnessed the arrival of trains from the far west, north, east, and southern sections of the United States and Canada, bringing in special cars, the most valuable bits of horse flesh in America. The horses to be shown here during the week total more than $2,000,000 in value.

A redoubtable group of foreign contenders, representing Great Britain, Belgium and France, has been training for competition against a crack team representing the United States in the military classes. The foreign horses are to be ridden by worthy representatives of other lands, and they demonstrated skill and class in their preliminary workouts that caused many Chicagoans who witnessed the exhibitions to look with fear on the chance Uncle Sam's riders may have in the struggle for the championship in the military division.

Late Entries Received.

Many late entries for the rich prizes were in the hands of Maxwell Corpening, managing director of the Riding club, last night. They included the following stables:

Betty Matthews, Josephine Franks, Mrs. Morris Vehon, B. M. Rosenheim, Dr. Thomas A. Carter, Fred B. Pearson, Frank J. Moffett, Alfa Elaine Bahr, Francis Johnson, Frank W. Bering, B. F. Stern, Alfred E. Bahr, L. M. Newgrass, and H. Strotz, all of Chicago.

Late out of town entries include:

J. D. Farrell, Seattle, Wash.; J. McE. Bowman, Fort Chester, N. J.; Benjamin Leslie Behr, Lake Forest, Ill.; B. F. Stern, Waukegan, Ill.; Ray L. Davis, Los Angeles; Heyl Pony farm, Washington, Ill.; Miss Maude F. Banks, Los Angeles; M. F. Cudahy, Cudahy, Wis.; Ray A. Graham, Detroit; Capt. W. Dirk Van Ingen, Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Brentwood Hall stables, Nashville, Tenn., and Bessie Williamson, Lake Villa, Ill.

125 Classes of Competition.

Championships are to be decided in 125 classes, which will provide busy scenes in the tan bark arena at every session of the show. There are eight champion trophy and ribbon events, seven $1,000 stakes, two $500 stakes, and championships will be awarded in the three and five gaited saddle, harness, roadster single, hackney pony, heavy hunters, middle weight hunters, light hunters, and many other divisions.

The national show is being staged not only to establish Chicago as the center of the horse industry of America, but also as a charity performance. The proceeds go to the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, of which Mrs. Chauncey McCormick is president.

Working with a committee, Mrs. McCormick has been in charge of the advance ticket sale and many brilliant society gatherings are assured during the different sessions of the show.

FREEPORT BEATS PENNSY GRIDDERS IN PREP BATTLE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 6.—(AP)—In an intersectional football game at Pitt stadium this afternoon, Freeport [Ill.] High school defeated Ellwood City [Pa.] High school, interscholastic champions of western Pennsylvania, 13 to 7. The game was played in ankle deep mud and water.

Half Back Bere registered Freeport's first touchdown after a 42 yard run. A forward pass accounted for the extra point. The Illinois boys scored again when Paul, an end, recovered a fumble behind the Ellwood City goal line. After a plunging march down the field Ellwood City scored in the closing period.

Again---
Outselling all competition

Without giving comparative figures, it is enough to know that again during the month of November, official registrations show more people bought the New Oakland Six in Chicago and Cook County than any other make, with the exception of two materially lower priced cars, Ford and Chevrolet, and Buick with its two distinct chassis types.

Again in November official registrations show positive proof of the New Oakland Six leadership by outselling all competitive makes in Chicago and Cook County. Sheer merit alone accounts for this continued popularity as shown by Oakland sales month after month—conclusive proof of Oakland's outstanding value, modern construction and remarkable performance. The shrewd motor buying public is quick to recognize Oakland's outstanding superiority. Only the public and Oakland's unusual manufacturing facilities make this record possible.

When you have been at Oakland's wheel, have investigated Oakland's many refinements, improvements, and compared its value with competition, you will readily understand this unusual achievement.

New Price $70 to $350 lower, plus savings of as much as $40 to $60 on the GMAC Time Payment Plan.

BAKER OUT FOR NORTHWESTERN BASKET TEAM

Coach Kent Has Squad of 15 Veterans.

Moon Baker, captain-elect of the 1926 Northwestern football team, reported for basketball practice yesterday. Coach Maury Kent now has fifteen experienced candidates for his team. Christman, White, Greaves and Mathews are among last year's veterans who are after their old places. Competition promises to be unusually keen however, because of the wealth of sophomore material. Most promising of the newcomers are Bobby Rusch of Yankton, S. D., and Harold Gleichman of Rockford, Ill. Gleichman and Baker were teammates at Rockford a few years back.

Coach Kent in past years has favored the short pass game, but this year he plans to combine the short and long style.

The season will open Dec. 15 at Evanston against Notre Dame. The schedule:

Dec. 15—Notre Dame at Evanston.
Dec. 21—Michigan State at Evanston.
Dec. 30—Notre Dame at Notre Dame.
Jan. 2—Kansas Aggies at Evanston.
Jan. 4—Mercer at Evanston.
Jan. 9—Michigan at Evanston.
Jan. 16—Purdue at Lafayette.
Jan. 18—Indiana at Evanston.
Jan. 23—Wisconsin at Madison.
Jan. 25—Iowa at Evanston.
Feb. 12—Ohio State at Evanston.
Feb. 16—Wisconsin at Evanston.
Feb. 20—Iowa at Iowa City.
Feb. 27—Ohio State at Columbus.
March 2—Indiana at Bloomington.
March 6—Purdue at Evanston.
March 8—Michigan at Ann Arbor.

BUTLER FIRST ILLINI FOE

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois basketball season will open next Saturday night, against Butler. This will be the first game on the playing floor in the new gymnasium.

Coach Craig Ruby has intact practically the same team which last year won eight games and lost four, thereby gaining second place in conference ranking. Karnes and Hollopeter are the only varsity men missing. On the face of it, this should give the Illini a brilliant outlook, but the situation is not as bright as it seems. A great handicap last year was the lack of a tall jumping center, and the new men this year do not include any six footers except one.

The varsity letter men are as follows: Forwards, Daugherity, Mauer, Martin and Lipe; guards, Capt. Haines, Reynolds and Kassel.

Of the new men, J. K. Deimling of Stephens Point, Wis., and B. C. Doolen of Kinmundy, seem to be attracting the most attention. The schedule is as follows:

Dec. 12—Butler at Illinois.
Dec. 19—Drake at Des Moines.
Dec. 21—Iowa State Agricultural college at Ames.
Jan. 4—Kansas Aggies at Illinois.
Jan. 11—Minnesota at Illinois.
Jan. 16—Ohio at Columbus.
Jan. 18—Michigan at Ann Arbor.
Jan. 23—Chicago at Illinois.
Feb. 6—Notre Dame at Illinois.
Feb. 10—Purdue at Illinois.
Feb. 13—Ohio at Illinois.
Feb. 19—Indiana at Bloomington.
Feb. 22—Chicago at Illinois.
Feb. 26—Michigan at Illinois.
March 1—Purdue at Lafayette.
March 6—Indiana at Illinois.
March 8—Minnesota at Minneapolis.

PURDUE OPENS TUESDAY

Lafayette, Ind., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Since the close of the football season Memorial gymnasium has been a busy place with the basketball, indoor track, swimming, fencing, and gymnastic squads getting into shape with daily drills.

Coach Ward Lambert's court squad, which opens its schedule next week, playing Indiana State Normal quintet here Tuesday night, is the center of attraction. After making their debut for the 1925-'26 season, the Boilermaker basketeers will have only a few days in which to prepare for their tilt with De Pauw here next Friday.

Although Capt. Spradling, Melvin Taube, Carl Cramer, and Harold Harmeson, letter men, are expected to be the mainstays of Purdue's basket squad, a number of reserves and sophomores are likely to step into the limelight before the court card is completed.

Loren Hodges, Pete Jolly, Paul Neuman, Chester Wilcox, Bob Wilson, and Chester Rigsby all appear to be talented basketball players, and it is certain they will see a great deal of service during the impending season.

Five Maine players were picked by conference coaches for the All West Suburban eleven. The team's record:

STECHER, JUDSON MEET TOMORROW IN FINISH BOUT

Calza and Linow Also on Card.

Joe Stecher, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, and Frank Judson, former mat instructor at Harvard university, will take holds in the main event of the wrestling show to be conducted by Joe Coffey in the Coliseum tomorrow night. It will be a finish match, best two in three falls and the grapplers will be in the ring ready to take holds at 10 o'clock.

Judson is one of the most popular matmen to appear in Chicago in recent years. His clean wrestling combined with his knowledge of the game makes him a worthy opponent for the body scissors king. The former Harvard instructor has all the actions of the late Frank Gotch and is master of many holds.

Body Scissors Joe's Favorite.

Stecher relies upon the body scissors for his victories. He twines his long legs around the bodies of opponents from any position. While Joe knows something of other locks, the body scissors will be the offensive weapon used to bring about the desired result. Both are evenly matched in weight with Stecher having a slight advantage in height and reach.

George Calza, the wrestling idol of Italian mat fans, will clash with Ivan Linow, known as the wild man of the mat game. Linow has again grown a full beard and expects to give the Italian an interesting match for a time at least. It will be a one fall match.

Dick Daviscourt of Wichita, Kas., will take on Alex. Nelson of Canada in one of the preliminaries, while John Pesek, a great heavyweight, will meet the best opponent available in the other match on the card.

McMahon Named Referee.

John McMahon will referee all contests and Promoter Coffey announced 5,000 seats at one dollar each will be available.

Ed "Strangler" Lewis, another claimant of the heavyweight title, will be in Chicago Tuesday to complete preparation for his finish match with Leon Labriola, the Italian, at the Dreamland arena on Dec. 14. Labriola is being groomed by Paul Bowser, the well known eastern trainer. Promoter Paddy Harmon announced that three other bouts, yet to be arranged, will complete the card.

Onwentsia Club Spends $20,000 on Golf Course

Members of the Onwentsia club will have the same par to shoot at next year, but several of the holes will be improved during the winter and the exactions made more difficult.

The sixth, seventh, twelfth, and fourteenth holes are the ones being revamped. The twelfth is being made into a dog leg, and the fairways are undergoing changes and improvements. All of these greens are being raised. Onwentsia annually spends around $20,000 in improving the course, and it is estimated that fully that much will be spent on the present alterations.

Members of the Glen Oak Country club elected J. A. Barkey president, Dr. H. K. Nicoll first vice president, H. E. Devereux second vice president, Penrose Reed secretary, and W. C. Kirby treasurer.

Among the directors elected were John A. O'Neill, W. H. Hodge, Louis J. Pelikan, Rollo C. Kearsley, Don M. Jones, William H. Chenoweth, Ellis McDonald, Charles W. Irrgang, William McGuire, and F. W. Pringle.

The BULL'S EYE

Editor and General Manager WILL ROGERS

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Follies and screen star and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

THE BULL'S EYE (with the possible exception of the Congressional Record) is one of the most clean-minded, upright, stalwart, and—what is the other word they always use? Well, anyhow, we have the nucleus here of a great Periodical.

A few weeks ago the Newspapers held a kind of investigation to see if it was possible to run a paper without sensational features. They voted you couldn't do it (they wanted to use Sensationalism because that kind of news was easy to find).

But Ye Olde Reliable BULL'S EYE will show you that you can successfully run a paper on Baptist's Basis. If you are looking for your favorite Murder Case, we don't carry it. If you are figuring on a Divorce and want publicity, you are not going to get into our paper. If you are contemplating murdering somebody so you can go into Vaudeville, you are Non-Compos Mentis, so far as we are concerned. We are not sensational. We only take one Ad a week, and that one Ad must be gone over thoroughly. We are like the Saturday Evening Post (another good paper). This week the article we decided to have the most merit was "BULL" DURHAM. Next week it may be something else. But of course in the meantime, if there has nothing showed up which is superior to "BULL" DURHAM, why it may be "BULL" DURHAM again.

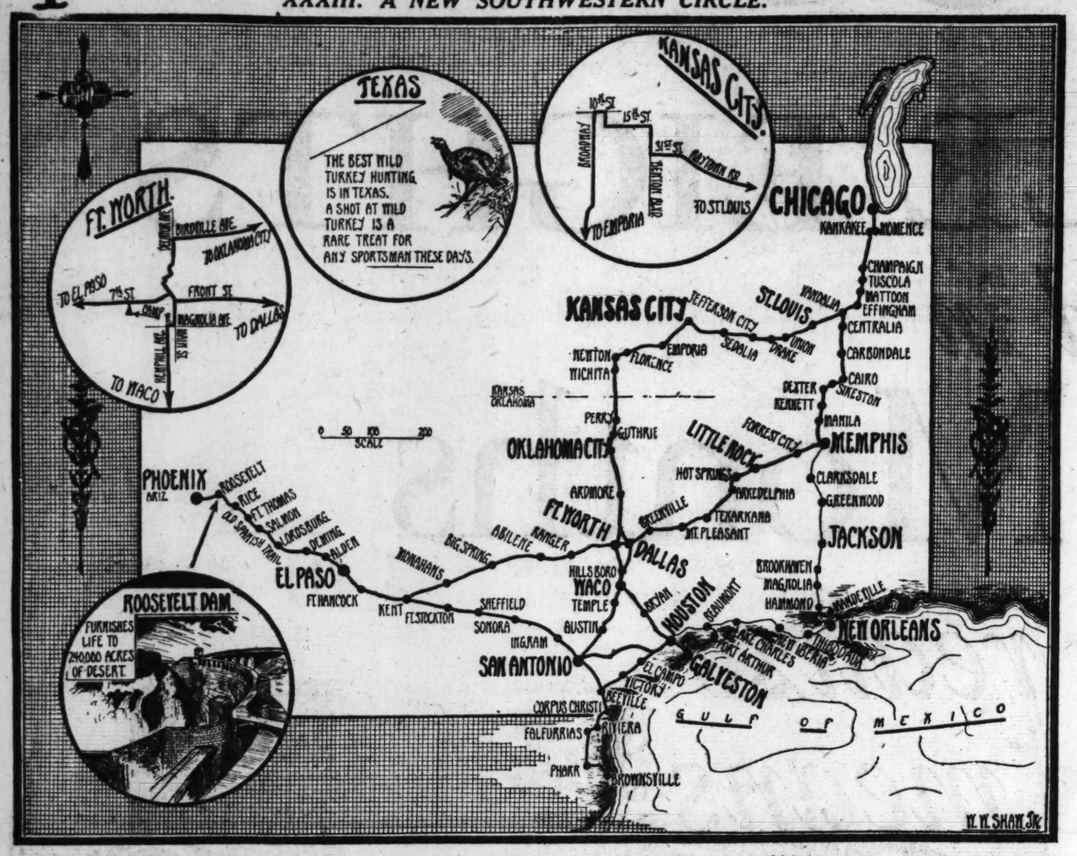
TRIBUNE TOURS

XXXIII. A NEW SOUTHWESTERN CIRCLE.



CONSTRUCTION work in every southern state has been advanced to a point that allows safe, if not altogether comfortable touring conditions on practically all of the main state and interstate highways.

Here is a new tour possibility, brought about by the rush of highway improvement, which has pulled the southwest from the mud in little more than a year's time.

It uses the Illinois solid concrete pavements either to St. Louis or Cairo and surfaced roads to Texas and the southwest. Between St. Louis and Kansas City the new state highway will be complete in January, according to official reports. Now a few stretches of rough stone or maintained earth break the trip. Kansas earth, gravel, and paved roads take the route on to Oklahoma and surfaced roads carry on the rest of the way to meet pavements across Texas.

The southern route crosses the Mississippi at Cairo, where latest schedules show ferries plying every thirty minutes from Cairo to Missouri shore at Birds Point. Pavements and gravel, rough in places, go south and west into Dallas.

ACCIDENT AVERAGE.

Automobile accidents in St. Louis, Mo., average 200 daily. Forty per cent of the accidents, ranging from battered fenders and punctured radiators to serious smashups, occur during the joyriding period, from 11 p. m. to 6 a. m. Sixty per cent occur between 3 p. m. and 10 p. m.

Comfort for Cops.

In the belief that traffic policemen will be more affable and polite with their pedal extremities heated, safety islands in the middle of busy streets in Berlin, Germany, will be equipped with electric foot warmers. Another new fixture of the so-called "islands," which are octagonal in shape, will be paid advertisements on their eight sides, which will be illuminated at night.

Automobile Race Mentors Moved to National Capital

HEREAFTER official automobile racing in the United States will be directed from the national headquarters of the American Automobile association in Washington, according to an announcement made by Ernest N. Smith, general manager of the national motoring body.

The announcement was made coincident with the removal of the contest board of the A. A. A., which is the official body in charge of racing events, from Franklin, Pa., to the national headquarters in the Mills building in Washington.

"The bringing of the contest board to Washington," said General Manager Smith, "is in line with the policy of the association to concentrate all its larger activities and all the national departments.

"The work of the board is assuming greater proportions every year for the reason that automobile racing as a great popular sport and as a tremendous asset to the automotive industry in America is making great headway in public esteem. No change in policy is contemplated but the change of domicile is intended only to facilitate the work of the board and to give the greatest degree of coördination to its activities."

Richard Kennerdell of Franklin, Pa., will continue as chairman of the board. The staff of the board, including P. C. Pommer, secretary, have already been installed at A. A. A. headquarters.

HANDY MAGNET.

A small horseshoe magnet is an indispensable instrument in the tool kit. It is handy for recovering nuts and bolts that have been dropped into the drip pan or valve keys that have slipped behind the valves.

Church Sees Fast Freight Highways as National Need

MAJ. ELIHU CHURCH, traffic engineer of the port of New York, is authority for the statement that this country will soon be gridironed by a great system of motor trunk line highways, which will revolutionize present methods of transportation. He predicts that it is only a question of time when special roads must be built for the exclusive use of food and freight carriers.

Since this condition seems inevitable, engineers urge that a system of special motor truck highways be planned at once.

Maj. Church also points out that such highways, when properly built, will shorten the distace between cities and hills leveled so that a speed of 20 miles an hour or more can be maintained for long distances.

Japan Is Seeking Better Highways

Good roads in Japan are as hard to find as the proverbial haystack needle, but if a bill which is being planned by the home department is enacted by the next diet, automobiles in that country will come in for their own. The proposed plan is either to build new highways or improve the present ones at a cost of some 300,000,000 yen, one-third of which will be furnished by the government.

Under the proposed bill the government grants would some in 10 yearly installments, the first beginning next year. It is planned to widen and pave the important highways in rural districts, which at present are unfit for automotive transportation, and to improve such public roads over which railway construction is projected.

QUALITY AT LOW COST

-Now you can buy a PEERLESS for $1595

SCORES of present Peerless owners were invited to the factory to view and test the first of these low price 6-80 Sedans. Each was given a ride—over roads of every condition—up steep and tortuous hills. Each was placed at the wheel and told to test the car in his own way.

Then each was asked "What price will we put on this car?"

Without exception, every answer was hundreds of dollars higher than the amazing low price of $1595. No one could believe it possible that Peerless could build such exceptional value and yet offer it at a price so remarkably low.

Check for yourself some of these Peerless features, but above all things, drive the car and then you'll know.

Designed for Comfort

Peerless Engineers designed this advanced 6-80 to meet a modern need for a car of short wheel base, yet with abundant body room of exceptional sturdiness for safe, dependable riding.

A 116 inch wheelbase assures ability to turn within a 40 foot circle. Any woman can turn this car on any city street—surely, easily, quickly. Yet to look at this car you would think that it was 8 or 10 inches longer.

The motor has a seven-bearing crankshaft which assures complete elimination of vibration at all speeds. This crankshaft is mounted on seven large bearings (2¾") and its smooth, steady action is further refined by a Lanchester dampener—a combination of engineering precision designed to entirely eliminate vibration.

Take any hill on high in this new 6-80 Sedan. Go from 5 to 25 miles in seven seconds.

Speed well up to 70 miles an hour and experience a new understanding of what this modern Peerless motor will do without vibration. Its pick-up is always ahead of the other fellow. You cut across streams of traffic without that appalling fear that you won't quite make it.

Many Finished Details

The accelerator is flat and long and broad. It is almost super-sensitive in its response.

Seats—low, deep and set at just the correct comfort angle. You sit at ease as you drive or ride in this Peerless Six Sedan. Throughout, the fabric is of a fine grade of mohair, soft in color, rich in appearance, yet lasting because it is good.

The finish is enduring Lacquer, the kind that keeps its richness and life even after years of driving.

No more grit or grime in your crankcase oil—the Peerless Purolator eliminates all such annoyance from your motor.

The value in this new Peerless Sedan is there—you sense it. You see it in every detail. You know it after a single ride in the car.

Such value is an outstanding achievement in this day of constantly bettered automobiles. Order your new Peerless 6-80 today.

Three States Go on Record for Wide Road Plan

Chicago Highway Scheme Enlists National Support.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

CHICAGO'S wide highway movement swept Wisconsin, Indiana, and builders representing Uncle Sam into the fold as a result of the Chicago Regional Planning association's annual meeting just closed at the Sherman hotel.

Launched less than a year ago with the idea of promoting wider roads and improved transportation within a 50 mile radius of Chicago, the coöperative organization has grown to include the official road building agencies of three states, more than a dozen counties in Illinois, and every agency directly interested in highway traffic and road improvement in Cook county and Chicago proper. It has won pledges of road building coöperation—the widening and improvement of old and new trunk line roads and connecting them up in a unified plan—from the state highway departments of Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Indiana, and has completed the first general survey for the actual improvement work.

James T. Voshell, engineer in charge of the United States highway district which embraces the central states, presided at the highway division conference and outlined the coöperative building plan.

"This regional road plan," he explained, "began with the idea of clearing away traffic barriers and developing necessary pavement widths to meet current traffic demands on main roads within a 50 mile radius of the Chicago terminal. Now fifty miles is proving only the yards limit of the movement. On some of the trunk lines under consideration there is no limit to the distance other than the two oceans. Milwaukee, St. Louis, Madison, and Indianapolis are as much interested in putting through the wide connected highways from terminal to terminal as we are here in Chicago. This movement is national in its scope."

Speaking for the Indiana highway department, G. E. Hershman pledged the Hoosier road building forces to direct coöperation with the regional widening and improvement scheme.

"Our first and hardest problem," he said, "lies in the Calumet district, where congestion of traffic and difficulties in new road building make an almost impossible mess of things. This regional plan lays out the new roads that must be built and the old roads that must be improved, and Indiana will strain its highway resources to co-operate. The automobile has cleared away all imaginary state lines. Movement into Chicago and from Chicago through the Calumet district is as important to us as it is to Chicago. We have graduated from the idea that 20, 30, or even 40 foot pavements are wide enough to handle these traffic needs, and realize that we must now build roads to the standard of traffic rather than to the old-fashioned construction widths. We need a fifty foot pavement around the lake right now, and we must have more new roads to divide and facilitate both freight and passenger traffic from Indiana into Chicago.

"Indiana has not yet reached its stride in road building. We are not spending as much a year for new roads as Illinois pays on its bonded highway debt, but we're for this regional plan and will meet our end of it."

George Lamb, speaking for the Illinois highway department, announced the new ruling which calls for 20 foot pavements and 44 foot bridges and culverts on all new state roads within the Chicago area bounded by Joliet on the south, Aurora and Elgin on the west, and the Wisconsin state line. This indicates that the state's pledge to coöperate in the wide highway plan is already operating, he pointed out, and that provision for 44 foot pavements in this zone is assured for the future. He outlined the traffic relief due with the building of the state's new $100,000,000 bond issue pavements and its interest in following the regional building scheme about Chicago.

Maintenance Engineer Isabella of the Wisconsin highway department backed up the Illinois road official.

"The entire state of Wisconsin is behind this regional lay-out of wider and straighter roads," he declared. "Our main artery into Chicago is Sheridan road, a 'snake trail' wholly inadequate to traffic demands. Wisconsin highway 57, the straight inside route between Chicago and Milwaukee, is our most important part of the plan. It will probably be the first pavement widened to meet the Chicago and Illinois improved system. We are after legislation now that will give us enlarged highway rights of way for our entire 10,000 mile road system.

"Fifty-three per cent of the tourist movement in Wisconsin comes from Chicago and Illinois. This totals 1,500,000 people annually from Illinois out of the total of 3,000,000 automobile visitors who toured Wisconsin in 1925."

Maj. R. F. Kelker Jr., Chicago traffic engineer, told officials of the various states and counties that Chicago will have 1,100,000 automobiles registered in its terminal zone by 1940 if conservatives estimates are realized.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Miss Vera Benchat, 809 Camp street, Baraboo, Wis., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you believe in stopping when a stranger hails you on the road at night?

Where Asked.

Diversey boulevard and Sheridan road.

The Answers.

William Johnson, 1942 South Gunderson avenue, Berwyn, salesman—I always slow up to see what the trouble might be when I am hailed on the road and always stop in case of accident, but never to pick up strangers at night. If the motorist slows down he can still make his getaway after sizing up the situation.

J. J. Walsh, 4626 Altgeld street, wholesale florist —I would not stop for any stranger along the country roads, either day or night, unless it was plain that he really needed help. There have been too many holdups when kind hearted motorists have picked up strangers to give them a lift. In case of accident, where the motorist can see a wrecked car along the road, he should always stop and offer assistance.

J. A. Huehiner, 159 North Wabash avenue, florist—I do not think it is policy to stop on the road at night for anybody these days. Bandits have even framed accidents to stop traffic, and even kids may carry guns that kill just as deadly as those toted by gangsters.

Henry M. Arnold, 2272 Logan boulevard, salesman — I never take a chance in stopping for a stranger on the road at night unless I can see that there has been an accident or the person is in need of help. The Chicago motorist cannot be too careful these days, even though the suspicion is ruining the old road good fellowship of drivers.

Joseph Kaskey, 3348 Irving Park boulevard, salesman— The chances of holdup are too great to warrant stopping at night, even in lighted city streets. There is less danger in stopping on country roads, but it is a poor policy. When people need help they should make it plain to the approaching driver.

Big League Races of Year Set New Safety Records

THE first nine months of the year 1925 marked a new record as far as safety for drivers participating in the official events sanctioned by the Contest board of the A. A. A. is concerned. Not a fatality has occurred on any of the official speedways and tracks during the 1925 season.

In commenting on this increase in the margin of safety, the A. A. A. Contest board called attention to the beneficial effects of instructions sent to all managers operating under its sanction. This letter said in part:

"Promoters are cautioned to make every possible effort to safeguard the lives of drivers, officials and spectators at all events."

In helping to raise the standard of safety each of the speedways constructed a complete steel, reinforced guard rail around the upper edge of the speedways and a corresponding guard rail to protect the inner fences.

Racing casualties were frequently reported in the last few months but these casualties occurred at the barnstorming type of racing which does not come under the board.

REAMING FADS.

When reaming pistons for wrist pins, there is danger of the piston striking the vise when they reach the edge of the cutters. By placing a piece of an old inner tube over the reamer this danger is avoided for, if the piston slips, the blow is cushioned by the rubber.

Trouble Prevention Object of Meeting

Trouble prevention will be the keynote of the Society of Automotive Engineers and National Automobile Chamber of Commerce joint meeting in the Hotel La Salle, Nov. 9-10.

For years the service managers of the car factories who are members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce have been giving attention to the improvement of repair facilities, including availability of parts when needed, but latterly it has been felt that it would be timely to stress the importance of educating the owners in ways of saving their cars from premature old age.

COST PER MILE.

The average price of a mile of concrete roadway, with an eighteen foot pavement and seven inches thick, is $30,000.

Detroit Prepares Feast for Motor Show Visitors

Radical Improvements in Design to Mark Exhibits.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich. Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Radical changes and advancement in automotive design, and more within the next three years than have been accomplished in the last decade, is the prediction of automobile manufacturers generally.

In higher up automobile circles one hears no end of talk of what the future motorist will be offered in the way of an automobile.

"When I say changes," said F. E. Moskovics of Stutz today, "I mean especially passenger cars of greater safety, vastly improved riding qualities, built much lower to the ground, with better brakes, and in all details in keeping with the real safety chassis."

It is pointed out that balloon tires have injected a new factor in chassis designs, and thus far this new factor has not been developed to its highest engineering possibilities. With this remedied, improved riding will result. Springs must also be designed to conform to the new set of conditions brought about by the use of the balloon tire.

It is believed by many manufacturers that lower built cars are necessary because they give greater safety, hold the road better, and are more comfortable to ride in. The general braking problem, too, is as nearly wide open as it ever was. It presents itself to the whole industry, under the headings of proper effectiveness of mechanical brakes, proper linings and their maintenance, and proper equalization of braking action.

At present there are 16 different spring methods, 8 types of eight cylinder motors, 11 types of transmission, and 15 types of axles. All of these cannot possibly be right, and the problem of the engineering world today is a combination of proper units to solve the advanced car of tomorrow.

It does not need an engineer to make it clear that great axle, great transmission, etc., will not make a great car, but only through a proper coordination of units can a really outstanding motor car be produced.

With the engineering department of the industry working as they are to solve many questions, it is predicted that a big step forward in automobile science is not far ahead.

Almost daily the automobile industry gives some new and convincing evidence of its prosperity. The latest development along this line was the purchase for cash, by the Dodge Brothers, Inc., of a controlling interest in Graham Brothers, the largest independent motor truck manufacturers in the world.

Dodge, organized with a very broad financial structure during the early months of the present year, is going to open up still wider the foreign field for passenger cars, and the two fields of light motor trucks, and motorized public conveyances. Its officials see a field ahead almost as large as the original motor car field was before it began to be occupied.

Great, indeed, is the extent of several motor car concerns for which people sometimes predict shrinkage, and eventually extinction. Financially, General Motors compares with the New York Central railroad; the Ford organization compares with the Standard Oil company in resources and actual properties, and with the American Telephone and Telegraph company in capitalization and property ownership.

Comparison of other companies engaged in the manufacture of automobiles shows them to be much larger in capital than the Sugar trust and the Harvester trust, both of which incurred public criticism on account of their size. But the bigness of the various automotive concerns doesn't frighten anybody, and immediate demand for their product will keep them big for years to come.

With the opening of the National Automobile show in New York only weeks away, Michigan manufacturers, who will supply a great majority of the exhibits both in passenger cars and trucks, are getting their show cars ready for close-up inspection by the thousands of visitors who will attend the annual classic.

As usual, special trains will be chartered to take the cars to both New York and Chicago, and January's exhibits promises to surpass all former shows.

The floor space at the Grand Central palace in New York, where this winter's show will be staged, has been increased, which will provide for an additional number of choice spaces. All angles of the motor car industry are awake to the added importance of the coming national show in New York by reason of the renewal at the same time of the World Motor Transport congress. This congress, which will be the second, the first having been held in Detroit in 1924, will attract automobile executives from all parts of the world. Representatives of 104 different countries have been invited to attend, and a big response is anticipated.

Static Electricity Adds Real Hazard to Motor Ownership

Do you ever wonder why it is that gasoline trucks have a chain dangling down to the ground when they travel along and when they stop? This is done to get rid of static electricity, which otherwise might set fire to the tank.

Static electricity in connection with gasoline is a subject which should be more familiar to motorists, as an element of danger is involved. In proof of this the Chicago Motor club accident prevention department cites the case of a naval surgeon whose automobile was destroyed and its owner severely burned through the firing of gasoline by a spark produced by frictional electricity. The surgeon had walked some distance to his garage in his overcoat and rubber boots. The friction of the flopping coat against the boots generated the electricity, while the rubber insulated him from the ground and allowed his body to store it. The spark therefore went through the grounded automobile, igniting the gasoline.

Another case is cited of a chauffeur who hung an ordinary five gallon can on the iron hook of the gas pump. The gasoline had been pumped when a spark jumped from the can to the pump and fired the gasoline. They put out the fire, and as the car was waiting to be filled they repeated the process and the gasoline caught fire again.

A large percentage of automobile mechanics may be seen smoking while working on cars, even when tinkering with vacuum tanks. Motorists seeing this conclude that gasoline has ceased to be dangerous, and because nothing happens they acquire a contempt for its known hazards. Sometimes, however, something does happen, and the result is always serious.

The vapor from a gallon of gasoline when mixed with the right portion of air produces a hazard equal to eighty-five pounds of dynamite.

If a motorist will consider the potential destructive power of gasoline on a par with dynamite fewer accidents of this nature will occur.

FARM AND GARDEN

Health Experts Back Dairymen's Cleanup Campaign

Only Disease-Free Herd Can Give Safe Milk, They Contend.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

PROGRESSIVE dairy farmers' war on tuberculosis in the Chicago territory is attracting attention throughout the entire United States. The fact that these dairymen were faced with the most difficult eradication situation in the country urged them to start the most vigorous campaign that has even been waged on this dreaded plague of the human and live stock families. All other cleanup campaigns have been simple compared with the one which the dairymen who supply milk to Chicago faced a few years ago.

Persistency and the coöperation of powerful organization, including state and federal governments, live stock interests, health experts and milk distributors, have made it possible for milk producers to do a thing that was once considered almost an impossibility. So successful have they been in this gigantic task that other dairy districts, including the milk producing belts surrounding big consuming centers, look upon Chicago's accomplishment as a clean cut demonstration of the feasibility of eventually driving cattle with tuberculosis out of the country.

Standards Going Up.

Realizing the possibility of getting milk from herds that are healthy, consumers are now setting higher standards and requiring a high quality of milk. Health authorities have reached the conclusion that high quality milk as it is known today must not only be pasteurized but come from cows free from disease, especially tuberculosis.

Below are the opinions of some of the highest ranking health authorities in America concerning the necessity of having cattle freed from tuberculosis, even where pasteurization is practiced as a safety measure against milk-borne diseases.

Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general, United States bureau of health service, Washington, D. C., declares: "Milk, even though efficiently pasteurized, should be obtained from healthy cows and produced in a sanitary manner. Pasteurization should never be used to cloak the furnishing of dirty or stale milk or milk that is known to be infected. The programs of pasteurization and tuberculosis eradication should go forward at the same time. Both are essential—neither alone is adequate to assure safe milk."

Healthy Animal Important.

Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine and hygiene, Harvard university:

"I believe that milk, even though pasteurized, should be obtained from healthy cows and carefully handled to prevent dirt contamination and infection. We are entitled to clean and fresh milk, even though rendered safe by pasteurization."

Dr. E. C. Schroeder, superintendent of experiment station, United States department of agriculture, Bethesda, Md.:

"Even though we did not know that commercial pasteurization has limits of efficiency, we must insist, with unmistakable emphasis, that all milk, irrespective of whether it is to be used raw or pasteurized, should be obtained exclusively from healthy animals. Apart from this, we do not know as yet what effect the long continued, periodic ingestion of dead tubercle bacilli may have on the body. But we do know that the injection of tubercle bacilli into experimental animals causes the allergic condition on which reactions with tuberculin depend, and which I am inclined to believe is a hyper-sensitiveness for tubercle bacilli and their component parts and products.

"Milk is the most important of all human foods, and I am sure we will not go astray if we demand that it shall be obtained from healthy animals and then pasteurized to prevent it from serving as a vehicle for pathogenic micro-organisms, which no known method of production can exclude from it with reasonable certainty. The great federal and state fight against bovine (cattle) tuberculosis I regard as a project which should have the approval of every person who is interested in the conservation and improvement of our sources of food. The economic reasons for eradicating bovine tuberculosis alone are sufficient to justify the fight that is being made against the disease."

All Opinions Coincide.

Dr. David J. Davis, dean, college of Medicine, University of Illinois:

"I have given this matter considerable thought and have come to the definite conclusion that, regardless of whether the milk supply is pasteurized or is not, the campaign for the reduction of tuberculosis should continue. Milk, even though pasteurized under most favorable conditions, and quite efficiently, should not be obtained from sick cows. I think the time is close at hand when the department of health would be justified in requiring that all milk be obtained only from cows which are under state supervision."

Dr. John R. Mohler, chief, bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.:

"It must be conceded that in addition to pasteurization of raw milk, it is also desirable to eliminate from dairy herds all diseased cows, especially tuberculous animals, which are so dangerous as to produce even 10 per cent of the cases of human tuberculosis. The proper kind of milk to pasteurize is that which is as safe and pure in the raw state as milk can reasonably and economically be made. The tuberculosis eradication division and the dairy division are in accord with regard to the importance of both the tuberculin tests and pasteurization as public health measures in connection with our milk supply."

Pasteurizing Isn't Enough.

Dr. Mazyck R. Ravenel, professor of bacteriology and preventive medicine, University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.:

"In my opinion the effort to have milk furnished by tuberculosis free cows should not be relaxed in the slightest degree. While every effort should be made to extend pasteurization and to put safeguards around it, it is of no less importance that we continue the eradication of disease, especially tuberculosis, from our dairy cattle. If tuberculosis is allowed to go unchecked, the necessity of fighting this disease will be apparent from the economic standpoint alone."

Dr. Veraneous A. Moore, dean, New York State Veterinary college, Corneli university, Ithaca, N. Y.:

"Pasteurization does not take the place of sanitation. People do not want dirty milk, even if it has been pasteurized. Pasteurizing milk is to minimize the amount of infection that is carried in the milk. I feel that all milk furnished to the human subject should be produced by cattle that are free from disease."

Every Safeguard Needed.

Dr. J. A. Kiernan, chief, tuberculosis eradication division, bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.:

"In the production of milk for human consumption every known safeguard should be applied. That bovine tuberculosis may be transmitted to the human race is no longer questioned, and no means should be neglected which would aid in determining whether cattle, supplying milk to a large city, are or are not infected with tuberculosis. In my judgment there can be no possible excuse for exposing any person to the dangers of tuberculosis, however slight such danger may be, when we have a definite means of protection against that disease."

Dr. Ludwig Hektoen, director, John McCormick institute for Infectious Diseases, Chicago:

"In my opinion everything in reason should be done to secure healthy dairy herds free from tuberculosis. There does not seem to be any question that all reasonable efforts directed to this end will be of economic advantage in reducing bovine and human tuberculosis at the same time, as the opportunity for human infection with the tubercle bacillus will be lessened greatly."

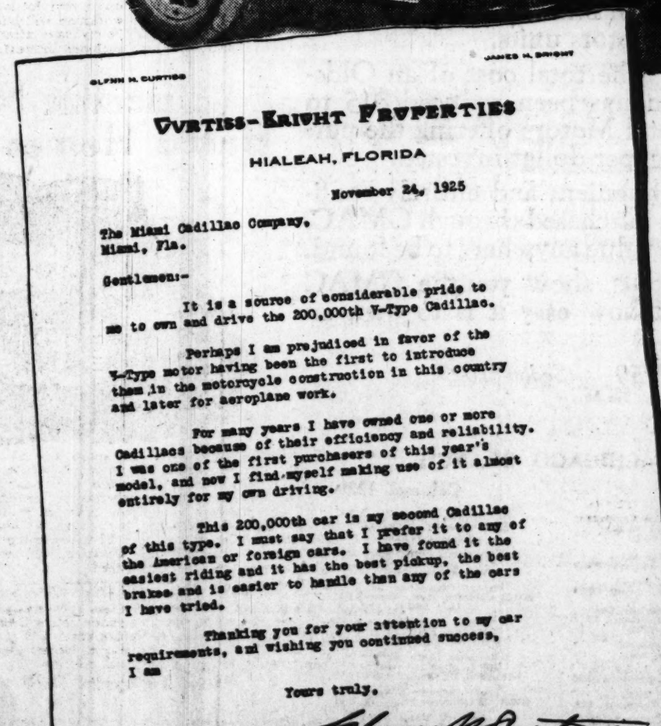
200,000th 90-degree Cadillac Bought By Glenn H. Curtiss



GLENN H. CURTISS — JAMES H. BRIGHT

CURTISS-KNIGHT PROPERTIES
HIALEAH, FLORIDA

November 24, 1925

The Miami Cadillac Company,
Miami, Fla.

Gentlemen:-

It is a source of considerable pride to me to own and drive the 200,000th V-Type Cadillac.

Perhaps I am prejudiced in favor of the V-Type motor having been the first to introduce them in the motorcycle construction in this country and later for aeroplane work.

For many years I have owned one or more Cadillacs because of their efficiency and reliability. I was one of the first purchasers of this year's model, and now I find myself making use of it almost entirely for my own driving.

This 200,000th car is my second Cadillac of this type. I must say that I prefer it to any of the American or foreign cars. I have found it the easiest riding and it has the best pickup, the best brakes and is easier to handle than any of the cars I have tried.

Thanking you for your attention to my car requirements, and wishing you continued success, I am

Yours truly,

Glenn H. Curtiss.

In common with the great majority of the world's leading aeroplane manufacturers and experts, Mr. Curtiss feels that the V-Type engine possesses in a marked degree the compactness and dependability which are absolutely necessary for aeroplane use.

Obviously, therefore, he chooses a Cadillac—and as his letter shows, is gratified to get the 200,000th car. Cadillac is pioneer of the world-famous V-Type principle—which, in the new 90-degree Cadillac is developed and perfected to its highest and finest pitch.

See the new 90-degree Cadillac for yourself. A demonstration will reveal qualities of motor car performance beyond anything you imagined possible.

The hog market finished weak and unevenly lower than previous Saturday, lower priced stock indicating the sharpest price cuts since a week ago. Following Friday's top-heavy close, yesterday's burdensome supply of 20,000 fresh and stale hogs forced values down 10@15c, further top 150@180 lb averages lowering to $11.60, and general average to $11.05, against a top of $11.75 and average of $11.35 a week previous. Buyers preferred better grades and only 4,000 pen holders and inferior hogs remained in the pens at the close.

Hog Receipts Larger.

Hog receipts last week at Chicago, at 203,400, were largest since last February, but smaller than any corresponding weekly supply in four years, comparing with 384,295 a year ago, the record run. Estimated average weight of hogs at 242 lbs., was heavier than any corresponding period in over five years comparing with a five year average of 230 lbs. Prices averaged $11.15, the same as the preceding week, but $2.15 higher than a year ago, $4.15 higher than two years ago, and $3.00 above the five year average.

Buyers took advantage of Monday's liberal offerings of cattle, which were largest since the middle of October at $1,221, and slashed prices in all branches. However, country loading was immediately curtailed and market recovered the loss, closing strong with a week ago on steers and strong to 25c higher on butcher stock. Calves were little changed, with stockers and feeders steady. General average price of good beef cattle receded 5c to $9.95. The week's top of $14.00 obtained 1,420 lb steers with 1,506 lb averages at $13.75, next highest. Yearlings averaging 933 lbs. topped at $13.50.

Sheep Sell High.

Last week's sensational advance in sheep and lambs carried prices to new high levels for the season in most classes, the general average price of matured stock at $9.10 standing highest since March and the lamb average at $16.10 equal to the highest in the same length of time. Lamb average stands $1.25 above a year ago and $3.35 higher than two years ago. Sheep averaged $2.75 above the five year average. Aged stock took the lead in the upward swing of the market, gaining $1.00@1.50 during the week, with lambs up 25@50c, and yearlings 50@75c higher. Top lambs, $17.10; yearlings, $14.25; aged wethers, $11.75, and ewes, $10.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 30,000 cattle, 60,000 hogs, and 25,000 sheep, against 31,221 cattle, 66,707 hogs, and 23,467 sheep a week ago, and 34,538 cattle, 82,015 hogs, and 16,877 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 70,000 cattle, 200,000 hogs, and 90,000 sheep, against 89,794 cattle, 319,602 hogs, and 89,118 sheep a year.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

(Copyright: 1925: Fairchild News Service.)

NEW YORK.—The usual Saturday dullness prevailed today in the local gray goods market. Prices did not change.

NEW YORK.—Today's raw silk markets both here and in Yokohama were quiet. The market here showed prices slightly firmer with not much activity. Transactions in the open market at Yokohama were about 200 bales, while open price contract settlements were about 1,200 bales.

NEW YORK.—The local burlap market was active in heavies today. Calcutta cabled that the burlap market there was unchanged to slightly higher.

PHILADELPHIA.—The chief feature of this week's developments in the cotton yarn market is the belated tendency of the southern spinners to grant concessions with the purpose of obtaining additional business. The potential increase in the amount of yarn available for deliveries most in demand by some consumers, has not as yet influenced market values.

NEW YORK.—Three of the largest producers today reported that the local rayon market has strengthened. The American companies reporting improvement included Viscose company, Du

Flour Advanced $1.25 During Last Month

Flour prices have advanced $1.25 per barrel within a month, in sympathy with the upturn in wheat. Millers have been slow to follow the advance but are furnishing shipping directions to millers more freely of late. Five brands of spring wheat flour are quoted car lots and clear springs are held by millers at $7.75. Hard winters are held to $8.60 for 95 per cent patents, an advance of $1.15. Soft winters are slow to buy and have moved up $1.25 to $8.50 for 95 per cent patents. Rye flour prices have advanced 80c in 30 days, with 95 per cent patents in car lots at $5.50 and going very fast.

WHEAT HIGHER DESPITE LARGE PROFIT TAKING

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Reinstating of lines of long wheat sold out earlier in the day and on Friday by leading local professionals was responsible for a bulge of 3½@6⅞c from the low point of the morning and the finish was about the top, with net gains of 2½@2¾c, with May leading.

Heavy profit taking developed early, but the surplus in the pit was absorbed by commission houses and offerings were light when the bulge started. Many of the pit element were caught short and were forced to cover on the way up. Corn was ⅝@1c higher. Oats gained ⅛@⅜c, and rye 5⅛@6⅛c.

Withstands Big Profit Ttaking.

All deliveries of wheat sold at a new high on the crop last week, and despite immense profit taking the close was within a fraction of the top, with net gains of 6⅛@14⅜, as compared with the previous week. Corn gained 5⅛@6⅛c, oats 1⅜@3⅛c, and rye 12⅜@13¼c for the week.

Provisions were unsettled, with December lard 42½c lower, and deferred futures 5@10c higher. Ribs were 10@12½c lower, and bellies off 50c for the week.

At the low point December wheat sold at $1.71⅛, or 10½c under the high on Friday, while May at $1.68½ was off 6½c from the best figure of the previous day. The decline strengthened the technical position, and while there was heavy selling early, attributable to an eastern operator, it was readily absorbed.

Outside Markets Firm.

Outside markets showed a firm undertone and assisted in bringing about a change in sentiment here. Winnipeg gained 2¾@2¾c on futures, while cash prices were up slightly. Buenos Aires was ½@1c lower, and Liverpool 2½@3d lower, the latter failing to fully reflect the decline in America on Friday.

Speculative activity was the main influence in making the sharp bulge, as the general run of news showed little change. Rains fell in parts of Argentina, while in others weather was clear. Export demand was again limited with no sales of consequence claimed. Deliveries of December contracts here were 5,000 bu, and at Kansas City 20,000 bu, with country offerings in the southwest reported as larger.

Corn Resists Pressure.

Corn showed stubborn resistance to pressure and advanced above Friday's finish before wheat started to rally. The forecast was for rain or snow over the belt over Sunday, and it is feared that the movement will be somewhat delayed in consequence. Spot basis was unchanged to 2½c lower, as compared with December with low grades showing the weakness. Exporters took 50,000 bu here. Oats were influenced largely by the action of other grains. Spot basis was unchanged to ¼c higher. Rye showed independent strength, with Norway reported to have bought 80,000 bu at the seaboard, indicating an improvement in the foreign demand.

December Lard Weakens.

December lard was under pressure from longs and packers, and closed 20c lower at the same price as the January, losing its premium for the first time this season. Buyers of the December sold the deferred deliveries. Trade in the aggregate was not large. Deliveries on December contracts were 50,000 lbs lard. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the winter season to date is 599,000, against 1,212,000 last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders last night were mixed. The professionals were bullish on breaks and said at the close that they had sold out on the decline and repurchased part of their lines at higher prices. It is regarded as largely a professional market and influenced more by the pit element than by the news, as most of the leaders see it.

The movement of wheat prices has been so fast in the last few days that a great many traders have got out of step. It is not a question of news with a large number of the big operators. The early decline checked selling of cash wheat on the outside, but it is intimated that on any further advance the country will sell wheat more freely. A few of the large professionals who took profits on Friday's close said they preferred to remain out of the market for the time being.

It is said that a large New York professional was a heavy seller of wheat yesterday, which assisted in the break. He has been trading in and out of the market on a large scale for a month, but his operations were not noticeable the last week until yesterday.

A St. Louis cash grain man who was here yesterday said that the country has loosened up on considerable wheat on the bulge and is selling corn in a liberal way. They also are doing a good export business in corn, he added, but the amounts are not always given out.

Winnipeg reported good buying of wheat on the break that looked like for eastern account. Country offerings are drying up. Pool operations are an important factor in the market and there is a big shortage in December, which is having difficulty in covering.

"Corn in southwestern Minnesota is in bad shape, according to all reports, being too damp," says C. E. Lewis & Co. of Minneapolis. "Corn in crib is moldy and a lot of the crop is still in the fields."

Insurance rates on grain cargoes advanced to 1¼ per cent at midnight Saturday and will be raised to 1⅜ per cent on Dec. 9. Navigation is supposed to close on the lake Dec. 12.

Chicago Board of Trade memberships are $8,500 net to the buyer, an advance of $600 within a week.

World's shipments of wheat for the week are estimated at 12,800,000 bu, against 14,139,000 bu last year. Supplies on ocean passage as estimated by the London Grain, Seed and Oil Reporter are to increase 5,480,000 bu for the week. The visible supply is estimated to show a small decrease and Chicago stocks will be about a standoff.

Shipments of grain from Fort William and Port Arthur for the week were 2,055,000 bu, carried in 85 boats. There was 28,100,000 bu of grain in store at midnight Dec. 3. Stocks in Vancouver were 5,018,000 bu. There is 50,000,000 bu of grain in store at railway elevators. The movement from Aug. 1 to Dec. 3 was 151,285,000 bu wheat. Marketing of wheat by Canadian farmers for the week ended Dec. 1 was 9,965,000 bu.

Earnings More Important than Property Back of Bonds.

In the purchase of bonds, to which do you attach the more importance—the amount of security in back of the issue or the earning ability of the issuer?

Our letters indicate that a great many investors think that if the bonds are well secured, i. e., if the value of the property securing the issue is largely in excess of the amount of the bond issue, they are safe in purchasing the bonds.

Too often they seem to overlook the importance of the company's ability to earn its fixed charges by a good margin.

It may be well to discuss briefly these two important factors.

The property pledged or mortgaged to secure a bond issue is held for the protection and reimbursement of the bondholder in the event that the issuer does not live up to its agreement in respect to payment of interest, sinking fund installments and principal at maturity.

It is of obvious importance, then, that the value of the property should be large enough so that, if it should become necessary to sell it, it would bring a price sufficient to pay the bondholders in full.

If, however, the company's earnings are always sufficient to meet all interest, sinking fund and maturity payments promptly when due, there will be no necessity to fall back on the property for the satisfaction of the bondholders.

Another thing to be considered in this connection is that if a company's earnings are insufficient to meet its fixed charges and it becomes necessary to sell the property, such property may not bring anything like its appraised value, because nobody is willing to pay as much for a property which has demonstrated its inability to operate profitably as they would for one that is successful.

A well secured obligation of a company whose earnings are insufficient to meet its fixed charges is a poor investment, regardless of the value of the property securing it.

On the other hand, an unsecured obligation of a company which consistently earns its fixed charges by a large margin may be a good investment.

That is why the unsecured notes or debentures of some companies whose earnings are large are frequently a much sounder investment than well secured first mortgage bonds of companies which earn their fixed charges only by a narrow margin.

While both the amount of security pledged under a bond issue and the margin of safety in earnings are of large importance in the safety of the investment, it is obvious that of the two the margin of safety in earnings is of the greater importance.

PLAN 16 STORY HOTEL FOR LAKE SHORE DRIVE

Will Replace Freer Residence.

MRS. ARCHIBALD E. FREER. [Matzene Photo.]

With the sale yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Archibald E. Freer of their imposing old gray stone residence at 1420 Lake Shore drive, another addition to the fast growing row of tall hotels and apartment buildings overlooking the lake is assured.

De Forrest A. Matteson bought the site for a reported $300,000, and will wreck the house as soon as Mr. and Mrs. Freer vacate it next May. It understood the residence alone cost inthe neighborhood of $200,000.

Mr. Matteson, who is a member of the firm of Matteson & Conran, is having sketches made for a sixteen story building. It probably will be a hotel though this has not yet been definitely decided. If not, it'll contain apartments, two to a floor, or ten and twelve rooms each.

Anyway, the total cost of land and building Mr. Matteson estimates will be approximately $2,250,000. The 85x 95 lot was bought through Baird & Warner. It's about half way between Schiller and Burton.

What Local ARCHITECTS Are Doing Outside CHICAGO

Graham, Anderson, Probst & White, one of the largest if not the largest architectural firm in the world, has a long and imposing list of work under way in other cities. The first unit of Gimbel Brothers' department store in Philadelphia, which when completed will be one of the largest stores in the world, is being built. A fourteen story office building in West Philadelphia for the Pennsylvania railroad also is under way. This is the first step in a gigantic terminal program which the road has launched.

ERNEST GRAHAM.

The firm also has the fourteen story Starks building in Louisville, Ky., under way. It will cost $2,000,000. The Jewish hospital of St. Louis will cost $1,000,000. Branch banks of the Federal Reserve bank have just been completed at Omaha and Denver. Each cost $400,000.

The firm also has several other important jobs under way or about to be launched.

CHICAGOANS PLAN BIG DEVELOPMENT DOWN ON BILOXI BAY

Chicagoans figure conspicuously in the latest big development project on the Mississippi gulf coast, a 1,200 acre tract between Ocean Springs and Biloxi to be called Gulf Hills. In addition to golf courses, club house, home sites and hotels, there's to be a model town called St. Martins-by-the-Sea.

The Branigar Bros company, who are putting their Ivanhoe subdivision on the map in the south end of Cook county, control the syndicate which is back of the Dixie project.

Another Chicago firm, Root & Hollister, landscape architects, have laid out the property. Jack Duray of Olympia fields, laid out the first nine holes, to be put into play this winter, and Otis & Fuller, Chicago architects, designed the club house, work on which has started.

Gulf Hills is on Biloxi bay, close to the Ocean Springs municipal limits, and is bounded on the north and east by the Old Spanish trail.

Evanston to Have $2,500,000 Hotel, Hinman and Davis Sts.

Evanston is to have another big hotel. Work has just started on a $2,500,000 eight story project at the southeast corner of Davis street and Hinman avenue, from plans by Architect Albert S. Hecht. The site was bought by a company composed of Mr. Hecht, Albert Pick, and Henry Paschen.

The Georgian hotel, as it has been tentatively christened, will have 189 apartments of one to four rooms, making a total of 343 rooms. A recreation and dance hall on the roof is planned; also a bungalow playroom with maid attendants.

The first floor will have a large lobby and promenade with an electrical fountain. Wide marble stairways will lead to the dining rooms.

S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a $1,400,000 bond issue. The borrowers are khown as the "422 Davis Street corporation." Paschen Brothers have the contract. Lewis G. Hurlberg was broker.

Realty Firm Founded in 1836 Claims "Oldest Firm" Honors

Here's the final entry in the list of "oldest real estate firms in Chicago":

Ogden, Sheldon & Co. announce that William B. Ogden, Chicago's first mayor, founded their firm in 1836. Mr. Ogden took in William E. Jones as an employé in 1844 and Edwin H. Sheldon in 1846. Both were admitted to partnership in 1850.

When Mr. Jones died the firm name was changed from Ogden, Jones & Co. to Ogden, Fleetwood & Co., Stanley H. Fleetwood having joined. In 1868 Mr. Ogden and Mr. Fleetwood both retired and the corporate name again became Ogden, Sheldon & Co.

WILLIAM OGDEN.

The offices of the firm were first located on Kinzie street, and the firm has been transacting business continuously since its establishment.

Other long established realty firms in Chicago are Edgar M. Snow & Co., founded in 1873; William A. Bond & Co., 1875; Albert H. Wetten & Co., 1888, and Koester & Zander, founded in 1898.

THREE STATIONS FOR NEW THIRD RAIL EXTENSION

There are to be three stations on the first mile of the third rail extension south from Bellwood, according to an official announcement last night.

The only one of the three the public didn't already know about is at Harrison street. It already has been announced many times that there'd be a temporary terminal station at Roosevelt road and of course one where the branch connects with the main line at Bellwood.

Contracts are to be let for the three stations shortly. According to George F. Nixon & Co. the Westchester extension is completed with the exception of a few hundred feet of rails to be laid.

NILES CENTER TO HAVE BUNGALOW AND 2 FLAT ARCHITECTS' CONTEST

In an effort to better the architectural standard of two flat buildings (at pretty low ebb in Chicago right now) and also of the bungalow (which stands pretty high already) a competition, approved by the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, has been started in Niles Center and will continue till March 20, 1926.

CHARLES BOSTROM [Gibson, Sykes & Fowler Photo.]

The prize winners will be erected in the subdivision of Mayor John Brown, at Simpson street, Niles Center, now being sold by the Talman & Thiele Realty association. A prize of $300 will be awarded the best design for a two flatter and supervision of the construction of the building. Second and third prizes will be $200 and $100. The award jury is made up of Harry B. Wheelock, president of the Chicago chapter, A. I. A.; Charles Bostrom, structural engineer and formerly building commissioner, and George E. Brannan, city attorney for Niles Center. Elmo C. Lowe, Evanston architect, is acting as professional adviser.

Gotham Chocolate Kings Can't Lure Mrs. Snyder from Chicago

It isn't often that the Chicago booster lives up to his or her asserted belief in this old town—when Manhattan comes along with a cash lure that makes Gotham look like a Florida subdivision prospectus. But Mrs. Ora H. Snyder, who's done considerable to satisfy Father Dearborn's sweet tooth for several years, still believes Chicago's the only place to live in—and do business in.

MRS. ORA H. SNYDER. [Koehne Photo.]

Last week two of New York's biggest chain store candy concerns, each of which makes enough sugar goods daily to keep an army of kids working their jaws on high, made overtures to Mrs. Snyder of such a tempting financial nature that her refusal is worth recording.

"There's no place like Chicago," said Mrs. Snyder. "And I'm never going to leave it or go into business elsewhere. I've built up my business here from a tiny beginning, and I intend to continue here under my own name and operate it myself as I've always done. New York hasn't any business attractions for me."

Mrs. Snyder, who spent several months last summer motoring through France, Switzerland, England, and Scotland, said her trip only emphasized her belief that American candy is the best in the world.

"And I don't intend to open a London chocolate shop, as has been suggested," she said. "I'm going to stay right here, as I've already said. Just now I'm busy getting my store in the new part of the Palmer house ready for opening, which'll be in a few days."

Work Under Way on 31 Flats at Kenilworth-Rogers

Architect Daniel J. Schaffner designed the thirty-one flat building now being erected at the intersection of Kenilworth and Rogers avenues with Ridge avenue by Jacob Sloves. It will have two, three, and four room suites and will be ready in March.

Forest Preserve Buys Bit of Land Along Des Plaines

The forest preserve commissioners have bought 2½ acres on 40th street, in Lyons, just east of the Des Plaines river, from Joseph Henner for an indicated $17,000. The property is improved with a bungalow.

INSULL PLANS HUGE PLANT AT 22D AND THROOP

First Unit Will Cost $1,000,000.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

What eventually will be one of Chicago's biggest commercial enterprises is announced by Samuel Insull, president of the Commonwealth Edison company, for the southeast corner of West 22d and Throop streets. It's to be a huge "service buildings,' 'to cost millions and to electrically serve the entire Chicago district, and will be the largest of its kind in the world. George C. Nimmons & Co. are the architects.

"The object of erecting this building," said Mr. Insull, "is to enable the company to serve its patrons in Chicago more promptly and satisfactorily, particularly in those branches of the service devoted to the connecting up and supplying of electricity initially to its new customers and to those who, on account of change of residence or business location, require that the service be terminated at one location and installed at another."

Main Building 928 Feet Long.

Some idea of the size of the project can be gained when one knows that the main building will be 928 feet long and 240 feet wide and nine stories high.

The site for the entire project fronts 294 feet on 22d street and extends 1,500 feet along Throop street to the south branch of the Chicago river.

In the main buildings will be located the meter, service and repair, street, construction, lamp and other departments and also the storage of vast supplies of the different kinds of equipment and supplies that have to be on hand constantly in order to maintain the light and power of the city.

To Have Big Loading Court.

One unusual feature of the building is that it requires a greater provision for the service of trucks in connection with its activities than almost any other kind of structure. On this account the nine story building is to be like the letter "U" in its ground plan, with a great loading court accommodating over two hundred electric trucks.

These trucks will be recharged with motive power at their loading platforms and loaded at night in order to be able to deliver tools, equipment or supplies at their destination the first thing each morning.

Club for Employés.

An interesting feature shown in the design, which will be built in connection with future sections of the proposed building, if found desirable, is a club or recreation building for employés at the 22d and Throop street end. This building would be arranged around a simple garden and provide a wholesome and attractive recreation place for the employés and a pleasant foreground and setting for the main plant behind it.

In this building would be the lunchrooms and a main dining room, which could also be used as an assembly hall for large meetings of the Edison company's men and women. There would be a library, with technical and scientific books, and a museum showing some of the interesting devices and inventions that have marked the history of the development of electricity. There would also be a lounge, restrooms, and other features for the comfort of employés in the building.

The part of the plant for which contracts are now to be let will cost approximately $1,000,000 and will consist of the first unit of the main building, including the tower, a large part of the main loading court, and the boiler house.

He has been in congress for fourteen years. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan and has served in the Michigan state legislature.

EXPECT HOME SHOW TO BREAK PAST RECORDS

10,000 Square Feet of Exhibit Space Taken.

Chicago's sixth annual "Own Your Home" exposition at the Coliseum next March promises to surpass all its predecessors. More than 10,000 square feet of exhibit space already is under contract, according to a report just made by George L. Bruckert, vice president of the Chicago Real Estate board and chairman of the exposition committee of administration. This committee recently met at the rooms of the Chicago Real Estate board, under whose auspices the exposition is held every year.

GEORGE L. BRUCKERT.

Mr. Bruckert stated that the sale of exhibit space was 4,503 square feet in excess of the space under contract at this time last year and far in excess of the records for any previous years. In addition more than 5,000 square feet is under reservation.

Prominent Firms Take Space.

"It is gratifying to note that this new business is represented by some of the most prominent organizations in the United States," said Mr. Bruckert. "These national firms have told us plainly that the reason for their support is the campaign for good construction that we inaugurated last year as a feature of the exposition.

"The fact that this campaign is to be elaborated this year and carried into every division of the exposition has shown these interests the big market to be found in the exposition. There is a great appeal in inviting people to come and see how a house should be built. We found that out last year, when we were amazed to see the interest displayed by the public in technical and working exhibits."

Members of Committee.

The members of the exposition committee of administration include Elmer Jordan, Howard Elmore, William Zelosky, members of the Chicago Real Estate board; John I. Sheahan, member Oak Park Real Estate board; James R. Smart of the Evanston Real Estate board, Harry W. Hopp of the North Shore Real Estate board, George Beaton of the Du Page County Real Estate board, and E. E. Edgar, member Harvey Real Estate board.

Plan $200,000 Apartment Building on Warren Ave.

Ben Goldman and Julius Weinstein have bought the vacant 134x122 on the north side of Warren, east of California, and will erect a $200,000 forty-two flat building. James D. Worth of Worth & Magee was broker.

BUYS JEFFERSON-MAXWELL CORNER.

The four stores and eight flats at the northwest corner of Jefferson and Maxwell have been sold by Adolph Cohen to Dr. Isidore Walter for a reported $63,000. Lewis J. Isaacs represented both parties.

Athletic Field for Irving Park District

The two story field house shown above is being erected by the Irving Park district in the athletic field bounded by Waveland, Drake, and Central Park avenues and Addison street. It was designed by Architect Clarence Hatzfeld and will be of Spanish architecture, with open pergolas and tile roof. The field house will be on the Addison street side of the field. The whole improvement will cost over $100,000. Frank Wilkins is president of the Irving Park district. The commissioners are Edward McClure, C. L. Van Dyke, Charles A. Miller, and John E. Smith. B. Chester Danforth made the above rendering for Mr. Hatzfeld, who is architect of the entire athletic field project.

The bronze lettering reads: "In appreciation of Dr. Norman Bridge, eminent physician and distinguished philanthropist. Presented by his friend and companion, admirer and business associate, Edward Doheny."

Sculptor Keck of New York designed the doors for Tiffany. The total cost was $20,000. The six panels represent "Æsculapius, the father of medicine"; "Pasteur, who laid a foundation for scientific medicine"; "Osler, a great clinician"; "Lister, the father of modern surgery"; "McDowell, an American pathfinder in surgery"; "Gorgas, a sanitarian who made life in the tropics safe."

The doors, of solid cast bronze, twenty feet high, outrank anything in the country, it is claimed, except those of Trinity, New York.

See Florida, from Palm Beach to Miami—visit Fort Lauderdale and Coconut Grove. Feel the soft summer breezes, blowing in from the Gulf Stream. Stroll beneath the majestic beauty of the royal palms. Your time is your own—but the hospitality of Hollywood-by-the-Sea provides entertainment to fill every hour with pleasure for those who wish to enjoy it.

From the moment your train rolls out of the station, these wonderful hours of pleasure begin. The finest facilities of the finest railroads contribute to your comfort—the Pennsylvania, L. & N., to Atlanta and Florida East Coast, carry you swiftly to "journey's end."

There'll be a Christmas tree on the train—and a marvelous Christmas dinner as you speed through old Dixie. Across Indiana and Kentucky—Tennessee and Georgia—through the picturesque Cumberland Mountains and along the scenic Licking River—you go swiftly to the most alluring spot of all, Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Florida.

Facts about your "Host City"

After you have visited all the points of interest on the southeast coast of Florida, you will know why travelers so universally praise Hollywood-by-the-Sea, America's all-year resort city.

Here you will find a brilliant Broad Walk, stretching for miles right along the ocean. Here you will also enjoy the quarter million dollar Bathing Casino, built for the entertainment of the thousands who visit Hollywood.

And the wonder of this trip is that you enjoy it all for a cost of $150. For this small sum you get railway transportation and Pullman car berth. You are sure of room and meals [a mighty important fact when thousands are going into Florida.] You are a welcome guest on the Golf Course—you have the freedom of the Bathing Casino, the Broad Walk, and the Beaches. This same $150 includes motor trips to all the principal cities on 80 miles of the East Coast, and boat trips on the Inland Waterways. Everything is included except meals on the train. You could leave home with $20 "fun money" in your pocket, and have a wonderful time.

HERE'S SPANISH BUNGALOW PLAN YOU'RE SEEKING

Costs in Neighborhood of $14,000.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

IN response to numerous requests that the perspective and plans of a bungalow be given, the bungalow shown today, of buff stucco with red tile roof, Spanish style, has been especially designed for readers of THE TRIBUNE by John T. Hetherington, architect, 105 North Clark street, Chicago.

"We are going to Florida to build. Can't you print the plans of a moderate sized bungalow?" one woman writes.

And another, "I adore bungalows and am hoping to have one of my own soon. You haven't published any yet. I wish you would."

There is one thing about a bungalow, either you like it or you don't. Women usually have the stronger feelings regarding it.

On one side are ranged those who would not live in anything else; less work with no stairs to run up and down; not so hard to keep clean, more attractive in appearance; has it over the two story house in every way.

On the other side are those who want their bedrooms upstairs, because they are easier to keep from becoming cluttered; because the house is better looking, more spacious; because there is more privacy, and so on.

Open Court a Feature.

For the bungalow lover, the one in the accompanying illustration is designed to cover a variety of needs.

As it stands, the open court, after the delightful fashion of Mexican and Spanish houses, is a feature which makes it particularly adaptable for a southern clime. Though more and more up north here there is a growing desire to bringing outdoors into our houses, of turning porches into living rooms for use morning, noon, or night, and of spending at least a part of every day outdoors.

If preferred, this service court could be eliminated and an entrance hall and stairway leading down into a basement substituted.

This bungalow has six rooms and two baths, and would cost in the neighborhood of $14,000. Much the same sort of house could be built, adhering to the same effective lines and contour, with but five rooms and one bath. In this case the cost would be reduced $2,000. Also the terrace could be omitted, if desired, and the porch made to extend along the entire front of the bungalow.

Adaptable to Change.

In drawing up the plans of any house, for public and not individual inspection, possible changes to suit individual tastes must always be taken into consideration. Much of the value of a house of this sort lies in its adaptability to just such changes. The bungalow in question has been designed with this in mind.

A large degree of this bungalow's exterior charm lies in the graceful roof lines. Red tile, the roof is, for a dwelling of this sort. Much tile for roofing purposes on the market now are too regular in length and breadth. By a slight breaking of the lines of the joints, however, it is possible with tiles of even length to relieve the stamped appearance and contribute an old world appearance of hand made tiles.

The floor plans of the bungalow are simple, and along useful, conventional lines.

With the living room and the dining room in front, a terrace slopes gently to the ground from the dining room windows, and you enter the living room through a generous porch.

In the living room it can be seen that there is abundant space for furniture. Casement windows throughout keep the window fashioning uniform in all rooms. The fireplace is unusually large, designed primarily for solid comfort.

No Staircase Problem.

In a bungalow the staircase, which often proves a stumbling block in design, is eliminated. You reach the bedrooms, bath, and kitchen through a long hall way opening from the living room.

French doors open from the living room into the dining room. This sort of door with small panes of glass is always popular. Deservedly so, for it protects from draughts without cutting off light and the sense of space which comes from spacious vistas. Provision should always be made in a bungalow especially, for curtaining these doors, as there are many times when privacy is desired.

Glass doors lead from the dining room to the breakfast nook. These are French in fashion, with two long narrow sashes, each two panes wide and many panes deep.

A word about the kitchen and its arrangement. Good kitchen arrangement is always important, nor does the size of the kitchen always signify the accommodations it is possible for it to contain.

When it is possible, give the sink a central location, with the range close on the one hand and the tables on the other. In the kitchen of this bungalow shown the range and the sink are a long way apart. To be sure, the kitchen is a small one; but even so, there are probably many women who would prefer a different kitchen placing.

Well Planned Bedrooms.

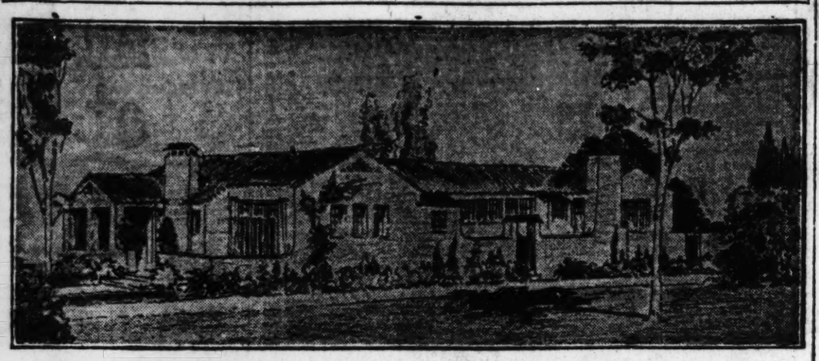
The three bedrooms have bath accommodations. Two of them have a bath between. There is a generous supply of closet space, with storage linen rooms. Note the outside closet in the back bedroom at the left. A closet with a window is always a most desirable one, and yet all too seldom are windows incorporated in the clothes closets of the average house.

Those who are determined on one certain style of dwelling, such as the bungalow, for instance, must remember that the style of the exterior has a great bearing on the interior plan, and that the inside must be laid out with the outside in mind. All the rooms of a bungalow are closely related, with small chance of separating the bedrooms and baths far from the living quarters.

The floor space of this home is 52x32.

Next week the perspective and plans of a $10,000 house of unusually attractive design will be shown.

Spanish Bungalow Suitable for Various Climates



This stucco bungalow, with the merit of unpretentiousness, is full of suggestions, and its well studied detail might easily be applied to a dwelling of much smaller proportions. Buff colored, the roof is of red tile. This bungalow is one which can be built for either southern or northern use.

Mr. Gliatto has designed a building to be of face brick on all sides. A private road will enter the tract between the two apartment buildings and lead down through the heavily wooded tract to the river.

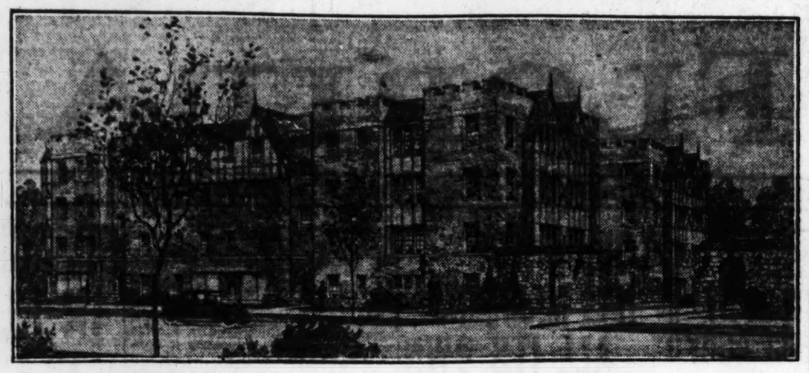
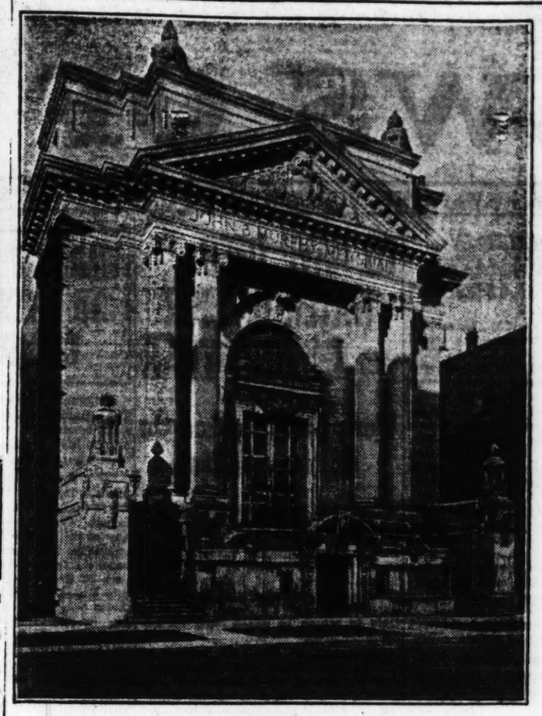
Construction of the two flat buildings will be handled by Mares-White & Co. and the J. L. Tupy company and will be owned by Rudolph Maresh, Harold E. White, J. L. Tupy and James F. Hurt.

Apartments Near Des Plaines River



Leonard Anthony Gliatto designed the above apartments to be erected at the northwest corner of Des Plaines avenue and 31st street, North Riverside, by Mares, White & Co. and the J. L. Tupy company, as tells about in a nearby column. S. Chester Danforth made the above rendering for Mr. Gliatto.

John B. Murphy Memorial



Architect Benjamin Marshall designed the above John B. Murphy memorial, which is now practically completed. It is at 49 East Erie street. The famous Doheny $20,000 Norman Bridge memorial bronze doors, shown in a close-up photograph near by, are a conspicuous feature of the building. The photograph was by Trowbridge.

The building will represent a total investment of $550,000. According to Sir Joseph Duveen, it is one of the most beautiful monumental buildings in the world.

Extension of Illinois Central opens up the beautiful Mississippi Gulf Coast

TO NORTHERNERS who know the value and beauty of Gulf Coast property, this announcement comes with extraordinary interest. Beautiful Biloxi—warm, delightful, thriving Biloxi of the Mississippi Gulf Coast—is now only 23 hours away! A new fast service recently inaugurated over the Illinois Central Railway opens up this luxurious American Riviera, and paves the way for a phenomenal development that is just now beginning.

As a first step in that development we are offering lovely Miramar—a beautiful section of the city of Biloxi itself—at unusual prices. We suggest an early inquiry—today—because the number of Miramar homesites is limited, and they will go quickly at the present low prices.

An abundance of trees, flowers, and birds

Rich soil, a warm, sun-bathed coast have given Miramar an abundance of trees, flowers and birds. Every homesite is beautiful with color and shade. Cool breezes from the Gulf temper the warm air, and a constant, comfortable temperature makes Miramar a delightful year-round home.

The Mississippi Gulf Coast has always been an exclusive Winter Playground of the Old South—a haven for sportsmen, a place of rest and recreation for the very wealthy. Now it has become available as a place for your Gulf Coast home.

Bountiful supplies of pure water—all improvements

Crystal pure drinking water is plentiful in Miramar. Its supply is adequate for all purposes, for the present and the future. It insures health to Miramar residents.

All improvements at Miramar are being made on a generous, permanent basis. They include wide concrete pavements, 5-foot concrete sidewalks, concrete curbs, gas mains, water mains, electric lights, storm sewers, fire hydrants.

Already large investors have begun extensive improvements all along the coast. The recent Illinois Central 23-hour service from Chicago—the new Edgewater Gulf Hotel—important Public Utilities—a giant sea wall being erected by the Government—these are paving the way for enormous investment profits in the very near future.

Either as an investment or as a site for your own home, Miramar offers a striking opportunity. It is at the very heart and the very beginning of an extraordinary development. And the men back of Miramar are well known in American business and public life.

NEWS OF FLORIDA

A NATIONAL NEWSPAPER, PUBLISHED BY HOLLYWOOD RESORT AND INDUSTRIAL BOARD, HOLLYWOOD, FLORIDA

$20,000 CASH CONTEST TO CLOSE JAN. 1

Time Yet Remains To Participate

Hollywood in Florida, December 5.—The Florida Industrial Contest closes January 1, 1926, and those who hope to participate in the distribution of the cash prizes amounting to $20,000.00 must act immediately.

The contest is being conducted by the Florida Society of America for the purpose of obtaining suggestions of industrial products best suited to manufacture in Florida.

A grand award of $10,000 will be made for the best suggestion; $4,000 for the second best suggestion; $1,000 for the third best suggestion and ten final prizes of $100.00 each for the next best suggestions.

Contest Open to All.

The Contest is open to everyone, without cost or obligation.

Each suggestion or name of product entered in the Contest must be accompanied by carefully prepared statement of not less than fifty words explaining clearly why it is considered best. Both the name and the reason will be considered in choosing the winners. The reasons given will be judged from the standpoint of logic and economic soundness.

In order to help those who desire to enter the Contest, the Society has prepared a booklet which not only gives the details of the Contest but also presents information concerning the natural resources of Florida and many other facts about the state.

This book is sent free on request, by addressing the Florida Society of America, Hollywood, Florida.

Seeking Practical Suggestions.

It is because Florida is destined to become one of the world's important centers of industry, that the Florida Society of America is earnestly seeking practical suggestions of what may be manufactured here. It is the Society's belief that somewhere in America are men and women whose original ideas along this line will entitle them to the big cash prizes which are being offered.

The immediate need is for promptness in obtaining one of the free booklets. These will be mailed from the Hollywood headquarters immediately upon receipt of request.

All suggestions to be considered in the Contest must be mailed by January 1, 1926, and none will be considered that bears a postmark after that date.

Even those who do not enter the Contest will be interested in the booklets and are welcome to receive them.

Macfarlane will do much playing in Florida this winter preparatory to a defense of the American title next year and also an attack on the British championship next summer. His duties at Hollywood will begin December 15th and end at the close of the Florida winter season.

Map of Florida is Being Distributed

One of the best maps of Florida which has been issued is that being distributed by the Florida Society of America from its headquarters at Hollywood, Florida. It is a folding map, pocket size and convenient for motorists on route. It shows all the main highways, railroads, lakes, and presents in convenient form the latest statistics on census and other current information. The map will be sent to any address postage prepaid on receipt of 50 cents. Address Florida Society of America, Hollywood in Florida.

Florida can support a population ten times as great as she has now and can produce winter vegetables sufficient to supply the whole country.

Florida's citrus fruits, now amounting to 21,000,000 boxes a year are unsurpassed and new groves are coming into bearing annually.

OPPORTUNITIES IN FLORIDA AMAZE ALL OF AMERICA

"The amazing Florida movement has only one explanation—the world has learned that here is a land of untold wealth; of wealth to be garnered with less than accustomed effort even by people of ordinary means."

That is the statement of the Florida Chamber of Commerce, which was formerly known as the Florida Development Board. This organization is engaged in spreading the truth about Florida. The statement continues:

"Land values in Florida have for forty years been depressed below their true worth as based on the earning power of her soils to produce fruits, flowers, vegetables and farm crops; or on the earning possibilities of unmatched playground areas of beaches, bays, rivers, lakes, woodlands; or on conditions creative of great industries and cities.

Multitudes Are Coming.

"To become a veritable El Dorado of richness and opportunity, all that Florida needed was hundreds of thousands of people to come and settle in the state and to put her vast resources to work. Multitudes have already come; still greater multitudes are now coming.

"Everywhere the intensive work of community and state development is going vigorously forward. Literally thousands of miles of magnificent new motor roads have been built and are being built into every section of this under-planted and under-populated state. In addition, hundreds of new hotels, wonderful new golf courses, yatch clubs, parks and apartments are being provided by enterprising community action. Bank resources have increased enormously; Florida banks are sound.

"Added to Florida's attractiveness is the easy tax condition; no state income or inheritance tax is allowed under the state constitution. All these things enhance the value of wisely made investments; and they spell OPPORTUNITY to millions who look to Florida as their ultimate home."

Florida furnishes 78 per cent of all the phosphate mined in this country.

TO HAVE DEEP WATER HARBOR IN ONE YEAR

Work Being Rushed On Hollywood Plans

Hollywood in Florida, December 5.—In one year's time Hollywood's $15,000,000 harbor is to be ready to receive ocean-going vessels. This is the announcement of Joseph W. Young, developer of Hollywood By-the-Sea, who admits that this is an almost unbelievably short period of time in which to effect such an accomplishment.

General G. W. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal and internationally prominent as a consultant engineer, who is supervising the building of Hollywood's harbor, has just completed a conference with Mr. Young and Frank C. Dickey, chief engineer for Hollywood, in which the decision was reached that with the concentrating of every possible effort the natural advantages of the harbor site would permit this almost miraculous feat.

There are nine dredges now being operated at Lake Mabel, the site of the harbor, and another large one will arrive soon from Baltimore. A giant dock dredge costing $55,000 has also been purchased and will join the fleet.

Will Provide Electric Power.

There will be a 100,000 horsepower electrical plant to supply power for factories now planning to establish plants near the harbor. A lumber company already has obtained a site including 30 acres for lumber yards and dockage sufficient for 10 ships.

In commenting on the harbor development Mr. Young says, "Of course, people who are not versed in the future of Florida may term this development just another attempt to sell land, but in my opinion the Hollywood harbor will have more to do with the upbuilding of all Florida from Datona south, than any other factor."

WARNING ISSUED TO INVESTORS BY COMMERCE BODY

Jacksonville, Florida, December 5.—The Florida Chamber of Commerce, with headquarters at Jacksonville, is publishing broadcast the following warning to investors:

"Every acre in Florida is worth more today than it commanded a few years ago, but investigate before you invest. Come and see for yourself. In any event, deal only with responsible business concerns; consult reliable business bodies, such as local Chambers of Commerce, and the Real Estate Board in the localities which interest you most. These organizations are co-operating with the Florida Chamber of Commerce, the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards and the Florida banks in vigorously contesting the activities of unscrupulous, fly-by-night operators who think to reap enormous profits from credulous and uninformed investors."

FLORIDA NOT YET REACHING HIGH TIDE SAYS BABSON

Roger W. Babson, the noted statistician, writing in the American Motorist for October says: "Florida probably is not yet reaching high tide, if you except certain spots that already have been pushed up in price beyond all economic justification. Speaking of the state as a whole, I believe that during the next few years, Florida will offer the greatest opportunities for money making of all the states in the country. But don't take your eye off the statistics for a single minute. Never mind what my views may be or anybody elses views. You watch the figures, as intently as a physician follows the movement of a fever chart. When statistics are faithfully and intelligently scrutinized they will show—not always but often—the coming of a crisis far in advance of the actual break."

FLORIDA NOW HAS MAGAZINE ALL ITS OWN

Published By Florida Society of America

Hollywood in Florida, December 5.—Florida has the distinction of having its own state magazine. The Florida Society of America, with headquarters at Hollywood, publishes this monthly magazine in the interest of the whole state, presenting historical facts and current information about this state.

The Florida Society of America is a geographical society devoted to Florida and the American tropics. It is non-commercial, non-partisan, and non-sectional, taking all Florida for its scope. It is primarily interested in the economic, artistic and educational phases of Florida.

The Hollywood Magazine is the official publication of the Society and although it bears the name of the town where the Society maintains its headquarters, its editorial content embraces the activities and life of the entire state. It is in no sense a booster publication but all its articles and its editorials present reliable, accurate and unbiased information concerning Florida.

Members In Every State.

The Florida Society of America welcomes to membership anyone interested in Florida and its members are now found in practically every state. Membership dues are $3 a year and all members receive The Hollywood Magazine without further cost. Members are also entitled to the privileges of the information bureau which furnishes special Florida information on request.

Applications for membership accompanied by $3 for the first year's dues, addressed to the Florida Society of America, Hollywood, Florida, will receive prompt attention.

FIVE HOTELS AT HOLLYWOOD WILL SOON BE READY

The new Hollywood Hotel on the ocean beach at Hollywood in Florida will be opened formally early in January and by that time five hotels will be in full operation in this growing young city by the sea.

This new hotel will be one of the show places of Florida. Fronting directly on the Atlantic Ocean, its location is unique even in southeastern Florida. It is so arranged that most of the rooms face the ocean, and guests will find it convenient either to take sun baths on the broad sand beach or to dip into the rolling surf.

Every feature for the comfort and convenience of guests has been provided and the season at the Hollywood Hotel promises to be one of the most attractive in Florida.

Broad Walk on the Beach.

The Broad Walk, which is a 30-foot cement pavement on the beach, extends for five miles and connects the Hollywood Hotel with the marvelous bathing casino and other resort features along the ocean. Rolling chairs are already in operation.

The Hollywood Hills Inn is another new hotel being completed in time for the winter season. It occupies a large circular space in the exclusive residence district known as Hollywood Hills.

The Park View Hotel on Hollywood Boulevard which leads to the ocean, and the Great Southern Hotel, centrally located, have continued to entertain guests through the summer. Work on the Commercial Hotel in the business district is also proceeding and the hotel management promises that all five hotels will be in operation by January. Reservations are now being made for the winter season at the several Hollywood Hotels, all being under the same management.

The 1920 U. S. Census showed only six cities in Florida having a population of 10,000 or over. They were Jacksonville, Key West, Miami, Pensacola, St. Petersburg and Tampa. The Florida State census as of January 1, 1925, shows that Lakeland, Orlando, St. Augustine and West Palm Beach have increased in population to such an extent that they are now qualified to be classed among the cities in Florida having 10,000 and over.

SPECULATION IN FLORIDA IS PASSING

Permanent Prosperity Dawning

Hollywood in Florida, December 5.—The something-for-nothing craze is beginning to wane in Florida. The get-rich-quick possibilities are passing.

This is the judgment of conservative business men in this state. And they give expression to this thought with joy, for they feel that the passing of the gambling spirit marks the beginning of the permanent prosperity.

"Florida prosperity is dawning," declares Joseph W. Young, president of various enterprises at Hollywood in Florida, and the founder and developer of this rapidly growing city. "It may sound strange to speak of our prosperity as just beginning, but that is the fact.

Future Profits from Industry.

"A lot of money has already been made in Florida. Yes, but what has been made does not compare with what will be made during the next twenty-five years. For recent profits have been largely made out of speculation in land, and future profits will be made from industry, commerce and those activities which are based on sound economics.

"The building industry for instance will prosper in Florida for many years to come, out of all proportion to the average construction record for the rest of the country. Florida is under-built today. And with the inevitable growth of the permanent population of Florida, it will be almost impossible to catch up with the housing demand.

"Likewise the increased population creates a constantly growing demand for clothing and food.

"As the consumption of luxuries as well as necessities is increased, the production and distribution of these things will be stimulated. Manufacturing enterprises will be established. Wholesale and retail organizations will be enlarged. Transportation facilities will be expanded. Agricultural activities will be intensified and developed.

Prosperity Just Dawning.

"That is the picture of Florida of tomorrow. That is why I say that the real prosperity of this wonderful state is just now dawning. That is why I am making permanent investments here, not merely of money but of my strength and my energies. All my interests are centered in the Florida of tomorrow.

"We hope soon to be rid of that class of social leeches who buy land with the expectation of selling it again at a huge profit without contributing anything to make it more valuable. And likewise this state welcomes those men and women who will become constructive citizens, by adding themselves and their means to our wonderful natural resources, and thus create new values from which they and all of us will prosper together."

EMPIRE BUILDING THRILLING GAME WITH BIG REWARD

The Hollywood Magazine, official publication of the Florida Society of America, said editorially in the October issue:

"No wonder the world is amazed at unbelievable stories of collossal undertakings and profligate expenditures for lands in this remarkable State. The spectacle must be seen to be understood; the most intelligent opinion, unless based on first-hand impressions, is more than likely to miss the vital significance and the far reaching import back of the Florida movement. To many, and possibly this includes the greater majority throughout the country who have been talking Florida without having seen it, the 'boom' resolves itself, first and last, into a mad, hectic gamble in real estate.

"There has been and is plenty of gambling in the current commodity. But this is only one phase, and the least desirable one at that, of Florida's unique transformation from a virgin land of latent potentiality to the most beautiful and impelling recreational region in the world. It is inevitable that money will be made, fabulous amounts of it, in the gigantic building process, and it is deplorable that parasitic greed, which contributes nothing of a constructive character to further the general program, will have its equal opportunity to prosper along with genuine builders who alone create the values.

"Very little, if anything, can be done to curtail the unearned increment, but for those who genuinely desire to take a hand in the thrilling game of empire building, on however large or small a scale, there is the outstanding encouragement that never again, perhaps, in the history of America, will the rewards be so great or the satisfaction so sure and certain."

Florida has 20,000,000 acres of unimproved land available for farming use. She has in abundance the two essential elements in the making of an ideal agricultural and horticultural state, heat and moisture, in sufficient quantities and well distributed throughout the year.

W-G-N AND WLIB LISTENERS GET WEAF PROGRAMS

Tribune Provides a New Treat for Public.

BY FRANK HINMAN.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has another treat to offer to radio listeners. In furtherance of its policy to give the fans within hearing range of its stations the best programs on the air, THE TRIBUNE is now able to announce that arrangements have been completed with WEAF of New York, one of the best of the eastern stations, whereby programs originating in the eastern radio will be available to W-G-N and WLIB listeners.

The first of these programs, the Kent hour of music, will be heard over WLIB between 8:15 and 9:15 o'clock tonight.

Several months ago the paper decided to enlarge its radio facilities for the benefit of the listeners, the first step being the purchase of WTAS and WCBD, the stations owned and operated by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein at Elgin.

24 Hours of Service.

The call letters of WTAS were changed to WLIB and the hours of broadcasting were so arranged that THE TRIBUNE, through the two stations, W-G-N and WLIB, was able to give the radio listener 24 hours of service.

The second step was the signing of the contract with WEAF last week. This contract provides for the broadcasting of six and one-half hours of program a week from the eastern station which is owned and operated by the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

The arrangement makes it possible for THE TRIBUNE to give its listeners two of the most widely known features in American broadcasting, the Kent hour of classical music, featuring the leading figures in the concert and opera fields, and "Roxy and his gang."

Leading Opera Stars to Sing.

The Kent hour of music, arranged by A. Atwater Kent of Philadelphia, is a Sunday night feature, and will be heard

LIEUT. SCHNELL TO BE PROMOTED FOR HIS SERVICE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Once more the navy department has expressed its appreciation of the accomplishments of Lieut. F. H. Schnell traffic manager of the American Radio Relay league, who spent seven months in operating experimental short wave radio station NRRL with the fleet on its Pacific cruise. Admiral E. W. Eberle, chief of naval operations, has extended his felicitations and at the same time announced that Lieut. Schnell has been recommended for promotion to the grade of lieutenant commander in the naval reserve force.

It is understood in naval circles here that the navy expects to make many changes in its methods of radio communication which will place a larger amount of short wave equipment in active duty. These changes are expected to be based upon the observations made by Lieut. Schnell.

Another Barnett Talk Will Be Put on Air

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Another of Dame Henrietta Barnett's "interviews" will be broadcast shortly. In this case the talk will be with Prof. Gilbert Murray on "The Romance of Peace."

U. OF I. TO HAVE GIFT STATION EARLY IN 1926

Equipment to Be Strictly Up to Date.

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Equipment for the University of Illinois radio station, WILL, will be ready for shipment some time in January, according to word received by university officials from the Western Electric company. The station was donated to the state educational institution by B. H. Sullivan of Chicago, son of the late Roger C. Sullivan.

Up to Date Plant.

The apparatus will have everything complete, including the power tubes for the oscillating current and motor generators to produce the necessary direct current for running the station. A pickup amplifier which will make it possible to broadcast from various points about the campus will also be included in the equipment.

The towers will porbably be about 200 feet high, according to Prof. H. A. Brown of the department of electrical engineering at the university. This is somewhat higher than the ordinary towers, and this added height is expected to eliminate many of the dead spots, or areas, where the station could not otherwise be heard.

Will Cover State.

The response in the receiving antenna wires varies directly with the height of the transmitting antenna, so with 200 foot towers Prof. Brown stated practically every point in the state could be reached in the daytime.

The location of the studio has not yet been decided upon, hence it is impossible to tell just when the station will be actually put in operation.

Professional Radio Men Join Reserve Corps

Under a new plan professional radio operators are now being enlisted in the naval reserve corps to an encouraging extent. The New York and New Orleans naval districts are showing particular activity. Amateur radio operators, however, have not enrolled as anticipated. About 128 naval reserve officers were recently appointed.

Journalists to Talk of Radio

Radio as a method of communication will be one of the leading subjects discussed at the first Pan-American congress of journalists and newspaper men, which is expected to draw to Washington the most distinguished editors and reporters of the South American and Central American newspapers. The date for this congress is April 7 to 13 next, inclusive.

The congress of journalists was provided for by resolution of the fifth international conference of American states, held at Santiago, Chile, in 1923.

NOW AUSTRALIA WILL USE RADIO IN EDUCATION

LONDON, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Australian broadcasting authorities, like the British Broadcasting company, are devoting special attention to broadcast lessons for schools and by means of the various high power stations in operation throughout the commonwealth are keeping isolated country schools in touch with current thought and development.

A series of special educational programs covering many subjects is at present being broadcast for the benefit of Australian scholars.

Navy Band to Go on Air Soon

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—A homecoming concert by the United States navy band, similar to that broadcast by the United States marine band upon the completion of its annual fall tour of the country, will be broadcast by WRC Dec. 19 under the direction of Lieut. Charles Benter. The tour completed by the band this year included concerts in nearly all of the leading southern cities, and, with the exception of its trip to Alaska, was the most extended tour ever taken by the organization.

Cal Speaks to Farmers Via Air Tomorrow

President Coolidge will open the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Hotel Sherman. His address will be broadcast by several stations, among them WLS. It will be the President's first visit to a convention of the federation.

His address will be a message to the farmers of the nation, and the broadcasting of it will make it possible for thousands of farmers to hear the President give his ideas concerning their welfare.

Speech Starts at 11.

Broadcasting will begin a few minutes before 11 o'clock so that all listeners will have an opoprtunity to tune in and have their sets ready when the President begins to speak.

This is to be farm bureau week at WLS, when thousands of farm leaders of the country will assemble for the convention. Many of the agricultural leaders will broadcast over the station.

The announcement of the daily programs will be made in advance over the radio. It is the aim of WLS to take the great farm bureau gathering right to the fireside of every farm radio listener. The convention will last from Dec. 7 to Dec. 9, inclusive.

Senator Capper to Talk.

Among the speakers who will be heard at the annual banquet of the federation at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday, Dec. 8, will be Senator Capper of Kansas, who will give the farmers of the nation an idea of what legislation is planned for the aid of agriculture at the session of congress which opens tomorrow. Senator Capper takes the place on the program of Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, who will not be here for the meeting. Other speakers will include Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric company, Ivan D. Gore, and Ford Mercer.

Station Drops Out; Nolo Must Wait for Renewal

A small station in Indiana which gave up its broadcasting license several months ago appealed to the department of commerce for a renewal. However, the department has replied that this station, once having given up its license, must take its turn just the same as new applicants.

LAW TO PROVIDE LIMITED NUMBER OF BROADCASTERS

Secretary Hoover Says Action Is Needed.

The convening of the Sixty-ninth congress tomorrow will hold genuine interest for radio listeners because it will unquestionably pass a radio bill with teeth in it. Up to now broadcasting has been conducted under a hoary law enacted thirteen years ago, having to do mostly with wireless telegraphy in marine navigation, but which, in the light of present day radio development, doesn't mean much.

It means little, in fact, that with the guidance of Secretary Hoover the industry has been self-regulatory. Because of the kaleidoscopic changes in radio, it has seemed almost impossible to adequately frame further legislation, but now that the experimental stage of the industry has been passed, the time for action seems to be at hand.

Hoover Turns to Congress.

It was the sense of the recent national radio conference that further regulation can be imposed efficiently only by the central authority of the federal government. Secretary Hoover, having expressed disapproval of so much authority being vested in him, proved receptive to the conference recommendation. Thus, a comprehensive new radio bill, now being prepared, is expected to be introduced into congress at an early date.

Very likely its sponsor will be Representative Wallace H. White Jr. of Maine, author of the so-called White bill which failed of passage in the last congress. Attesting to the merits of the White bill, however, and although definite conclusions are premature at this time, it is believed, with some changes based upon the recommendation of the radio conference, that this will be virtually the bill the forthcoming congress will be asked to consider.

High Lights of New Bill.

The new radio bill will affirm the right of the government, through the secretary of commerce, to issue licenses, control power, assign wave

THE TRUTH ABOUT RADIO

Radio is wonderful enough as it is—without exaggeration

THERE has been a great deal of exaggeration about radio, bred by enthusiasm, the lure of the art, and the genuine lack of knowledge of this newly discovered force. Any radio engineer states frankly there are many things about radio that no one can yet explain. A real radio expert is very conservative in his claims. While he is familiar with the wonders of this new plaything of man—he also knows its limitations. Radio is wonderful enough as it is, without exaggeration.

Let's look at the facts

First—You cannot get both long distance and quality of reception at the same time. It must be one or the other. If your eyes sparkle at the squeak from 3,000 miles away—be satisfied. If, however, you want music that is real music—don't try the "long shots."

Second—You cannot get both high selectivity and quality. If you thrill at bringing in stations from all over the map, be content with that. But if you want clear, sweet tones—limit yourself to nearby stations.

Third—Don't buy a radio in a store. Buy it in your home. Your home may be in a radio "pocket." If so, the best radio set in the world will not get you good results.

Fourth—The broadcasting station has as much to do with results as your receiving set. The art of broadcasting is still in its infancy. You may expect big advances from that end.

To be true, there are exceptions to the statements just made. Some night the rankest radio amateur may bring in Honolulu, with music as clear as a bell. Sometimes—and under certain conditions—a cheap crystal set will get better results than a thousand dollar "wonder." But the exceptions are rare—and never certain. In all the clamor of claims for radio sets, in all the talk about distance, selectivity, tone and "whatnot"—keep your mind clear.

With radio you are at the mercy of nature. Forces entirely beyond the control of your receiving set dictate your results.

Let's be fair about this thing! Exaggeration is so unnecessary. The truth about radio is wonderful enough.

The MacMillan Arctic Expedition (12° from the pole) talked with the world every night over Zenith Radio—yet Zenith makes no exaggerated claims for distance. Zenith makes no claims except by comparison—comparison in your home.

Zenith guarantees this: under like conditions—side by side with any other radio set in the world—Zenith will get more distance—bring in more stations—with a finer quality of tone than any other.

Don't buy a radio in a store—buy it in your home. Make any radio prove its case in your case. Zenith is ready and willing.

lengths, in fact, to handle the whole radio situation. Mr. Hoover, having protested against the secretary of commerce being given so much power without there being some form of an appeal over his decisions, undoubtedly will inspire a clause to that effect in the bill. Also there will likely be an advisory committee suggested. Provision will be made to opose any monopoly in radio communication and to protect public interest by assuring freedom of the air.

The most drastic feature the bill will likely contain will be the authorization to limit the number of broadcasting station. Anticipating congressional action, Secretary Hoover has already put this into effect. No new stations will be licensed until, through discontinuance, the present number of stations is reduced and it shall be in the public interest to add new stations. Until then there will be no further division of time.

To lessen interference, higher powered stations will likely be required to locate outside congested centers. A permit will be required in advance of the construction of a station. The duration of a station license will probably be five years and the fees from a minimum of $25 to a maximum of $5,000 a year.

It will probably be provided that a renewal of a license will be considered the same as an application for a new license. And that this will hold for existing licenses.

Careful provision will be made that there shall be no vested property right in a license issued or in its frequency or wave length. The secretary of commerce will be authorized to carefully scrutinize any such contemplated sale so as to eliminate the possibility of speculating in wave lengths.

NEW INVENTIONS IN RADIO FIELD ARE MADE KNOWN

John Hays Hammond Jr. of Gloucester, Mass., has added to his many radio inventions a means for compensating for variations in the capacity of an antenna circuit caused by changes in the effective height of the antenna, due, for example, to the roll or tipping movement of a ship or other body on which the antenna is mounted.

Among other inventions reported by John B. Brady, who represents the Institute of Radio Engineers, are:

A circuit arrangement particularly adapted for the receiving of continuous wave radio telegraph signals. This invention is also adapted for the reception of radio telephone signals by the superheterodyne method of reception. [1,560,854, issued to Jackson H. Pressley, Oceanport, N. J.]

A thermionic repeater combined with appropriate circuits for the generation of oscillations. [1,559,776, issued to Harry S. Read, New Haven, Conn.]

Electrical switching currents, the object of which is to provide a switch circuit to variously connect a plurality of such devices by means of which one of these is valued in increments disproportionate to the variations of the other. [1,559,802, George H. Stevenson, Rye, N. Y.]

An invention relating to the production and control of alternating currents of different frequencies. More particularly it relates to the generation of harmonics from a given base frequency current and to the control of such generation. [1,559,869, issued to R. V. L. Hartley, East Orange, N. J.]

A variable electric condenser, one of the objects of which is to avoid the danger of short circuiting. [1,559,974, issued to Gerald J. Mulligan, Columbus, O.]

Improvements in sources of waves of constant frequency. [1,560,056, issued to Joseph W. Horton, Bloomfield, N. J.]

Improvements in spark gaps for use primarily in conjunction with high frequency electric machines. [1,560,390, issued to John G. H. Liebel and Edwin S. Florsheim, Cincinnati, O.]

RADIO EXPORTS DOUBLE AMOUNT SHOWN IN 1924

Electrical Goods About Hold Their Own.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—According to the preliminary figures available for the first nine months of 1925, the total exports of electrical products are substantially the same as for the same period of 1924, the total for the first three quarters of this year being $63,031,943, as compared with $63,281,553 for the equivalent period of 1924, according to reports of the electrical and equipment division of the department of commerce.

Generally speaking, apparatus exports as a whole were somewhat less than during the 1924 period, appreciable decreases in the case of transformers of all types not being fully offset by substantial gains in the exports of alternating current generators, steam turbine sets, and parts for generators.

While the two power motor classes both show a slight decrease, there was a fair gain shown in the case of fractional horsepower motors. In considering the decrease in transformer shipments, it must be borne in mind that the 1924 figures were swelled somewhat by heavy exports to Japan as part of the rehabilitation program of that country subsequent to the earthquake.

In the field of communication equipment—not discussing radio as yet—there was a small net decrease in exports, as compared with the same nine month period of 1924, decreases in magneto telephones, other telephones, and telephone switchboard classes not being compensated for by a substantial gain in the miscellaneous telephone equipment class.

Radio exports, however, continued the heavy upward trend indicated by the figures for the last few years, and for the nine month period under consideration were practically double the total for the same nine months of 1924. Exports of radio products several months ago passed the mark for the total of last year's shipments.

Considering the electrical export trade as a whole, the distribution throughout the world continues quite uniform, though its strength this year is to some extent maintained through the increased volume of radio exports.

WWAE TO BLOOM JAN. 1 AS NEW RADIO STATION

Charles P. Hughes, formerly business manager of WTAS and WCEE broadcasting stations, owned by Charles E. Erbsteln, has leased WWAE, located at Plainfield, Ill., from Lawrence J. Crowley for 5 years.

In taking over WWAE Mr. Hughes will have the advantage of remote control and increased power over Chicago stations. WWAE is one of the finest equipped stations in the country. The towers are 200 feet each. Arrangements are now being made for a Chicago studio by running telegraph lines from Plainfield in the same manner as WTAS did from Elgin.

The new station will have a permanent staff of radio artists. The wave length is 242 meters. The station will be ready Jan. 1. Lawrence E. Dutton, station builder and engineer, will be associated with Mr. Hughes in the new station. Application will be made for change of call letters.

WHEREVER and whenever radio tone quality is discussed Garod is invariably mentioned.

"As good as Garod" has come to be the highest praise to bestow upon a radio receiver.

And it is only natural that it should be so. While Garod has always been in the front rank in all other attributes of a good receiver—selectivity, long distance reception, volume and simplicity of operation—it has risen to its present dominant position through universal public recognition of its ability to reproduce the music of any instrument or group of instruments and every note and intonation of the human voice, in song or speech, with a degree of fidelity that is so emphatically Garod's own, that it has firmly entrenched Garod in a class and category exclusively its own—the invariable choice of musicians and discriminating lovers of music.

Have you heard the Garod?

If not, by all means ask your nearest Garod dealer for a demonstration. It will give you an entirely new appreciation of how perfectly radio, at its best, reproduces with utmost fidelity

FLOCK OF SEVEN TRANSMITTERS ON AIR IN ONE LOT

Schenectady Uses Them in Experiments.

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Those who grope among the air channels at night have found an increasing number of radio stations signing "General Electric company, Schenectady." There are now nine transmitters applying electrical impulses on nine different wave lengths from Schenectady, and during some periods seven transmitters may be on the air at the same time. Not all, however, broadcasting; some are transmitting code—but each is on its own wave length and each is applied to its apportioned task.

Schenectady in the past eight months has become the great world center of radio transmitter experimentation. Withing three miles of the city the electric company has constructed a gigantic transmitter developmental station.

Constant Changes Made.

On the plot of many acres eight transmitters have been erected. Each transmitter has its independent antenna system, and these systems, as well as the transmitters, are constantly undergoing changes as information on operation and reception increases. All transmitters are constructed on wooden frames and may be quickly dismantled or altered as defects are discovered and new methods are devised.

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer.

IF you think that the universal whoopee concerning one Red Grange is limited to an interest in seeing him perform in person, you are a bit in error. And if you suspect that the newspapers are devoting too large an acreage to his doing and his bank account, you are a bit further in error.

You might be of the opinion that, since Harold's debut into professional football, the public is panting to see him—and that, if they are unable to see him, they don't care three lusty whoops about hearing of his performances.

But—No! Last Sunday, when Red was to play in Chicago in the afternoon, there were no less than 9,647 telephone calls to the radio station asking if his game was to be broadcast. And on Wednesday, when the Cream of Wheaton did his stuff in St. Louis, there were almost as many inquiries.

When they couldn't gaze upon him, the populace wanted to hear about him on the radio.

All of which brings the thought that much of Grange's fame is attributable to the radio. Broadcasting of the big football games caught the public fancy at about the same time that Grange was starting his darts and dashes, and innumerable people, men and women, were attracted to the gridiron game who paid not the slightest attention to football before. Almost every contest in which Grange has participated has been put on the radio direct from the playing field.

Among the early bogey men who hovered over the newborn infant, radio, was the suggestion that broadcasting would hurt the telegraph business. But after a very few months there was a shout of elation from the Western Union company, when, on a single evening, many a radio station would receive 10,000 telegrams, especially if the station were raffling off a motor car or other prize.

This year the Western Union plans to distribute $3,000,000 in salary increases based on merit to its land line employés earning less than $3,000 a year.

The architects of the Soldiers' field stadium in Grant park have consulted us about the requirements of a broadcaster at an athletic event.

Thus far, the broadcasting at an athletic event has parked himself and his apparatus in rather clumsy positions. The officials cannot assign him a part of the press box, because the click of the telegraphers' keys would flow too readily into the microphone.

At the world series the radio men were sunk in the ground behind home plate. At the football games they have generally sought a point of vantage on the roof of the press quarters.

The new stadia and convention halls will build in facilities and enclosed quarters for the broadcasters, as they have done in the past for the press.

We have been moved to wonder, since visiting station KFAB at Lincoln, Neb., what other states have so thorough and interesting a university extension service on the radio as has the University of Nebraska.

Although KFAB is not owned by the university—as some state universities have their own stations—its most important hours on the air are those contributed by the university extension department. What makes these university radio periods valuable is the fact that they are regular, they are systematic, and they are comprehensive in the scope of the material they seek to disseminate to the homes of the taxpayers of the state.

The half hour 10:30 to 11 every morning is devoted to "Home and Farm," and lecture topics for a week include "Present Tendencies in the Poultry Industry," "Slendering the Stout," and "Suggestions for Choosing Your Hat," talks by faculty members of the departments of poultry husbandry and home economics. Every professor and instructor in the university has his turn before the microphone in a discussion of practical applications of his subject.

The period 1:15 to 1:30 daily has the general title "High School Convocation," and the half hour between 3 and 3:30, "Departmental Addresses," has in four afternoons such listenable themes as "W. H. Hudson and Others," by a member of the department of English; "The President as Political Chief," by the department of political science; "The Beggar at Our Door," by an instructor in social work, and "Marta," one of a series by the professor of dramatic literature.

Lectures on agriculture and economics have places on the night programs, and one evening a week is assigned as "university night."

In a radio world in which so much hearty hokum is put forth, hit or miss, as educational features, it is good to find a university extension service employing the radio, annexing itself to an established radio station, and presenting substantial and well planned courses.

KYW ANNOUNCER CAME TO RADIO FROM THE STAGE

Like Others, He Is an Entertainer.

BY CHARLES WARNER.

When you can't sleep, and you get up some time after midnight and turn on your radio set, you are pretty certain to run into "The Insomnia Club" of KYW. The young man who with his artists caters to the thousands like you who can't sleep is Harold H. Isbell of KYW's staff of announcers.

Mr. Isbell was born singing and they apparently made the cello and piano just for him. Outside of that and the further fact that he has to his credit a brilliant experience in light opera and other musical productions, he gives further confirmation to the conviction rapidly forming in the minds of those who have been following this series that the real radio announcer is an exceptional man of special attainments that fit him for this new profession.

Serve the Listener.

Every announcer thus far presented has been a man who delights in having a part in entertaining the public—not for the sake of art, but because he delights in serving the listener.

Mr. Isbell is a native of Aurora. Subsequently the family moved to Maywood. Passing through the schools there, he eventually found himself at the University of Illinois. No, he did not play football there. He did not graduate from the university because he became restless and started west to hunt a few open spaces.

His quest took him as far as Los Angeles, where KFI was just starting up. Hollywood never even tempted him, but KFI did. He loafed around the station and was invited to play and sing. The result was that he became announcer at KFI.

Has Had Varied Career.

The experience of Mr. Isbell in the musical world is varied. He has an excellent baritone voice and, although now only 25, he has at various times, as his studies would permit, appeared on chautauqua programs, in dramatic shows, in theater productions, and in professional quartets.

So that is why, when you can't sleep, you find this young man in the stillness of the night, fitted to help you forget your sleeplessness.

Ether Said to Be Good Cleanser for Crystal

A good method of cleaning a crystal, which apparently has lost some of its sensitiveness, is to place it in a small bottle containing some ether, shake the bottle vigorously, after which remove the crystal with a pair of tweezers. It should be ready to use again after this cleaning, and if it doesn't, a second cleaning will bring it back to its normal strength.

RADIO BRIDGE PROVES FEATURE THIS SEASON

Listeners Follow Plays of the Experts.

Bridge by radio as broadcast by twenty-four powerful stations has become one of the big feature entertainments during the present fall and winter, according to the managers of the stations using this feature. Each week a bridge game played by experts from various cities throughout America is broadcast by WSAI and associate stations.

The plan of broadcasting is that Wilbur C. Whitehead and Milton C. Work, widely known New York experts and authorities on auction bridge play two other men or women in other cities in America. The hand is played out previous to broadcasting and the announcer explains every bid and play as made by the authorities. By this arrangement the listeners-in on the radio are able to take the names of the experts and follow the play at their own card table and thereby virtually sit in with the greatest bridge players in America.

In choosing the players Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead did not confine their choice to any special locality but have taken those who stand out in their respective communities.

The plan of broadcasting the bridge games was worked out by C. E. Albert, member of the radio committee of WSAI. Immediately following the broadcasting of the bridge hand, reprints of the game are mailed from WSAI which includes the hand to be played the following week.

Plane Establishes Record for Broadcast

A survey of previous performances leads to the conclusion that the seaplane PN-9-1 on route to Honolulu established a distance record for direct communication from a plane in flight.

NAVY WORRIED BECAUSE NOBODY KNOWS ABOUT THE RADIO DOPE BOOK

The navy department expresses apprehension because it has issued courses in radio instruction which have been widely distributed but which do not seem to have been given systematic attention.

"It has been learned, for example," the admonition goes on, "that a chief radio electrician of twenty years' service and another radio electrician of eight years' service had never seen the instructor's manual which is a portion of the courses for radiomen.

"A recent graduate of Annapolis spent four months under instruction in radio at a navy yard without discovering the existence of the bureau of navigation courses for radiomen."

EFFICIENCY OF TRANS-PACIFIC SERVICE SHOWN

It is estimated that during the month the new naval trans-Pacific high frequency radio communication has been ninety per cent effective between San Francisco and Honolulu and between Guam and Cavite, however, only fifty per cent effective between Honolulu and Guam.

A very considerable amount of traffic has been handled on these circuits during the first month of the test but they have been so successful that it is reported to be a matter of gratification to the navy department.

"Staying power in batteries means less noise in the set"

Says A. L. Ziegler, of Lake View, who works with batteries day and night and who knows what kind of service batteries ought to give.

"EVERYBODY hates noises in his set. A person buys a radio to hear pleasant things—music, songs, lectures, stories—not sizzling and buzzing and squeals and shrieks and hums.

"I have been able to take a lot of these noises out of my friends' radios by looking to their batteries. When batteries start to run down or deteriorate, they begin to give out noises. And if there isn't an even, steady flow of current, noises will certainly be produced.

"Most batteries are all right for a week or a few weeks, then their voltage drops and noises come in. But I used a Ray-O-Vac B battery on a detector tube for over a year and it was as quiet at 17 volts as it was at 22½. Most other batteries begin to be noisy at 18 or 19 volts, and they reach that point long before Ray-O-Vacs do because they don't have the staying power of Ray-O-Vacs.

"Staying power is a desirable factor in A batteries, too. More so than a steady current because a slight variation in the filament current makes no difference, since the electron discharge goes on anyway.

"Steady current is as important in C batteries, however, as it is in B's. This is because the C battery gives a negative bias to the grid and any variation in C current will be amplified by the tubes, and noises will be produced in the set.

"Ray-O-Vac batteries last longer than any other kinds and are free from noises as long as they last. That is why I say that their staying power means less noise in the set.

"Of course it also means less frequent purchases and less battery expense. Show me the radio owner who isn't interested in saving money. They all are, and that's why I tell all I come into contact with to use Ray-O-Vac batteries."

Mr. Ziegler buys his Ray-O-Vac batteries from the Acme Radio & Supply Company, 2835 Lincoln Avenue. There are dealers in every neighborhood. If the stores where you usually buy your radio supplies do not carry Ray-O-Vacs, write us for the name of a dealer or jobber who can supply you. RADIO LURES U. S. PEOPLE TO SEE THEIR COUNTRY

Named Chief Agency in Travel Promotion.

Radio leaders contend that radio has accomplished more in support of the movement to "see America first" than the combined propaganda of cities, railroads, and educational agencies in the past to encourage people to visit the scenic centers of the United States rather than to rush to Europe at first opportunity. Above all, radio has instilled a deep interest in other places, and men and women who have had no previous desire to take trains and steamers are now anxious to see for themselves the localities from which they have heard musical programs.

They Want to See.

Thousands upon thousands of radio listeners who in the past have regarded Atlanta, Davenport, Detroit, and scores of smaller places simply as spots on the map are visiting or will visit at first chance the cities in which the broadcasting stations they hear are located, one authority said.

"California and Florida are, of course, centers of special interest, at all times, but radio has been of the utmost assistance in their drives to bring easterners and northerners to their sunny skies," he went on. "Any fan, almost, will admit that he 'never heard of' some of these towns which are now being so well advertised by radio. Look at the roster of stations and you will find places that in the past were unfamiliar names.

Seek More Information.

"This situation is a splendid thing for the country, bringing all sections closer together in mutual admiration and respect. What we hear by radio leads us to seek further information, and thus we may truly regard radio as 'the university of the air.'

"Just as most of us are keen to find out, in early life, what the inside of a watch looks like, sometimes with disastrous results, so people are not content to hear music from a distant city, they want to see that city."

Lady Richmond to Tell Women How to Explore

LONDON, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Among the forthcoming talks to be broadcast is one by Lady Richmond Brown on the subject of a scientific expedition from a woman's point of view. Lady Richmond Brown accompanied F. Mitchell Hedges and Dr. Gann to the center of British Honduras and also assisted in the exploration work in connection with the buried city of Lubaantum.

DISPATCH RADIO LIKE BIG BEAM OF SEARCHLIGHT

Marconi Station in Canada Soon to Open.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The new "beam" station erected by the Marconi company at Drummondville and Yamachiche here will probably be opened at the end of this year, it was stated this morning at the offices of the Canadian Marconi company.

This station, the first of its kind, will operate on the principle of concentrating in one direction all the radio energy it generates, instead of, as the case of an ordinary radio transmitter, spreading its energy out in a circle all around it.

100 Words a Minute.

It is along the lines of the "direction finder" which has been in use for a number of years for the benefit of navigation, and whose principle is that of concentrating the radio energy in a specific direction. "Just like making a light send its beam in one direction instead of spreading the light all around it," one of the Marconi engineers explained, "only a good deal harder to do."

The speed of a hundred words a minute minimum which is guaranteed by contract with the imperial government is of course considerably above anything that an ordinary telegrapher can accomplish, but it is achieved by automatic transmitters.

How It Is Done.

The operator, by simply typing the message, transmits it in dots and dashes to a tape, and this tape when run through the transmitting machine, like a record through a piano player, makes the transmitter work at the high speed mentioned. The dots and dashes on the tape at the receiving end can either be read by operators who transcribe them optically, or can be fed into a special typewriter which turns them into intelligible alphabetical characters.

The station has been erected for telegraphic transmission, but could, if necessary, be used also for radio transmission, of the human voice or other sounds, it was stated at the company's offices this morning.

LISTEN, YOU'LL LEARN HOW TO TALK IN FRENCH

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Conversational French will be taught by radio through Station WGY in a course of lessons which began last night. The instructor is Leon A. Huguemont, a native of Aix les Bains, Savoy, France, and now an electrical engineer in the employ of the General Electric company.

Mr. Huguemont has made a careful study of the problem of teaching his native tongue by radio and he has prepared a series of lessons which, it is expected, will appeal strongly to all those who seriously set about the task of gaining the rudiments of the speech.

A language is primarily learned through the ear, though the average American studying French does not learn the language in that way. The tendency is to concentrate on grammar and syntax, with the result that the student may read and grasp, after a fashion, writings of Moliere, Chateaubriand, and others, but will fail to understand the simplest phrases when spoken by a Frenchman. Mr. Huguemont hopes to so present the subject that the student will be familiar with French as it is spoken by the French.

ly listeners in the middle west over radios WLIB between the hours of 15 and 1:15, central standard time. Each Sunday night the radio fans are entertained by one of the leading figures in the musical world. Grand opera stars, famous composers, and well known musicians are scheduled for the programs.

The artists who will be heard tonight on the first WEAF broadcast are Marie Kurenko, Russian coloratura soprano, now making her first tour of America and generally recognized as Europe's newest musical sensation, and Felix Salmond, distinguished English cellist.

"Roxy and his gang," while little known to radio followers in Chicago, is one of the favorites of eastern audiences, and his breezy "Good evening, everybody," is as well known as the salutation of any other person in the radio field. Even President Coolidge and his wife are Roxy fans and invariably listen in when he is on the air.

Hear Roxy on Wednesday.

Roxy, who is S. L. Rothafel, one of New York's leading showmen, and "his gang" will be heard over WLIB on Wednesday evenings between 9 and 10 o'clock. The remainder of the WEAF schedule for Chicago listeners consists of a half hour program from 7:30 to 8 o'clock from WLIB and an hour program from 8 to 9 o'clock from W-G-N on Tuesdays and a three hour program on Thursdays from 7 until 10 o'clock. WHIB will have the first and last hours of this program with W-G-N on from 8 until 9 o'clock.

Weak Battery Noises Are Calls for Attention

It is when the battery is in a discharged or partially discharged condition that the acid attacks the plates and causes the noises that are often mistaken for static. Always keep the electrolyte solution about one-eighth or one-fourth inch above the top of the plates.

SYDNEY MAKES ITS OWN RADIO TRANSMITTER SET

The first organization of its kind to possess a radio broadcasting station, the Sydney Trades hall, has just had its transmitting station completed by local builders, at what is claimed to be materially below the cost of any other station in Australia, says Trade Commissioner E. G. Babbitt, Sydney, in a report to the department of commerce. The builders, United Distributors, claim that the saving effected is the result of the use of locally manufactured material.

Licensed for an input of 1,500 watts, on a wave length of 280 meters, the station used a drive system, so as to reduce as much as possible interference with sets not tuned to its wave length.

The maximum possible power of the station is about 4,000 watts, but this could only be used by amending the license. The wave length of 280 meters is sufficient for New South Wales, a shorter wave length of less than 100 meters would reach any point in the world.

DR. A. P. FITCH TO TALK AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, educator, writer, and lecturer, for many years connected with eastern institutions of learning, notably Andover Theological seminary, of which he was president for sixteen years, and Amherst college, Mass., will speak at the Sunday Evening club service in Orchestra hall tonight, his subject being, 'Why Believe in God?" E. J. Buffington, a trustee of the club, will have a part in the service, and Clifford W. Barnes will give the informal Bible talk on "Some Old Letters" at the 7 o'clock meeting.

Dr. Fitch, who left Amherst in 1923 to pursue his educational work at Carleton college, has said that he feels the college of today must be democratic to the extent of giving every one a chance. The eastern universities, according to Dr. Fitch, are the ones whose ideals are largely inherited and bound up with the respectable past. Instead of sharing the vision of the newer ideas in education prevailing in the west. His writings during the last few years have presented frankly the antithesis between cultured New England, with its strong emphasis upon respectability and heredity, and the freer though less "cultured" life outside.

His address, that of Mr. Barnes, and the music program by the choir of 100 will be broadcast by KYW. Mark Love, soloist, will sing "Consider the Lilies," by Bishop, and other music numbers by the quartet and choir will include "Behold God Is Great," by Nayler; "Still, Still with Thee," by Foote, and "Be Not Afraid" from Elijah. During the organ recital, beginning at 7:40, Stanley Martin will play Rogers' "Sonata in B Flat."

BETTER SHIP TO SHORE SERVICE, AIM OF U. S. NAVY

Naval ship to shore communication is not as good as it should be, particularly in the Atlantic ocean, according to a navy department bulletin, which goes on to say:

"It is believed there is no immediate cure-all for this deficiency. Improvement is expected from insistence on rigid maintenance of assigned frequencies, exact calibration of receivers, both ashore and afloat, and concentration of long distance traffic at fewer and more adequately equipped stations."

BROADCAST OF MARKETS UP FOR COURT RULING

Injunction Sought Against Stock Exchange.

A court action of national interest to broadcasters which may establish a legal ruling affecting the manner and method of disseminating information by radio was instituted last week in the Circuit court by John P. Bowles, cattle broker, against the Chicago Live Stock exchange which seeks to prevent the broker from broadcasting live stock quotations over station WHT.

Prohibited by Exchange.

The Chicago Live Stock exchange passed a resolution effective Dec 1, which prohibits any member of the exchange from broadcasting live stock quotations and information or furnishing such information to broadcasting stations. The John P. Bowles company, one of the largest commission houses at the Chicago stock yards, has for the past six months been broadcasting the current market quotations by remote control direct from the yards through station WHT. The Bowles broadcasts have been so productive of good business as to give the firm a preferential choice with the cattle shippers with a resultant increase in business, officials of the exchange contend.

Asks for Injunction.

The court action is predicated on the right of the plaintiff to use radio as an advertising medium in the same manner and for the same intent and purpose as he would employ newspapers or magazines. In his petition the plaintiff requests the court for a restraining injunction preventing the Chicago Live Stock exchange from exercising supervisory jurisdiction on the Bowles broadcasts and further asks the permission of the court to continue his broadcasts without interference until such a time as the matter may be settled by due process of law.

Merger of Japanese Companies Is Announced

It is unofficially reported that the Nipponophone Phonograph company, Tokio, and the Tokio Phonograph company have merged and will now operate as the United Phonograph company, according to advices to the United States department of commerce. The combined capitalization of the new amalgamated concern is 4,600,000 yen [$2,300,000] fully paid up.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, December 6.) (Standard time throughout.)

THE customary Sunday musical features top today's bill from WGN. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, including as it does the orchestra and organ music during the complete performance broadcast from the Chicago theater: the Lyon & Healy organ recital, the recital by artist students of the Chicago Musical college, and the popular evening hour between 9:15 and 10:15, when the Drake concert ensemble offers a series of selections.

WGN's day starts at noon with Uncle Walt reading the eight pages of comics from THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Upon the conclusion of this feature listeners are immediately switched down to the Chicago theater for the musical and orchestral novelties available there.

Edwin Stanley Seder's organ concert each Sunday afternoon at 2:30, broadcast direct from the Lyon & Healy concert hall, is one of the day's most popular features. In his concert today he is to have the assistance of Lillian Pringle, cellist, and these artists are offering the following program:

Agitato (first movement) from D minor sonata ..... Rheinberger
Edwin Stanley Seder, organist.
Aristia ..... Berger
Cradle Song ..... Czerwonky
Harlequin ..... Popper
Lillian Pringle, cellist.

A wide variety of vocal and instrumental selections features the program by artist students of the Chicago Musical college, broadcast from the Central theater between 3:30 and 5 p. m. The program is ordered as follows:

Piano—McGuire's Kick ..... Grainger
Harold Haselton.
Aria—"Ballatella" ["Pagliacci"] .....

Three musical personalities compose this evening's hour of excellent musical offerings starting at 9:15 p. m.—Henry Selinger, director of the Drake concert ensemble; Lucile Wynekoop, mezzo-soprano, and Edward Benedict, organist. Their selections will feature the entire hour.

WLIB PROGRAM

Two musical features of no little importance make the day from WLIB, the Liberty station, one of special note. To begin with, this evening between 8:15 and 9:15, WLIB presents for the first time one of the famous Atwater Kent concerts that are attracting such wide musical attention in the east. The featured soloists in this hour's program are Maria Kuremko, soprano, and Felix Salmond, cellist, both artists of international fame.

The program will be brought from New York via the WEAF chain, and put on the air from the WLIB transmitter at Elgin.

The second musical treat of the day is the first broadcast of a concert by the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra of thirty-five pieces. Joseph A. Schwickerath, whose work as the musical director of the Jewish religious services some months ago will be remembered by those who heard them broadcast, is in entire charge of the concerts this season. The director of the orchestra is Richard Czerwonky, and today's guest conductor is Rowland Leach. Haydn Thomas of the Savage Opera company is today's soloist.

The concerts of the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra are to be broadcast each Sunday afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock direct from the North Side Lincoln Turner hall. They are held under the auspices of the Chicago Turngemeinde. Today's program is as follows:

Pear Gynt Suite No. 1 ..... Greig
Morning—Ase's Death—Anitra's Dance in the Hall of the Mountain King.
Andante Cantabile (For Strings Only) ..... Tschaikowsky
Entre Act Gavotte from "Mignon" ..... Thomas
Waltz: "Blue Danube," Part III ..... Strauss
Overture: "Merry Wives of Windsor" ..... Nicolai
Group of Songs:
"The Maiden's Death" ..... Schubert
"Good Morning Mr. Sunshine" ..... Lehmann
"The Last Song" ..... Rogers
Haydn Thomas.
"Three Dances" from Henry the VIII. ..... German
Moorish Dance—Shepherd's Dance—Torch Dance.
March: "Bojaren" ..... Halvorsen

For jazz lovers Fred Hamm and his Liberty orchestra are to offer their regular Sunday afternoon jazz concert, starting at 5:30 p. m., and what a riot of syncopation and fun it will be! Assisting Fred and his gang during the hour will be the Langdon brothers, Kenneth and Byron, the Hawaiian guitar specialists and exclusive WLIB artists, whose splendid Hawaiian music is among the most popular on the ether, and Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden, the radio entertainers extraordinary.

Every Radio Maker Now Claims Tone Quality

Why Pfanstiehl Has It

"It Is All in the Overtones"

TONE QUALITY in any musical instrument depends upon the overtones—how full and perfect they are. The same thing is true of radio reception. A faithful reproduction of voice or music is impossible unless the overtones are reproduced exactly as transmitted. Any loss or distortion of them spoils the individuality of fine music or of a great singer.

In radio the way to prevent such loss or distortion is, by protecting the radio stream from being marred by stray energy generated in the circuit or between circuits. The devices employed to absorb such stray energy may prevent unpleasant noises, but they cannot save the delicate vibrations (which make overtones) from being blurred.

Utterly Simple Circuit

Such blurring is impossible in the Pfanstiehl Overtone receiver. The radio stream is perfectly controlled. No stray energy can be generated. No devices are needed to absorb it. The pattern of vibrations is kept intact, exactly as transmitted.

The very simplicity of the Pfanstiehl is evidence of high efficiency and beautiful tone. A glance inside the set shows how utterly free from complications the circuit is. The panel outside is swept clean of non-essentials. There is but one tuning dial and that is absolutely single. No verniers or other auxiliary adjusters are needed to refine the tuning.

Perfect Single Dial Tuning

Pfanstiehl single dial tuning is made possible by the same simplicity of circuit which produced the overtone receiver. The radio stream is perfectly even. There are no electrical inequalities in the circuits. Hence they can be completely tuned by a single dial.

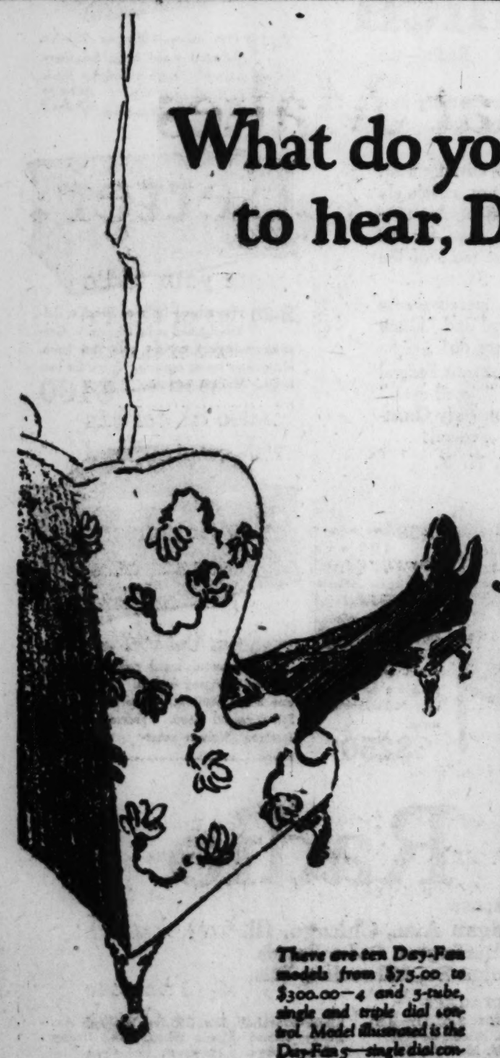
What do you want to hear, Dad?



HERE'S a boy for you! He can play for his father, stretched out in the easy chair, a program that the richest man in the world couldn't have had ten years ago.

A turn of the single control dial, and a Metropolitan Opera star seems to stand before them singing a world famous aria. Another quarter inch turn, and he and his father are, as it seems, in the same room with the President of the United States. He skips over the map of the United States like a water bug skating over a puddle—and every time he stops, now near the Great Lakes, now in Maine, now at the Gulf of Mexico—in comes the station he asks for.

He turns a single dial to the newspaper numbers of the broadcasting stations, and Day-Fan does the rest.

Wonderful boy.

Turn your boy into the family magician by giving him a Day-Fan receiver. It will keep him home o' nights, make him love good music, teach him without his knowing it—and give you the time of your life.

Don't wait, if you want a Day-Fan this season.

There are ten Day-Fan models from $75.00 to $300.00—4 and 5-tube, single and triple dial control. Model illustrated is the Day-Fan 5—single dial control 5-tube long distance receiver—a remarkable value at $115.00.

Individual Reception
You can get complete reproducer reception, with horn turned off, with Robbins & Myers Audioscopes; children studying or asleep are thus not disturbed

The Audioscope—the New Marvel of the Radio World
Clear and true, without distortion or blare, the air tubes of the new Robbins & Myers Audioscope float the pure tones of voice or music to your ears on a column of air.
This new marvel is to radio what the stethoscope is to the physician. With his instrument he listens to the faintest whispering of the heart. With the Audioscope you can hear every tonal detail in all its original clarity and sweetness.
Audioscopes are extremely light in weight. You could wear them for hours without the slightest discomfort.
This feature alone would make the Robbins & Myers reproducer the finest in the world—but with it also you get the many other PATENTED FEATURES FOUND ONLY IN THIS REPRODUCER, together with a quality of tonal tone that words cannot describe and which you must hear to appreciate.

This CUT-OFF —an exclusive Robbins & Myers feature, enables you to operate horn or Audioscope, singly or together, without any change of dial adjustments

The Harmonist
Every radio set has its own individuality and a horn must be tuned to each set to get the full value, quality and tone volume. This Harmonist feature enables you to tune the Robbins & Myers reproducer accurately to any set. You never have really heard what your set is capable of until you have tuned it in on a Robbins & Myers speaker with the Harmonist

For Group Entertainment
the Robbins & Myers Reproducer gives new and heretofore hidden qualities of tones and overtones . . . the natural, mellow beauty of instrument or voice

Combination Reception . . . a feature not to be found in any other reproducer. Those with impaired hearing can now get perfect reception with the Audioscope, while the rest of the family listen to the horn operating at normal volume

What Makes a Good Set Better?

No matter how simple or elaborate your radio set, its results are limited by the abilities of the reproducer you use. A "super" or a two-tuber is definitely and decidedly a better set when used with a Robbins & Myers Reproducer because of certain properties EXCLUSIVELY found in this original and efficient speaker.

You will hear more music than you've ever heard before . . . you will discover the rich, resonant bass, the lyric, lilting upper notes in all their original clarity and sweetness . . . in your Robbins & Myers Reproducer. This new tonal r-o-u-n-d-n-e-s-s that is so startlingly lifelike and natural is made possible by a patented device originated by Robbins & Myers, the Harmonist [see arrow "A"].

Cheap speakers are the poorest radio economy. Users say that Robbins & Myers Reproducers would be economical at twice their asked price, for they deliver all that your set is capable of, be it large or small.

Note the exclusive patented features. They are to be found solely in R&M Reproducers. Look for the store nearest you listed in the column to the left . . . stop in and listen to the marvelous tonal quality this speaker delivers . . . it cannot be described in words, but your ear will tell you instantly.

WORLD HAS 922 RADIO STATIONS; U. S. ALONE, 566

Britain, with 21, Serves 23,000,000 People.

The latest estimate—and it is an official estimate—of the number of broadcasting stations in the world places the figure at no fewer than nine hundred and twenty-two!

Nine hundred and twenty-two stations—and all in rather less than four years.

Of this number more than half are in the United States of America, where there are actually 566, leaving 356 distributed over the rest of the world.

Great Britain has 21, of which one is a very high powered station (claiming to serve a population of 23,000,000 persons within crystal range alone) nine are main stations of 1½ to 3 kilowatts power, and the remaining eleven are comparatively low powered relay stations.

Germany to Add More.

In Germany there are at the moment 20, and this number will shortly be increased by two, when that country will possess at least one of the highest powered stations in the world.

France has 19. In Spain there are so far 13, but 5 more are projected. In Russia there are only 7, but this number will be doubled in a few months, and before the end of next year it is expected that no fewer than 30 will be in operation. Several extremely high powered stations are included in the Russian scheme—which is perhaps only natural.

Sweden has 9 stations in operation and another in course of erection; Czecho-Slovakia, 9; Holland, 5; Finland, 4; Denmark, 5; and in Jugo-Slavia there are 3 working and another under way.

100 in Canada.

Other interesting figures are those provided by Canada, where there are approximately 100 stations, of which 13 are in Toronto, 11 in Calgary, 9 in Vancouver, 8 in Montreal, and 5 in Winnipeg. Here, of course, there is also the finest railway broadcasting system which has yet been developed, in the chain of stations operated by the Canadian National railway.

Australia has now 15 and there will shortly be 3 more. These are chiefly stations of considerable power, having an output of five kilowatts.

India has only 3 to date, there are two more being constructed. Ceylon is comparatively well equipped, with no fewer than 10 stations.

South Africa possesses 4, and there is one in the Canary islands. Hongkong has 2, but in the whole of China there are only 2, although 4 more are likely to be built shortly.

A curious figure is that of Japan. There are so far only 3 stations working, but it appears that about 30 more are shortly to be set up—by American radio contractors, strangely enough.

Finally, the position in South America is worth noting: Cuba has 36 stations, but these are practically all of the low powered type, some having an output as low as 10 watts. Mexico has 16, 7 of which are in Mexico City. In Havana there are 18, and in Brazil 9. The city of Buenos Aires claims 11 out of 12 in the Argentine Republic, Chile has 2, Peru 1, Uruguay 2, and Venezuela 1.

Many Stations Sign Off Broadcasting in November

With a long line waiting for station permits, the usual monthly list of deletions, which heretofore attracted little or no attention, has now assumed importance. The stations which signed off permanently during the month of November were:

COAST TO COAST U. S. RADIO NET NOW COMPLETE

War Department Ready for Emergencies.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Following three years of careful organization, the war department radio net, spanning the country from coast to coast and easily the greatest communication system of its kind in the world, has at last been completed.

An essential agency in time of war and always an outstanding protection against storm or disaster which might knock commercial telegraph and telephone wires, this invisible net now touches the principal points of the country, among which are New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, D. C., Atlanta, Birmingham, Montgomery, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, St. Louis, Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, Atlanta, Portland, Ore., and San Francisco.

The war department radio net has a peace time value in as much as the war-hookup has brought about a consolidation of government communication activities and is doing away with a duplication of effort. In 1922, 1,800,000 words were transmitted; in 1923, 4,500,000 words, and in 1924, 6,300,000 words. Had the business of the fiscal year been transmitted over commercial wires at government rates the cost to the government would have been $155,697.70.

Training for War.

"It is a practical training in peacetime to develop personnel that will be fully capable to handle and supervise those activities during an emergency," said Maj. Gen. C. McK. Saltsman, chief signal officer of the army. "It is the foundtaion for unified control and systematized method in handling government communications during war times.

"The war department radio net established by the army in 1922 is today a complete and comprehensive network of radio stations covering the nine corps areas, operated exclusively by military personnel. This net was originally initiated as a communication feature of certain war department war plans to insure communication with corps area headquarters and certain critical cities in case of failure or destruction of the commercial wire system.

Five Stations in 1923.

"In 1922, the success of the war department radio net was such as to warrant the first expansion of facilities and traffic. At that time the five original stations transmitted approximately fifty official messages daily, the average government message containing approximately forty words. Today the war department radio net has twelve major stations. One station is located in each corps area headquarters; two are relay stations for transcontinental traffic between Washington and the Pacific coast, and one is in the District of Washington. Each corps area controls within itself a radio network covering the important garrisons and posts, making a grand total of sixty corps area net stations."

At the present time the facilities of the war department radio net are handling traffic for the following government bureaus:

The departments of war, navy, labor, justice, treasury, commerce, and agriculture; the veterans' bureau, United States shipping board, bureau of lighthouses, interstate commerce commission, civil service commission, the Panama canal, public health service, coast guard, weather bureau, postoffice department, and department of the interior.

KYW ARRANGES FOR FAMILY WORSHIP EACH MORNING BY RADIO

Fifteen minutes of morning family worship, broadcast by KYW each day at 7:30 a. m., is among the latest of radio assets.

When this bit of broadcast was inaugurated, in connection with Central Y. M. C. A., several months ago, there was no expectation that this service would soon reach out as extensively as this family worship has done. From letters received, it has become evident that countless numbers of families have adopted this as a daily routine.

Each week introduces a new pastor, who comes to KYW's studio to give this fifteen minute service.

Finds Super Power Not Harmful as Painted

An important investigation just completed under the direction of George K. Burgess, director of the United States bureau of standards, shows less harmful effects from high power broadcasting stations than had been anticipated. Special mention was also made by Dr. Burgess in recounting the bureau's work, of the transmission of standard frequency signals, and the development of improved frequency meters, both of which are the basis for keeping transmitting stations on their assigned frequency, a radio factor of great importance.

It converts your "A" battery into a permanent "A" power unit that operates from the light socket and furnishes full current to the "A" circuit at all times.

With any smaller battery (4 volt or small 6-volt) this charger may be used as an intermittent charger of the usual type. With small batteries this charger can also be used as a trickle charger if a resistance is added to cut down the charging rate.

The Balkite Trickle Charger is 5½ in. long, 2¾ in. wide, 5 in. high. It may be put in the usual dry cell compartment. Charging rate .4 to .5 amperes. Current consumption 1/10¢ per hour. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.

Price $10

The whole trend in radio is towards simplicity and ease of operation. In this movement Balkite Radio Power Units have played a very important part. They reduce the amount of attention you must give your set by making your current supply unfailing and always available.

Balkite Radio Power Units improve radio reception. With their use your current supply never varies or is low—it is always exactly what is required for each circuit.

For the "A" circuit there are the Balkite Chargers. The popular Balkite Battery Charger is entirely noiseless and can be used while the set is in operation.

The Balkite Trickle Charger converts your "A" battery into a permanent "A" power unit that supplies full "A" current at all times from the light socket.

Balkite "B" eliminates "B" batteries entirely and supplies plate current from the light socket. Balkite "B" is specially designed to serve sets of 6 tubes or less—Balkite "B" II, sets of 6 tubes or more.

An ideal installation is a Trickle Charger and "A" battery and Balkite "B." This enables you to operate your set entirely from the light socket. As a further convenience an automatic switch may be added.

Noiseless—No bulbs—Permanent

All Balkite Radio Power Units are based on the same principle. All are entirely noiseless in operation. They have no moving parts, no bulbs, and nothing to adjust, break or get out of order. They cannot deteriorate through use or disuse—each is a permanent piece of equipment with nothing to wear out or replace. They require no other attention than the infrequent addition of water. They do not interfere with your set or your neighbor's. Their current consumption is remarkably low. They are universal in application and require no changes or additions to your set.

Read the specific applications of the four units. Whatever type of set you own, Balkite Radio Power Units will serve it.

Sold by radio dealers everywhere.

FOR THE "B" CIRCUIT

Balkite "B"

Eliminates "B" batteries. Supplies plate current from the light socket. Operates with either storage battery or dry cell tubes. Keeps "B" circuit always operating at maximum efficiency, for with its use the plate current supply is never low. Requires no changes or additions to your set. No bulbs—nothing to replace. Operates by connecting to light socket. Requires no attention other than adding water twice a year.

A new model, designed to serve any set requiring not more than 20 milliamperes at 90 volts—practically all sets of 5 tubes or less and most 6 tube sets. Current cost about 1/10¢ per hour. Size 8¼ in. long, 8 in. high, 3¼ in. wide. Occupies about same space as 45 volt dry "B" battery. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.

Balkite "B" II

The same model unchanged as offered last year, when it was the great development of the season. Based on the same principle as the new Balkite "B," but is a unit of much greater flexibility and capacity. Will fit any set including those of 8 tubes or more. Current capacity 40 milliamperes at 90 volts. Size 9 in. high, 6¼ in. wide, 7½ in. deep. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.

All the power and range of larger Atwater Kent sets are in this new Model 20 Compact. All the same parts are there—just rearranged to save space. Same tone and volume—same distance and selectivity.

That's the trend of modern invention—discarding mere bulk to save space and increase convenience.

It's been done with automobiles. The cumbersome, heavy cars of ten and fifteen years ago have given place to the smaller, smarter models now in vogue—easier to handle in traffic, easier to park, and costing less for up-keep.

It was natural that in radio this trend should be sensed and met. It was still more natural that this should be done by Atwater Kent.

You must see the Model 20 Compact to appreciate it fully. Go to any store where Atwater Kent Radio is sold. Better go today.

AMONG THOSE WHO WILL WINTER IN THE SOUTH IS THE CAPE

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—When Shelley posed that famous question, "If winter comes, can spring be far behind?" he had no idea of the modern conveniences. He didn't know spring would now follow close on the heels of winter as a Pomeranian on the heels of a lady of fashion. Yet such is the condition brought about by the boom of our great Florida resorts. If things keep on like this, the present generation will know a winter landscape only through the Christmas cards. For hardly does the cold weather set in before these fashionable folks set out—for southern climes.

This year the exodus is starting even earlier than ever. Dockets of impatient people can't wait even for their plum pudding and mistletoe. As a result, the specialty shops are now just fairly twittering with their harbingers of spring

The heroine of all the Palm Beach collections is the cape. Several weeks ago I wrote feelingly on the rise of this garment. Now after seeing a number of collections I can be still more eloquent. Short and long, separate and part of an ensemble, an individual garment and a detail of some other garment—in all these guises the cape is with us. And it is therefore, no haphazard choice that dictated the incorporation of this high note of fashion in four of today's sketches.

At the extreme left you will find a separate cape—one which is true to the theory of fitted shoulders and circular contours impressed so fervently upon modern style. You see it here in white broadcloth bordered in white coney, and the bordering is accomplished through the aid of an appliqued band and a design of silver kid appearing also on the high collar.

No, the dear old coat is not going to be put out of business. Far from it. There is, in fact, a Palm Beach classic which is sold year in and year out by some of the most exclusive shops to their most exclusive patrons. You know what it is—the full length, straight line coat of white flannel, homespun, kasha, or broadcloth, collared in white fox. There is not the slightest danger that this Banquo of Palm Beach is going to fail to keep its usual engagements this season. However, it must be said that the cape I have just described is newer, more graceful, and more picturesque than this hereditary daytime wrap.

And there are many novelties in the Palm Beach coat. Among these is the unlined variety which, developed most often in either broadcloth or kasha, accompanies a frock of crepe or similar weave. The leading idea expressed by such unlined coats is the avoidance of any appearance of bulk. Indeed, Jenny, in construing this garment, bants it to the point of leaving off any collar or cuffs.

Then there are various exponents of the three-quarter idea. Knitted coats in high and pastel tints seem to have come in for a high degree of appreciation this season, and certainly when worn over frock of white or harmonizing tint fulfil that expectation of color raised by our palm fringed strand. Velveteen, too, lingers in the lap of our canned spring, and charming quilted coats of this fabric, made in slightly flaring, three-quarter design with fitted sleeves and tidy revers, are often quilted in the Lanvin manner.

Then, too, it must not be forgotten that many a smart coat of today invites the cape to its party. Witness to this fact is found in our second sketch, a charming and individual model which is suitable both for travel and for the less clement days in the south. This is made of tweed in tea rose pink and white, and its distinctive feature is the little shoulder cape craftily echoed by a deep flounce below. Both cape and flounce find an ally in the front panel effect, and the final goal of smartness is won from the big buttons of summer ermine.

Whether you're going to tag summer in Florida or on the Riviera, the all white costume is never a mis-step. There is plenty of white to be found in this season's offerings, but it alternates with all the tints that have lately been Left, a gigolo hat of white velour bound in silver grosgrain takes its cue from a new and smart circular cape of white broadcloth bordered in white coney and set off by touches of silver kid. Next, again Eve has dealings with the snake. Witness the smart one-strap snakeskin pumps which, with a Reboux felt in rose brown, complete the effect of this stunning coat of tweed in tea rose pink and white, with its shoulder cape, flounce, and buttons of summer ermine.

Three leading aspirations of the midseason are unified in the afternoon frock of chartreuse chiffon—sketched in the center—when tucks executed in both directions combine with a shoulder cape and an apron back. The big matching hat of hair and the green kid heels of white slippers bring the costume into close harmony.

Fourth, a sailor collar's life is the life for me—so decides many an up to date jumper. Another worthy ambition of this garment is to be topped by a cape. Both of these wishes are realized in this ensemble which tops a frock of bois de rose crepe with a matching cape of kasha jersey. The sailor collar is finished with plaited ruffle, and the narrow belt fastens with rhinestones in the shape of old fashioned hook and eye. Deauville sandals in gray and white and a vagabond shape of matching felt are the leading accessories.

Last, every pilgrim to Florida must include some such simple, chic little frock of crepe as is sketched here. In mauve crepe, this shows a skirt with six box plaits in front and fine tucks at strategic points.

so widely in vogue. Bois de rose in all its inflections is perhaps the tone most constantly stressed, yet how can one discriminate against these numerous greens and blues and mauves that splash our sartorial palette?

It is a yellow green which the designer selected for the chiffon afternoon gown sketched in the center of the page. Now every mid-season showing has set its seal of approval upon plaits, and certainly one can't accuse this present model of any infidelity to the plait bargain. In fact, the frock is simply made by its interchange of horizontal and diagonal tucks—exceedingly fine. The horizontal ones function in the yoke appearing both front and back, in the girded hip effect and, last of all, in those lantern puffs of the sleeves. Yet this model is not without its own contribution to our leading thesis.

Yes, the cape's the thing and this frock proves it by that graceful little shoulder drapery reserved for the back and sustained in the back by an apron of the same unplaited chiffon. And, by the way, the cape here has other intimations of style. Does it not suggest the bolero influence? Let me say quickly that this bolero note is struck time and time again and that often, just as you see it accomplished here, the shoulder drapery is a tactful compromise between cape and bolero.

There are several other details of this frock which point to fashion determinations of the mid-season. One of these is the matter of binding the hips so that the widened skirt may have its full value. This is expressed with especial emphasis in the gypsy girdle, which is still able to tell the fashion fortune of many a gown. Another is that business of the apron. The latter may be unfurled at any point—side, back, or front—but always it lends that effect of irregularity which is the first thing any well bred hem-line learns. Even some of the sports jumpers add an apron to their skirt front.

The accessories accompanying this little afternoon model are particularly interesting. First of all, there is the big matching hat of horsehair which, trimmed with its bow of ribbon in darker tone, follows the approved system of the shortened back. Then there are the white kid shoes tied with bows of grosgrain ribbon and finished with—yes, with green heels! This thing of the heel of your shoe is becoming quite ominous. Never could one make a graver mistake than "being out at the heel." For upon this section of the shoe the designers are lavishing their most tender attentions.

There are the metallic kid slippers of evening destiny with heels twinkling rays of brilliants. There are other evening slippers, quite plain as to vamp and back, which show high heels painted up like a restaurant ceiling and then endowed with motifs of brilliants and imitation stones. As to the daytime modes, these often introduce a flashing touch of color entirely through this medium. And it goes without saying that the brilliant heel gratifies our passion for matching this and that. For example, one smart woman whom I noted on Fifth avenue the other day wore a black costume with a red velour hat echoed by her pouch bag and the heels of her black patent leather pumps.

The hats that will migrate southward range from the inevitable small brimmed affair to the big picturesque shapes. Types of both are illustrated on this page. We begin at the left with a white velour bound in silver grosgrain. Here is the famous gigolo shape which is now affected by so many fashionable heads on both sides of the water. I have already mentioned this hat, but I cannot forbear drawing your attention once more to its salient feature—the crown which soars in the back and which crumbles into a huge crevasse in the front. The enormous crease is in fact, typical of the gigolo.

Among the straws ballbumtl retains all its former popularity, and one sees it in its most glamorous representation in the Louis XV. mode, the big brimmed affair with a short back to contrast with wide front and side brim. At the extreme right we find this costly straw executed in pale orchid and trimmed, not with the usual ribbon, but with scrolls of satin in darker tone. It goes without saying that a hat of this character is essential to one's peace of mind on a southern afternoon. In fact, the big brim fits into the mood of palm and sea as no small bonnet can possibly do, and it is a foolhardy woman who does not complement her small felts and velours with these more decorative types of millinery.

Another type of straw which is widely exploited for southern use is the crocheted variety. Such straws are made into many adorable small shapes where their pliability renders them as practical as they are ornamental.

Now as to the jumper: Here is undoubtedly the most cherished companion of your Florida jaunt. Travel with flocks of them. Make them in crepe and cloth. Make them in all lengths and all styles. Carry them separate and in ensemble styles, but whatever you do, don't neglect to carry them, for today the two-piece creation is more popular than ever before.

Of course, one of the newest moods of the jumper is in the cape ensemble and, though here both garments may be carried out in the same material, it is more usual to find your crepe two-piece creation topped by a cloth cape.

We show in our fourth sketch one of these cape jumper trusts developed in bois de rose crepe and bois de rose kasha jersey, respectively. The cut of this unlined cloth cape is exceedingly effective, and the jumper instructs you that there is nothing smarter in jumper lore than a sailor collar—this one is accompanied by a plaited flounce and by a narrow belt.

2498—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 14 and 16 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material with ¾ yard of 32 inch contrasting.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THERE is no more fascinating sewing than making lingerie of lovely materials and laces—to say nothing of hand embroidery—in exquisite colors for those who prefer colors to white.

Slips are an indispensable part of every woman's wardrobe, so that pattern No. 2315 will surely be just what you want, if you haven't it already. It is cut with a round neck in the back, a pointed one in the front, and narrow shoulder seams. It is perforated for cutting straight across under the arms, and shows just where the shoulder straps are to be attached.

Naturally these slips cost much less when made at home than when bought ready made; and there are many materials from which to choose. Crêpe de chine, radium silk, satin, and crêpe satin are the most favored materials for nice slips, while for wash dresses, for ordinary morning wear, there are light weight sateens, spider silk, and cambrics.

One often sees these slips made of crêpe and elaborately trimmed with lace. The bottom of the skirt, instead of having a straight, hemmed edge, may be cut in points or round or oval scallops. This sort of edge should be finished with a rolled hem and the lace insertion and edging gathered to it. However, the lace should not be set on full—just full enough so it will lie flat around the curves or points.

Lace medallions or rows of lace insertion set in horizontally will make the camisole pretty. The shoulder straps may be made of the material with hemstitched edges or an inch and one-half wide ribbon or lace insertion used.

If the slip is cut to go over the shoulders and the neck cut round across the back and in a rather deep V in front it will be necessary to work eyelets at regular intervals around the neck, through which ribbon may be run. Or the neck may be finished with lace beading and edging. One rarely sees these slips without shoulder straps; but the other way will allow the garment to hold in place over the shoulders and not slip about, as straps often do.

Wool rep, wool taffet, challis, or any of the wash materials would make up beautifully by pattern No. 2279. The front and back are each cut in one piece and flare out quite a little at the bottom of the skirt, making a little ripple at the sides—a smart feature. The dress is made to button the full length and finished at the neck with the well liked convertible collar.

If wash dresses are to be made by this pattern it will be sensible to buy really good pearl shank buttons. Then make eyelets down the button side of the front, and buttonholes, of course, down the opposite side. Put the buttons in with the little rings that are sold for the purpose, and take the buttons out when the dress is to be washed. This isn't much trouble, and it makes the dress much easier to iron; and one set of buttons can be made to do service for several dresses.

Flares are growing more popular all the time, and they are generally becoming; and make walking a more graceful operation than many of the exaggeratedly tight skirts do. Pattern No. 2498 is a pretty design for an afternoon or street dress; and will work up well in any of the crêpes, satin, flannel, or light weight twills.

The long waisted body is cut with sleeves that extend to the neckline, and lend the appearance of a shallow yoke across the shoulders. To the front of the shoulder parts the fronts are gathered and set on. This slight fullness on the shoulders is a feature that is becoming to every woman and is especially good where the material is thin.

The front of the waist is open the entire length, and plaits or hems are applied that extend up to the neck, where they join the collar, rolling slightly to form revers. The dress can be buttoned—and this is best—or small snaps may be used to fasten, and buttons used as trimming.

A great many of the winter dresses will be made with long sleeves; and this pattern provides for full length, close fitting ones. The short sleeves are prettily finished with turned back cuffs that should match the material used in the front plaits and collar. A narrow band or belt covers the joining of the skirt and waist; and this is also made of the contrasting material.

The skirt is in two pieces, and cut triangular. Anything cut even slightly circular should be allowed to hang and stretch for several days before getting the correct length and finishing.

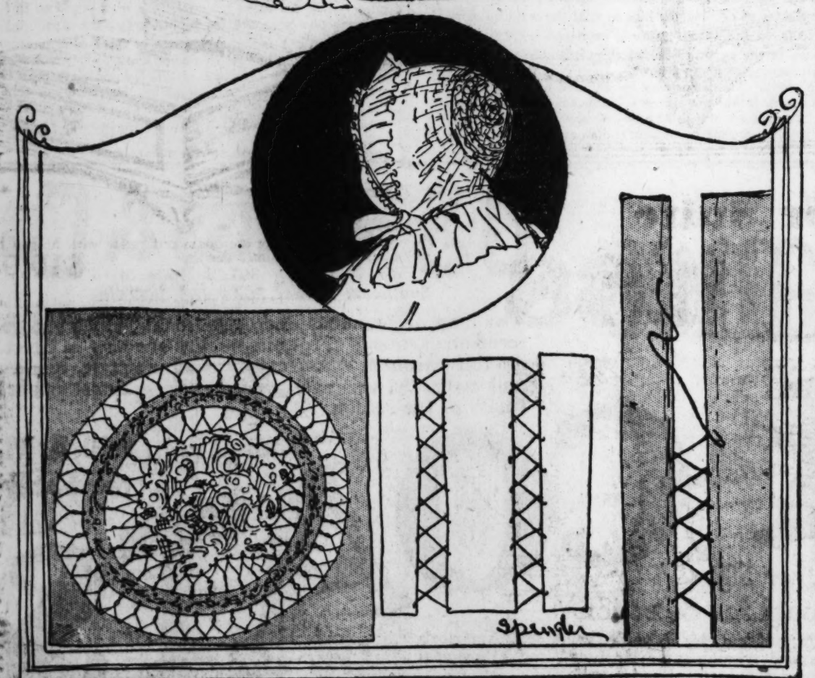
Practical and Fancy Needle Work By Clotilde



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

STITCHING LESSONS—FAGGOTING.

FAGGOTING is one of the most useful as well as decorative of fancy stitches, and can be used on dresses for women; children, and babies, to say nothing of many kinds of fancy work.

Lace medallions can be set in centerpieces, doilies, etc., by means of faggoting, and dainty lace and embroidered caps for young babies are lovely with perhaps a lace medallion set into the center of the cap with faggoting, and two or more strips of the cap material join by faggoting.

The only difficult part of the work is the preparation. A piece of heavy writing paper or thin cardboard should be used, and with a sharp pencil lines should be drawn, showing just where the faggoting is to be. For instance, if the sketch is to be used to join strips of material that are straight, draw lines parallel to each other, and about three-eighths of an inch apart. Then baste the bands or material to be joined in this way exactly on the pencil lines. When this is done, the faggoting is put in.

Begin at the lower left hand corner, cross the space and put the needle in the edge of the material—making the stitch small. Then cross to the opposite side, and take a small stitch there. Of course, the stitches and spaces must all be the same. This is the simplest form of faggoting and is pretty.

Of course, before basting material on the paper the edges have to be turned in or hemmed; and sometimes faggoting joins narrow or wide bands that are double.

The width of the space should be governed by the material on which it is to be used; and if a fine quality of linen—say handkerchief linen—is to be used for a baby's cap the faggoting would not be over an eighth of an inch in width probably. But whatever the width, be sure to have the work evenly done.

A centerpiece or fancy doiley would be lovely cut round, oblong, or square, as one prefers, and then three parallel lines drawn, and the faggoting to be set in between the two outer lines and then the same stitch used to set in a lace medallion. Naturally one has to figure the entire thing out before doing any cutting.

The size of the finished piece, the space the medallion will take up and the space taken by the faggoting and the strip of lace insertion or material in between the two rows of faggotting. Then cut a piece of heavy paper the desired size and carefully mark off all necessary lines on it. The picture will show the idea, and these are only a few suggestions of the uses to which this stitch can be put.

NATURE'S LESSON

The liver of the cod-fish is Nature's richest depository of certain health-giving vitamins.

This abundance of vitamins comes directly from the food found by the cod-fish in the sea and consumed daily and the excess is stored in the rich oil in its liver.

Scott's Emulsion, rich in vitamin-tested cod-liver oil, is the efficient and palatable way that a child or grown person can obtain the abundance of health-giving vitamins needed daily.

Do not wait until you are all rundown or out of strength.

The strength-saving way—the one to prevent weakness—is to protect every avenue of health by taking invigorating Scott's Emulsion three times every day.

"SUCH manners!" exploded Mr. Nickeldick, as he stamped off through the snow. "I never saw such rudeness and impoliteness in all my born days—right while I was telling them about Aunt Windpenny, too."

Mr. Nickeldick had gone to spend the evening with the Sligs. Mr. Slig had gone to sleep and snored, right while Mr. Nickeldick was telling him about the time Aunt Windpenny almost choaked on a peach seed. Mrs. Slig had yawned a couple of times, too.

It was most insulting, and Mr. Nickeldick had stamped off in a huff, not even stopping to awaken Mr. Slig to say good-night.

He was so angry he gave little attention to the direction he took, and soon he noticed he had strayed off the road. He stopped and looked around, but it was snowing so hard he could not see far.

"The road must be over there by that big cottonwood tree," he said to himself, so he set off towards the tree. Presently he noticed footprints in the snow. They smelled slightly foxy. Mr. Nickeldick stopped in his tracks, and squinted ahead through the falling snow. He could see something a little way off. He never did know just what it was. It might have been a fox, or it might have been the stump of a tree. He had no desire to investigate—he bolted. Above all things, Mr. Nickeldick hated foxes, especially on lonely nights.

They smelled slightly foxy.

He hadn't the slightest idea where he was going. He was too scared to think about that. He ran until his side ached, and then he began to look for some place to hide and rest. In a moment he saw a hole in the snow, and without giving a thought as to where it might lead, he dashed head first into it. He ran only a few jumps when he stubbed his toe and fell to the ground. He rolled over and over, and suddenly burst through something into a lighted room.

"I'll send a man over to mend the ceiling."

Mr. Nickeldick blinked and looked around. He was sitting on the floor in front of an open fireplace. There was a great hole in the ceiling through which he had fallen. An old lady ground squirrel was sitting in a comfortable rocking chair. She was crocheting violently and she never even looked up when Mr. Nickeldick entered. He was so astonished at the strange behavior he couldn't speak, so he sat staring at the old lady.

"Leave your overshoes in the kitchen," said the squirrel, never raising her eyes from the crocheting. "Hang your overcoat on the foot of the bed, and I'll put the teakettle on in a few minutes."

"I—I—I beg your pardon," said Mr. Nickeldick as he got up from the floor, "I lost my way and——"

"How?" asked the old squirrel, looking at Mr. Nickeldick for the first time. "I'm a little hard of hearin'."

"I beg your pardon," answered Mr. Nickeldick, making a bow.

"Won't do you any good to beg here," snapped the old lady, resuming her crocheting. "We never feed tramps."

"I'm not a tramp," bellowed Mr. Nickeldick at the top of his rabbit lungs. "I lost my way and fell into your house quite by accident. Nickeldick is my name. Alexander Nickeldick."

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Whittlestick," smiled the old lady, motioning towards a chair. "Won't you sit yourself down?"

Mr. Nickeldick thanked the squirrel and sat down in the chair, which had a neat cover crocheted all over it. He looked around and discovered almost everything in the room was covered with crocheting. The poker and shovel had their handles crocheted. A table was entirely hidden by a crocheted cover. There was a crocheted jacket on the clock; in fact, all the bric-a-brac was thoroughly crocheted in for the winter. Candlesticks, picture frames, doorknobs, and a globe of goldfish all had crocheted covers on them.

"Do you crochet everything?" shouted Mr. Nickeldick.

"Everything I can lay my hands on," answered the old lady, measuring Mr. Nickeldick up and down with her eye.

Mr. Nickeldick looked uneasy, and moved his chair near the doorway.

"I believe she'd crochet a cover over me, if she had half a chance," he said to himself.

"Well, I reckon we ought to have a sup of tea," said the old squirrel, putting down her crocheting. "I'll put on the kettle and fetch out a few cookies."

"That would be nice," said Mr. Nickeldick.

"What? What did you say about ice?" asked the squirrel.

"I said that would be nice," screamed Mr. Nickeldick at the top of his voice. He had forgotten the old lady was hard of hearing.

"Yes, if this weather keeps up we ought to have nice ice by morning,' answered the squirrel as she took two cups out of a tiny corner cupboard.

She filled a small copper kettle with water, and hung it over the fire. Then she pulled up a little table that was covered with a tight fitting crocheting, even the legs were covered by a sort of crocheted pants, and Mr. Nickeldick smiled to himself, for the table looked as though it was wearing a suit of knit underwear.

Set a dish of cookies on the table.

Next the squirrel set the two cups and saucers on the table and all of them were covered with neat crocheted jackets. She put some spoons on the table and they were covered with crocheting down to the bowl.

"I wonder if the cookies will be crocheted," thought Mr. Nickeldick, but he drew a sigh of relief when the old lady set a dish of cakes on the table—only the dish was crocheted.

"I like my tea strong," said the squirrel, as she took some tea out of a crocheted covered tea can, and put it into a crocheted tea sop.

"Now, if you'll take your chair and draw nigh, we'll have a sup and a bite."

The old lady took the kettle off the fire and poured out two cups of tea. Mr. Nickeldick unfolded a crocheted napkin, and helped himself to the cookies.

"These are delightful cookies," said Mr. Nickeldick, biting into one.

"Frightful!" exclaimed the old squirrel in astonishment. "Why, I thought they were pretty good."

"I said they were delightful!" hastily bellowed Mr. Nickeldick into the old woman's ear.

"O! that's different," she giggled.

While they drank their tea, Mr. Nickeldick explained at the top of his voice how he had lost his way and how he had come to tumble in on the old lady.

"I LIVE OVER IN PUCKERBUSH," he screamed, "TWENTY-THREE SNUFFERS LANE, PUCKERBUSH."

"That's not far off," said the squirrel. "You just cut across the field and over the hill and in a few minutes you'll be home."

"I'll send a man over in the morning to mend the ceiling where I fell in," said Mr. Nickeldick.

"Never mind that," smiled the squirrel. "I was thinkin' I would crochet over the place—it needed fixin', anyhow."

When Mr. Nickeldick was about to leave, the old squirrel handed him a ball of crocheting cotton.

"Here," she said, "take this and unroll it as you walk along. By the time you have come to the end of the ball you'll be pretty nigh home. If you should get lost, all you'll have to do is to follow the string right back here."

"But I don't want to use your good crocheting cotton," yelled Mr. Nickeldick.

"Never mind that," answered the old lady, "it will take you about fifteen minutes to come to the end of the string. I'll wait about ten minutes more, and then I'll begin to crochet and in a short time I'll have it all crocheted back."

"That's a pretty good idea," yelled Mr. Nickeldick, putting the ball into his pocket. You have been mighty nice to me."

"O, that's all right," cried the old squirrel as Mr. Nickeldick stepped out into the night. "Drop in again some time."

Mr. Nickeldick walked along until he came to the end of the string, then he dropped it on the ground, and by the time he had reached his home the old squirrel had crocheted it back into a jacket for the teakettle.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Visitors in our home have so often brought gifts to Jimmie that he has come to expect something at each new arrival. We have tried to train him away from this idea, and have forbidden him to mention gifts to any one.

One night his uncle arrived. Jimmie chatted with him for some time. Then uncle began to ask questions.

"What are you going to do when you get to be a big man?" he asked.

Jimmie's eyes grew a bit shrewd. "O, travel around and visit folks!" he announced. "And everywhere I visits, I'll give the little kid a present."

C. S. A.

There are three children in the family—Bobby, Harriet, and Betty. Mother has been trying to teach Bobby the spirit of unselfishness, urging him to share his toys with other children and not keep them wholly and only for himself.

She was amazed to come into the room one day just in time to see Harriet give Betty a violent push, grab away a doll she had, and say: "Betty, you selfish, selfish girl, give Harriet that doll. I want it."

A. G. P.

A little brother had arrived during the night.

In the morning Johnny's father awakened him early with the glad news and asked him if he did not want to see him.

"Yes, I guess so," he murmured sleepily. "Tell him to come up here."

F. J. S.

Jane has always had a passionate fondness for cats and kittens. Her latest objects of affection were Judy and Tim—mother and child. It was a sad occasion when it was found one morning that Judy had gone to cat heaven.

Not many weeks after Jane's mother discovered by accident the following letter, addressed to Judy, 200 Heaven avenue:

"I love you, dear, dear Judy. I've not forgotten you. Tim's very well. Love from Tim and Jane."

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Your Laxative! Does It Regulate for Weeks?

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every day or two was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

Insist on "PHILLIPS" MILK OF MAGNESIA

Unless you ask for "Phillips," you may not get the original Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years as an antacid, laxative, corrective.

25-cent bottles, also 50-cent bottles, contain directions—any drug store.

Wrinkles Removed in 15 Minutes—Cost 3 Cents!

Quite a sensation has been created in certain social circles over the wonderful rejuvenating effects of a simple Tarkroot mixture which any woman can easily apply at home. The results are so remarkable that one has told others, who in turn have told many more, and now the new method bids fair to supersede all the patent wrinkle removers, massage and other things used for the purpose.

This is the procedure: A spoonful of powdered Tarkroot is mixed with a spoonful of lemon juice and this is spread over the face. An amazing transformation takes place, as the mirror shows. In less than 15 minutes wrinkles, crowsfeet and creases have completely vanished! Facial contour is noticeably improved and the face looks years younger. The most skillful massaging could not produce such a wholesome effect as remains after the mixture has been washed off. Tarkroot is of course perfectly harmless. Inexpensive, too. An original package from the druggist contains sufficient to bring the cost per treatment under 3 cents.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy.

ISN'T it odd that ants put up their bottled goods in living containers, in other ants, which they hang up like jugs for the winter there in their pantries!

Scientists have recently penetrated into basement store rooms of certain ants of the Rocky mountains and have there found more novel arrays of stored liquids than exist even in the best cellars of Long Island.

The liquid the ant has in bottles, howsever, is honey. The ant is a cousin of the bee and, therefore, fond of honey, but it has a method quite different from that of the bee for storing it away.

Certain ants, in the division of labor that is so well worked out among these tribes, are assigned to do the work of honey jars. In certain chambers hollowed out in the sandstone, these animated honey jars are hung up to the ceiling as bacon might be arranged in the smoke house for treatment.

Then the worker ants go into the trees to gather honey. Some of this honey is scraped from the tender buds of these trees, which buds are covered as with candy. Most of it, however, is taken from the herds of aphids, tiny insects that the ants keep for the purpose, as man keeps his cows. They milk the aphids for honey.

The workers take this honey to the underground winter home. They go into the honey jar basement. There they climb up to where the animated jugs are hanging. Each harvester ant puts his mouth to that of the honey jug ant and disgorges himself. Then he goes away after another load.

As this process is repeated the honey jug ants grow surprisingly. The stomach part of their bodies distend more and more. They become four times, ten times, twenty times, as large as they formerly were. In the end they are the size of grapes and look not unlike the white grapes of autumn. The ceiling of their pantry is covered with them. When they are filled they hang there for months until the reserve food supply is needed.

Then, late in the winter, the members of the colony come to them for food. Each takes his sip of honey and the grape grows smaller. By the time spring arrives the honey jug ants are back to normal, come down off their hooks, and go about other tasks as do their fellows.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for only 75 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

Needlessly Noble.

Because I had read how a certain president saved a guest from embarrassment by drinking his tea from his saucer with an even louder report than his guest, I got myself into a predicament that makes me shudder, even now.

A woman of some wealth and social position was entertaining a small party at dinner at a restaurant. We had oyster cocktails and at each place was the little cocktail fork. Everybody picked up his, but the hostess, and I noticed she was using her dinner fork, so I nobly used mine too, in order not to make her feel cheap when she discovered her mistake.

Imagine my distress when the cocktails were removed and she remarked carelessly, "O, I didn't notice my cocktail fork."

All I could say was, "I didn't either," and the waiter brought us more forks. She must have thought it was a strange coincidence?

Music with Work.

As mother's birthday was approaching, I thought I would get her a canary.

I live way out in Lisle, and have to catch an early train home in the evening from work, so I made up my mind to buy it at noon.

Everything worked fine until I began to typewrite, then the little bird started to sing, as the cage was placed on my desk. The force laughed, but what could I do—just let it sing.

I never felt so embarrassed in my life. M. S.

Misled.

I have a tiny white spitz dog and have frequently taken it on the street car with me when the weather was nice.

This day the dog was tired and was sleeping like a baby in my arms when I got on the car, and as there were no available seats I had to be a strap hanger.

Presently a man touched my arm and I turned around as he said, "Have my—" and saw it was a dog instead of a baby I held. I blushed while he again seated himself and other passengers laughed. My few blocks in the car seemed like 10 miles. M. D.

In the Dark.

One night my boy friend and I went to the theater. Being exceedingly dark, we can hardly distinguish others about. We were seated just a few moments when another couple entered behind us. The young man, not being able to see, threw his overcoat over the seat in front of him, which he thought was unoccupied, but which proved to be myself struggling under the coat, as the lights in the entire theater flashed on.

Imagine my embarrassment when the audience nearby laughed and jeered at me. E. G.

On the line ahead of all her neighbors

Think of having a washer that washes, blues, rinses and DRIES in the time it takes ordinary washers just to wash alone!

Can you picture to yourself what it means to be able to put through entire tubloads of clothes, and blankets, comforters, rugs, robes—even feather pillows as well, from clothes basket to clothes line, all without once putting the hands in water, without wringing, without [illegible]ing a single piece, or breaking a single button—and finishing as fresh as when you began?

It seems almost incredible, doesn't it, but that is just what you can do with the wonderful Savage Washer and Dryer and the exclusive Savage feature, "Spin-Rinse, Spin-Dry".

How "Spin-Rinse, Spin-Dry" Saves Your Clothes and Yourself

You simply load the Savage spinner-basket shown in the picture and touch the switch. In 10 to 15 minutes the contents are washed beautifully clean. At a touch of the hand the spinner is shifted to horizontal position, the clothes evenly distributed, the spray—hot as you want it—turned on, and at another touch of the switch the spinner spins out all soap, softener, etc., in a jiffy.

Then, after about two minutes of this laborless rinsing, you simply shut off the spray, and continue the spinning for another minute and the whole load is DRY FOR THE LINE. No wringing—no extra tubs needed—no putting the hands in water.

Spin-Rinsing an entire tubful without labor—all in two minutes, or less—dries in only one minute more!

SPEAKING OF COIFFURES

Your Hair, Nowadays, Is as Important as Your Costume; It Deserves Study

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The reaction in favor of long hair, bound to come some time or other, is seemingly still too remote to worry about. One hears a rumble, brought over from Paris on the last boat that the bob is being supplanted by the chignon, and one hears again from a passenger on the same boat that Antoine of Paris did hers just before she sailed and recommended that she keep her shingle awhile longer.

Gloria Swanson says she will allow hers to grow, as she is tired of short hair. How many heads that decision will influence you'll have to guess at, yourself.

Leaving the argument to time and one's personal inclination, which is about all one can do about the length of hair today, let's consider a few points about coiffures that will serve both short and long haired.

It is not necessary to stress the point, after all the experimenting of the last few seasons, that the arrangement of hair may make or mar one's appearance. No small number of women of "a certain age," as the French so politely put it, discovered the bob cheapened their looks, and wisely let the hair grow out again. Again, hundreds turned to their delight that the close bob gave them just that small, neat outline of head to complete the final detail of the slim, modern silhouette.

Giving the Coiffure Its Place.

The outcome of these experiments is that the coiffure no longer takes second place in the turning out of a smart woman. It is given quite as much study, from the angle of becomingness, as the costume.

Women are learning now that certain head and face formations will stand for a bit of exaggerated trimming, so to speak, and others will not; that there are tricks of coiffure, as there are tricks of dress, to tone down prominent features, to soften sharp lines, to get the perfect silhouette. They have learned it profits you not so much as it might to outline the form slenderly and then let the hair stick out over the ears in great bunches, thus foreshortening the figure as it is viewed a few steps off.

In other words, the coiffure is not an accessory but a complement of the figure and face. The outline is studied from head to foot and proportion is striven for.

The smartly coiffured woman does not imitate the hair arrangement of a friend, any more than she imitates her hat. If she is small boned and slim and her friend is tall and not so slim, and their features differ consistently, it would be fatal to attempt the other's hairdress. In skilled circles they do not do it.

Proportion Makes for Beauty.

The rules boiled down are simply to arrange your coiffure to suit your particular head and figure.

The head, as some ingenuous mind has figured it out, in classic proportion, is one-eighth of the height of the body. A trifle less than one-eighth is, however, accepted as an ideal shape in woman's head.

Consequently, the coiffure should be arranged to keep within this limit of height. Undoubtedly, the bob unconsciously has attained a great deal of its popularity due to the fact that it does give a better body proportion than the style that used to be more current than it is today—that is, piling the hair up on top of the head. There still are a number of women—tall as a rule—who stretch their height disproportionately by this same process.

On the other hand, if you are tall and not slim, too small a head gives an effect like unto that of the big, broad shouldered man with a too small derby.

If you are short and plump you dwarf your figure more by bunching the hair out over the ears. Dressed flat on the sides and built up slight on top, it will give the better high and narrow outline.

For the Full Face

It's a fairly safe rule with the too-full-cheeked to keep the hair entirely off the face. If the ears are shapely enough to stand full exposure the circumference of the face will be appreciably reduced.

At any rate, a partial exposure of the ear is advised, with the hair drawn back tightly, and lifted toward the back of the crown on top.

A skilled hairdresser can do amazing things with short hair to outline the scalp at the top of the head and upper back in order to get the well curved outline. He does it by clipping the under hair in uneven lengths. A woman with long hair, too, may have the hair trimmed out underneath, and the top strands left full length, and thus acquire a better scalp outline.

There are types to whom fluffy hair is ravishingly becoming. The petite blonde is the type we have in mind. Also, a girl with a thin face may lend a flattering note with a fluffy framing over the ears and outer edges of the cheeks.

Elinor Glyn says you're "no lady" unless your forehead is exposed. Be that as it may, some are prettier ladies for carrying the hair out on the forehead a bit. One with a prominent nose profits by this latter slight covering of the brow. The small featured find the exposed forehead becoming, as a rule.

Short Neck, High Coiffure.

The neck must be considered in connection with the best coiffure for you. A long, thin neck is best disguised by hair worn low behind and pulled out loosely over the ears. There are short women with no necks to speak of. The head appears to rest almost on the shoulders, and the inevitable result with acquired plumpness is a squat appearance. In such cases, the hair should be kept well up off the nape of the neck and dressed as high as possible.

A face with broad, high cheek bones can be thinned down by bringing the hair forward on the cheek bones flatly, the rest of the hair pulled up to the back of the head, but avoiding any bunching over the ears.

A long, thin face can be shortened by a bang. Earrings suspended on a long chain worn with this type of face are not the happiest selection. The hoop rings are better.

To wear the hair parted in the center and curtain-draped over the cheek bones and ears one has to be either a striking individual or a great beauty. Great, soft eyes and an oval face take to this coiffure most pleasingly. To the average face this style is extremely trying and ageing, however.

Arranging the Hair Net.

Except for the baby blue blondes fluffy hair were better kept under a net. The difficulty with fluffy hair lies in keeping a good contour and a neat appearance. Many women scorn hair nets because they never learn to put them on without drawing them so tight they get a prim, old maidish look.

A net does not have to be drawn tightly. Arrange the hair loosely first, with a few pins, then lay the net over it. With many small pins, shape it to the head until the coiffure and desired headline develop. Use a hand mirror constantly to see your head from all angles. Never pull the net tight; on the contrary, insert a hairpin and pull the hair gently up from the head.

BELIEVERS IN MARRIAGE

by Doris Blake

Take Up Their Cudgels in Behalf of the Silent, Though Happy, Majority.

ONE reads and hears so much about unhappy marriages and divorce these days, we wondered if it wouldn't be well to let the other side of the married world speak. There is another side. In fact, it outbalances in number by many, many thousands the unhappy couples of the world.

A tactless query was made of a small girl, aged 8, about her father. The child disclosed that her parents were divorced. Her father went away a long time ago. To change the subject, the adult questioner asked the little girl what she was going to be when she grew up.

"I suppose I'll get married and be unhappy like my mother," the child replied.

"O, no, you won't," the grown-up attempted to convince her, "you'll marry a wonderful Prince Charming and live happily ever afterward, just like they do in the story books."

"No," the child returned. "My mamma says that only happens in story books."

The story was related to me by a neighbor of the small girl. This neighbor has a daughter of the same age. Later her own child came to her with the query: "Is everybody unhappy when they get married?"

Marriage Needs Vocal Aid.

Inspired by the theory that what marriage needs is the spread of wholesome propaganda, I recently printed in my daily column a letter from a woman who resented the too current impression that married life is a dull life, an uninteresting life. She reviewed her full day and her 10 years of perfect contentment, at the same time suggesting she was but one of countless thousands of wives who are happy, though married.

Other correspondents took her cue to contribute to a campaign that would prove marriage THE happy state, and possible of attainment for the greater number of people.

"Are you snowed under with letters from happy wives?" asks E. A. "Probably not! We are such a contented lot and our lives so uneventful we don't think it worth writing about. But we ought to rise in our might and let the world know there are millions of us who do not have the word 'divorce' in our vocabulary.

"We, my dearly beloved and I, have been married nearly a quarter of a century, and I have never threatened to go home to mother, and he has never told me he wished he had married the other girl.

Agreement Isn't Necessary.

"We haven't always agreed, by any manner of means. We both have good, strong minds of our own. But we talk over our serious disagreements until we arrive at an amicable agreement, or agree to disagree and keep sweet.

"Yes, we have a family of three, not much more than a home financially, but it is a happy one.

"He hasn't kissed me in more than 10 years except when leaving on a trip. But he isn't the kissing kind, and so long as I know he isn't kissing other women I don't let that worry me.

"I have a double chin and wrinkles, long hair and freckles, but he treats me like a queen. As for him: his hair is thin in places. He has one rheumatic knee. He snores when he sleeps, but he's Lochinvar to me."

Gertrude L. believes that playing the game fairly is the way to get happiness out of your marriage.

"We were two foolish kids," she writes. "We married while my husband was in his junior year of the university. I held to my job in spite of sneers and slights of friends, relatives, and employers.

"Both of us are earnest and industrious, but when my husband took up the task of breadwinning, he was hampered by long periods of unavoidable idleness. I, therefore, got back in the harness again and have kept in business practically all the time we have been married.

"My husband's work makes our lives nomadic. We were married 10 years before we purchased a home and our first furniture. This constant moving about has kept us from having the social life and contacts we would have had under a more permanent type of living. We have been apart for months at a time, oftentimes.

"Until about three years ago it seemed that, struggle as we would, we could not get ahead. Always when we would get a thousand or so ahead something would come along which wiped it out. With practically steady employment for both of us for the last three years, we have been able to save at the rate of about $100 a month, and hope to increase this amount with any salary increases in the near future. Because of a physical disability, we have never had children, and the nature of our lives and finances have prevented us from adopting little ones, although we hope soon to do that now. We both love children and do what we can for those about us.

Still Happy—and Married.

"How do we get along? Splendidly! Young people come to us, asking for our secret, and complimenting us on our happiness and loyalty. We have had our misunderstandings, but we try to reason them out fairly and lovingly, without the assistance of outsiders.

"You urge the regulation typical marriage—a settled home, owned if possible, babies, and lots of hard work, as the recipe for marital happiness. I believe it lies deeper than that. It is mutual love, confidence, unswerving loyalty, and a determination to play the game of life fairly together."

Middle aged matrimony to the excitement chasers may seem monotonous, but to those tunefully wedded 'tis a season of deep content. This is Mrs. B.'s theory.

"I have to laugh when I look around at some of my old acquaintances," she writes, "and see their struggle to ape the ways of youthful couples. It seems to me herein lies so much of married discord. Married at 20 and 22, we had our struggles, for we married on practically nothing a year and we had babies, four of them, in rapid succession. Now, at 43, if I cannot take life comfortably, and if my darling wouldn't be permitted to take it the same way, I'd say we had made a failure of our marriage. This we have not.

"In the last ten years I can truthfully say we have never had a quarrel. If anything, I have a more devoted suitor than the impetuous young man who came ardently wooing some twenty-three years ago. I don't expect him to act the way he did then, and apparently he doesn't expect me to be as fresh looking as I was then, or he'd probably have commented on my graying locks and faded color. Instead, he tells me I'm better looking than my 18 year old girl, who, if you will excuse a mother's ravings, is a beauty.

Mutual Tolerance.

"When people ask us how we get along so well my husband jokingly confides he lets me have my own way, but never fails to add: 'And she lets me have mine.' The truth is that we long since thrashed that out, not without tears on my part, I'll admit, and decided there wasn't anything either of us wanted more than that there be harmony in our household.

"So, I say, if we seem to some folk like a terribly settled down old pair, it is because there is little unrest in our hearts. There is none in mine, I know, and if there were in my sweetheart's I don't suppose he would want to spend all his evenings with me, or insist upon me taking trips with him a couple of times a year.

"Do I believe in marriage? Well, my daughter told me last night she and the young Dartmouth boy she has known all her life will marry immediately he is through school. I told her if the boy was only half as good as her father she'd get more happiness out of life than even I, her mother, could rightfully ask for her."

Love Problems and the Answers

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Try Some Tact.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a boy friend who lately has been hanging out with cheap girls that I am embarrassed when my friends tell me about it. What shall I do?

"ANXIOUS."

Try to point out to him the folly of associating with girls of that type, Anxious. Explain that if he continues seeing them, he'll be classed with them.

Too Young to Know.

"Dear Miss Blake: I care for a boy who says he loves me but does not show it. Please advise me, as I want him to love me as he says he does.

"PUNCH."

A boy doesn't mean everything he says, Punch. He thinks he is in love one day, and the next day finds his interests centered in another. The same holds true of girls, too.

Right to Know.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 25 and have been going with a young man for nearly three years. He has told me he loved me, yet he has never asked me to marry him and I feel I ought to know whether he intends to. Please advise. PUZZLED."

It is within reason for you or your parents to make him declare himself one way or the other. You are entitled to know.

It Doesn't Matter.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl several years younger than I. My boy friends tease me because of the difference in ages. I am fond of her. Please advise. AL F."

Pay no attention to what the boys say. You know whom you like, and when you find a girl who appeals to you as this one does, stick to her.

Not Quite Sure.

"Dear Miss Blake: I go with a boy who I am sure loves me, but I'm not always sure I love him. His ideas are young compared to mine. I'm afraid to break off with him for fear I'll be sorry. Please advise.

"UNCERTAIN."

Tell him just how you feel, explaining you wish to associate with others until you are able to decide about him definitely.

In Love with Sisters.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love two girls [sisters]. I can't afford to take both out at one time. If I take one I would hurt the other's feelings. What would you do? PUZZLED."

If they're not satisfied to go singly, you'd better confine your attentions to one member of a family. It's simpler, Puzzled.

Home-Made, but Ends Coughs In a Hurry

A family supply of dependable cough medicine. Easily made and saves about $2

If you have a severe cough or chest cold, soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up at night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough instantly. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle, and soothes and heals the irritated membranes of the throat and bronchial tubes with such ease and promptness that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PINEX for Coughs

LOVE LETTERS

IN SPIRIT.

DEAR ONE: As I sit by the fireside tonight my thoughts seem only of you. I cannot put you out of my mind, and I would not if I could, for my love for you and yours for me—yes, I believe you love me as tenderly and as passionately as I do you—has made all life, with its heartaches and disappointments, its hardships and misunderstandings, seem infinitely worth while. There must be a purpose in it all, and love like ours glorifies that purpose and makes sacred and holy every common thing.

Powers which seemed to lie dormant within me have reached heights of which I never dreamed. There is a new joy in my life and a strange chord of tenderness in my heart which I can't describe. How richly doth love endow us!

I'm so proud of you, my dear, of your success and the good you are doing. Just to get sight of you, as I sometimes do on the busy street, thrills me and makes my heart beat faster. Yes, I love you truly, dearest; but whether we shall reap the full fruition of our love, only the future can tell, for love is not at the command of human will; it obeys a higher power than ours. But, remember, love is never wasted or lost, for the law of compensation reaches its highest fulfillment in the heart.

Our love does seem hopeless, so if we are denied the joy of walking side by side on life's pathway, we shall go hopefully and bravely together in spirit, hand in hand in our dreams, for love is eternal.

No longing of my life, no emotion of my heart has ever been so deep, so poignant as this. I love you; I want you. I long for your arms, for your kiss on my hair, for your lips on mine.

I suffer anguish at the thought that we must separate, but it seems right and best, and to do right comes before happiness, you know. Though the path of honor and truth be hard sometimes, it will surely lead us to life's greatest realization, its truest joys and sweetest dreams.

Perhaps sometime we shall find happiness together, if God wills. If not, who can say we shall not belong to each other in the life beyond, for "love is stronger than death."

Loving you forever. I pray God bless you and keep you always. Your

MEN'S FASHIONS

SAYING "MERRY CHRISTMAS" WITH SURPRISE GIFTS.

This department will be glad to answer all questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The annual December problem, what to give him for Christmas, is perhaps causing some of my readers sleepless nights. Well, now, don't give up. There's many an idea between the Christmas cigars that he won't like and nothing at all. Last week I suggested various and sundry articles of wearing apparel which a man, unless he be one of those who will not accept clothing as a legitimate gift, will find welcome offerings.

Today I have an elaboration of this idea to suggest. Most men have never yet beyond the childish love of surprise boxes. Something which is done up in wrappings, and when opened discloses a treasure chest of something, will always appeal to their imagination. A surprise box of sartorial equipment is a gift for a man that is sure to make a hit.

The size of the box, and the number of things which such a box contains, will depend upon the extent of your Christmas spirit and just how far you are willing to let it take you. What I want to do is to suggest some of the various combinations of articles which can be put together into a holiday box to make up a set. The number of articles is flexible. One thing less or more in the box will not break up its form.

There are four different types of combination gift boxes from which to ity, a pair of white kid gloves, a set of studs and links, and a black silk cigaret case. Any one of these articles may be left out without spoiling the idea.

Sport boxes may be of different kinds. The articles of which a sport gift box is made up may have golf as its foundation, provided the recipient is a golfer, or it may concern more rugged and cold weather sports, such as skating or tobogganing, in which case heavier garments would be chosen. For a sport box to fit into a golfer's wardrobe or, for that matter, to fit into the wardrobe of any one who wears country club clothes, one can include a pair of golf hose, a lightweight sweater in harmony with or to match the hose, a foulard tie or two, or a couple of striped colorful ties and a sport shirt. Some golf balls, in case he is a golfer, might also be thrown in.

A winter sport box ought to include a heavy sweater, with muffler, gloves, and hose or socks to match, one of those woolen sets that look as though they would be good company at the north pole. Or one might select one of the wind breakers, or lumberjack shirts, with a muffler and a pair of warm leather gloves, and a pair of gay warm socks.

A bedroom set includes a dressing gown or bath robe of some kind, with slippers suitably matched, and a pair of pajamas. If the bath robe selected is one of the rough looking terry cloth models one would not select smooth leather slippers to go with it, but something made up of terry cloth, or a straw and terry combination. With a dressing gown of silk or woolen or flannel, leather or felt house slippers in a color to match or harmonize are a good selection. The pajamas should be something a bit dressy, with a collar—something that a man doesn't like to spend on himself for but doesn't mind owning. If you wanted to add still more to a box of this kind, and if your man is a pipe smoker, you might stick in a pipe, something for him to use during the more negligee moments, when he wears the new dressing gown and lounging pajamas.

Of course, if none of these boxes seems to include enough to show the man in question how much Merry Christmas you wish him you can always throw in a suit or two and a fur coat if you can find a Christmas box big enough.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

C. L. R.: A GIRL FIVE FEET eleven, twenty-one years old, can carry 150 pounds very well. Your weight is just in accordance with the table of standard weights and measures for your age. I shouldn't attempt to reduce, if I were you. You are enjoying good health now, and that is the main thing. Of course, you may take care not to add any more weight.

RITA: BECAUSE OF YOUR youth I do not approve of a strenuous diet for you, but I have a set of exercises called "My Youth Preservera," which would be helpful to you. You should eliminate candy from your diet, and eat sparingly of bread and potatoes. Eat plenty of fruits and fresh vegetables. Do not eat between meals. Send stamped addressed envelope for the exercises.

H. C. B.: WEARING SHOES WITH such high heels is undoubtedly responsible for your trouble. High heels may be worn for dress occasions, but for every day wear, where one is on her feet as much as you are, the oxford with heels about an inch and a half in height would be much better for your feet, and more appropriate.

MISS H.: ENLARGEMENT OF the thyroid gland, or goiter, is now being treated successfully with X-ray. You should consult a physician about it and abide by his decision. If it is of long standing, treatment is necessary at once; if not, as you are still young, the enlargement may disappear.

Would you play outdoors?—polo, golf and tennis in municipal parks; riding along sun-dappled bridle paths; motoring over white roads flung across hills, or stretching down to the sea; hunting or fishing—every mood can be satisfied in this magic land of wide spaces and sunny skies!

It's a land for play! A land for work! A land for restful living! Try it!

THE MORRISON HOTEL

Now Operating Its New 46-Story Section

FLOOR after floor of the Morrison Hotel's new section is being put into operation, and before long the entire 46-story structure will be in service. It gives tangible evidence of the consistency with which the Morrison Hotel maintains its policy of economy, under which rooms are rented for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel. This saving is due to revenues from store subleases. Every room in the hotel has bath, running ice-water, and Servidor, in which a grille gives added security.

The Morrison at present contains 1,054 outside rooms, each with bath; these will eventually be increased to 3,400—the world's largest hotel.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, the internationally famous "dance-and-dine" rendezvous. The artists engaged for the week beginning Monday, December 7, will be as follows:

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

COSTUMES OF FABRIC AND FUR

By Betty Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—This is the season of the year when the whys and wherefores of the difference between Parisian and American chic are most prominently under consideration. Summer is what the Paris couturiers call the foreign season, when Paris is really a sort of suburb of New York and points westward, and you can't find a smart Parisienne with an ultra modern equivalent of Diogenes' famous equipment.

But now the tourists are going home, the Parisiennes are coming home, and the American smart set is booking passage for Europe and filling fashionable European hotels. Everybody of importance in the fashionable world can be seen at Longchamps on a day when the elusive sun shines or some favorite runs, and these personages are thick along the Avenue des Champs Elysees.

Last Sunday they were all out at the Arena Lutece to see an anemic version of the Spanish bull fight, and the fashion research worker was pretty busy tabulating statistics of differences between the new and the old world chic. He might easily have compiled some prodigious figures on the corner that foreigners have on such opulent commodities of clothes as velvets and expensive furs, for there was nary a yard or band of such materials and pelts in the French section.

Ermine, sable, chinchilla, and mink are conspicuously absent from the Parisienne's day time attire. It is simply her interpretation of the mode, backed by her idea of good taste and sense. She leaves such elegance to the foreigner during the weak and watery daylight hours of a Paris November. You can see velvet and exquisite fur in quantity worn by the Parisienne after lighting up time, but so long as the time is even nominally daylight, she goes about in some good substantial woolen fabric well reinforced with furs that in America we consider as lesser breeds without the law. This applies, of course, to the out-of-doors, and Paris is much occupied during October with outdoor events.

Now that French fabric makers feminized the English mannish mixtures the Parisienne will wear them. In their virginal state she refused to have any traffic with them. They were too harsh and unadaptable for her, and she looked with horror on women from across the channel and the Atlantic in their tweed suits and sport coats. However, after Rodier and Meyer chastened and softened the tweed and homespun, and glorified their herringbone and other patterns, the Parisienne decided they were not impossible after all, particularly when the Paris couturiers combined them with furs that belonged to their sturdy textures.

Our first model, in evidence at the Arena Lutece, is an example of what the Parisienne favors in this direction. Anna (Madeleine and Madeleine) has used a veronese green mixed woolen, with fine white hairs scattered over it, to make this ensemble, and she has combined it with a fur that only the Parisiennes will wear, and wear with grace and cachet. They call it "mouton," and it seems to me to come from some species of the mountain goat, although Anna has dyed it a beautiful green, and made the most of its fluffy texture. A small choker collar of this fur sets off the wide band that circles the flaring skirt of the rather military looking coat. A line of green bone buttons fastens the coat trimly to the throat, and bands of lighter green stitching are used to create the effect of a girdle, and to set off the flaring cuffs from the straight sleeve. There is a simple wholesomeness about this truly feminine ensemble that Parisienizes it thoroughly.

Reading from left to right: [1] Unclipped sheep's wool is a fashionable trimming for the ensemble of wool. [2] The coat dress has a circular skirt and an uneven collar of petit gris. [3] A Callot ensemble of violet and green cheviot is embroidered in Persian colors. [4] This Drecoll coat has insets of wool and gold embroidery. [5] A fur coat of Hudson seal, with an unusual collar and band trimming.

This reminds me of a detail to which I called your attention a short time ago, and that is the importance of the circular movement expressed in some other way than by godets. You will notice that our first model shows a circular, ungodetted skirt on its coat; and, if you cast your eye in the direction of the second model, you will observe the same phenomena in a coat dress from Martial & Armand, also observed at the Arena Lutece. The godet has arrived on the Boulevard Clichy, in Montmartre, and by natural deduction that means it is waning on the Avenue des Champs Elysees and the Avenue de bois du Boulogne. Madame Vallet, the inventive genius of Martial & Armand, has made our second model of violine capria, a rough wooler fabric from Meyer, trimming it with an irregular collar of petit gris, a collar that ends in an irrelevant cloth rever on one side and in a cloth bow on the other. Tight sleeves, quite loose above the elbow, end in cuffs that have no fur, only a little triangular patch of darker violet velvet. There are two tiny inset pockets for a bit of handkerchief and a gilet of the material, trimmed with triangular applique of velvet.

The center sketch is stamped all over, for the discerning eye, with the peculiar genius of Callot Soeurs. It is an ensemble of practical wool with the particular, exquisite touches that are invariably found in a model from this house. There is a classic cape that recalls the era of Pericles—a cape of violet wool, lined with a dull reseda green woolen and trimmed with a piquanty modern collar of shaded monkey fur. Under this appears the dress, which has a long pointed bodice of reseda green and a modern side flaring skirt of violet, banded in the green.

The embroidery on the bodice is particularly Callot, a Persian design in the colors of a cloisenne vase. The sleeves beneath are close fitted, and adorned with a bit of this rare embroidery at the wrist.

The fourth sketch, a smart coat seen at the Arena Lutece on Sunday, is a Drecoll coat of beige mixed woolen, cut with a flare from hips to hem at sides and back, and trimmed with a reddish brown, glistening fur that the French couturiers call "sea dog." This fur appears on the square collar, the wide cuffs, and on the three section band that circles the bottom of the coat, cut away at the sides of the front to give full prominence to the pie-shaped sections of embroidery that form the typical Drecoll detail of this interesting wrap. This embroidery is done in several tones of brown, beige and gold in woolen threads held down by metal.

Our final model is the kind of fur coat that the Parisienne uses in the daytime. It is made from loutre de hudson (Hudson seal), a fur that has come back to importance in Paris styles for the first time in four years. The Reine d'Angleterre, who created this model, has set off the hudson with bands of parmi, what the French call baby fox, and a fur that comes from goodness knows what animal.

The chic of this model is placed almost altogether in the arrangement of the fur bands, particularly in the collar side and hem band, that is cut all-in-one, from its choker collar to its ten inch hem band. This, and the unusual sleeves of a new kind of bishop, seldom seen in a fur wrap, gives to the model a verve that is undeniable. A lining of blonde kasha is a note that is important in fur coat fashions in Paris, particularly in coats for general daytime wear.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington, with current market materials, and are indorsed by her.

FATS—SEASONINGS.

ONE of two women living in a country place says chicken fat is "lovely" for shortening cake and gingerbread. The other says she would not eat a cake made with it. These women are cousins, but while the whole principle of living in the first one's family has been thrift, including the nice utilization of all food products, many of these food products get thrown away in the other family, where extravagance prevails.

Perhaps there is no food product that requires these "nice," or better than ordinary, treatments to make it acceptable food so much as does fat. Fat can seem so dirty, so greasy, so dreadfully unpalatable if it is not rightly treated, while if we were comparing foods with textiles for concentrated value, fats would get compared with the silks and velvets, with the provision that fats are more essential far than the silks and velvets to life, but when correctly used rank exactly with them in enhancing our edible supplies.

Fats as Relishes.

It might sound startling to aver that one of the great services rendered by fats in the diet is as a relish, and to make food relishable. This would seem to rank them with such items as pickles; but that is not the idea at all. Pickles to fat are as zero to 100 degrees in the diet. Butter is the only fat used directly as a relish, and the French, the greatest experts of the world in all eating matters in general, but not always in particular, group it with the relishes on the menu, and they run the number of relishes up as no other people do.

As to fats making food relishable or palatable—this is something that cannot be denied. They are indispensable in cookery on that account. The great part fats play in making foods palatable and a meal satisfying is best shown when fats are not obtainable. Hard conditions of life seem to increase a man's taste for fats, no matter what the cooking, or even lack of cooking, and there can be no really high grade cookery without the generous use of fats. An exaggerated case of what hard conditions will do to a man's disposition towards fat is seen when men in the arctic zones will eat raw pork and find it tastes as sweet as sugar.

Perhaps men working out of doors have in general liked pork as a steady diet far better than beef, because of the amount of fat there is in pork. Fats produce a satisfying effect in the diet, first, because they make foods more palatable, from bread with butter to salad green with oil or baked beans with pork, and, second, because they "stand by." They are the long bridge. Hunger plies a short and emergency bridge, if necessary. The starches a longer bridge. But if we ate no fat hunger would annoy us at shorter intervals than it usually does and we would have to eat oftener. We can do continuous work more safely because of the steady, slowly delivered nutriment the fats supply. We are undoubtedly warmer in winter, when the business of keeping warm is a definite business to attend to, if we eat generously of fats.

Seasoning Beefsteak With Fat.

While we egg and crumb some meats, we cannot treat a piece of beefsteak in that fashion to protect it from the fire, and partly to season it. We can, however, protect it with a layer of fat and season it beautifully so. The method of doing this is called marinading the steak.

Suppose we have just one pound of round steak containing the slice of marrow bone. Prepare a marinade by rubbing a platter with the cut end of a clove of garlic, add a teaspoonful or a little more of salt, a bit of pepper and any other dry seasonings to taste, and then a tablespoon of good oil and half a tablespoonful of vinegar. With a few strokes beat these until creamy and well blended and put the steak into them—it having received due attention in the way of trimming, etc.—and turn the steak over once or twice or allow it to rest in the marinade. Thus prepared it will not be necessary to grease the grill. Onion juice can be added to the marinade, and a bit of cayenne pepper or even a bit of curry powder.

Preparing a Broiling Oven.

Take out the broiling pan and grill. Light the fire. Leave the door open until the cold and stagnant air is driven out, or for about five minutes, as in the case of the baking oven. Then close the door and heat oven hot as hot. Arrange the steak on the grill in broiling pan, push into oven, and let cook about six minutes, take out and turn and cook six minutes longer. Unless a thick steak is to be cooked and fairly well done this will be time enough for the cooking.

In the case of a thick steak, treat in the same way but finally decrease the fire and let it finish slowly as oven roasted meat is finished, cooking about twenty minutes. An oven well prepared hastens and improves the cooking of any broiled meat or fish.

Other Sorts of Marinading.

A basting liquid is a sort of marinade, a hot one. Larding a roast and then roasting it does about the same thing in the way of seasoning it that a marinade does. Nowadays meat patties are "baconized" because the meat needs a fat seasoning, that is, they have a piece of bacon around them and require a particularly nice sort of cooking in order that its seasoning effect get a good opportunity. In the case of fish, say a slice of salmon to be broiled, a marinade of oil and seasoning above is better than bacon, although salt pork fat is an excellent seasoning for fish.

Marrow Fat.

Some one has told how Sarah Bernhardt in serving a steak urged one of her guests to have the delicate marrow. But marrow is not so delicate unless it is seasoned, and in marinading the steak it gets the seasoning it needs, and makes an edible bit of eating that nice eaters will not "pass up." It is worth a pat of butter as food, and those who continually throw away a pat of fine, sweet, and palatable butter rank as extravagant.

Since marrow requires only so much cooking as will cook the blood in it, so with a rare or medium steak it is a finer bit than when the steak is cooked until well done. Poached marrow or thin slices of marrow cooked in salted water at the boiling point, is one of the most elegant of garnishes for a fine vegetable like hearts of celery cooked in a meat stock and seasonings, the stock being induced to a glaze in the cooking. It is also served with lemon juice and may be eaten on toast.

Marrow, whether cooked in this or other ways, may seem to be an unimportant food but it is not, and just as we do not serve huge lumps of butter per person neither need the marrow requirement or service be a large one to be important. Good marrow fat is too often one of the wasted products of the cake of fat taken off the soup stock.

Savory Fats.

Savory fats are made of such products as lard or suet, or even tallow tried out with seasonings such as onions, carrots, celery, apples, ginger etc. When we want to make a sauce or heat up some meat or a hash, these save time and when they are all that could be desired they are great and satisfactory seasonings. We can get the best ideas about these by studying German cooking ways with fats, for the Germans utilize goose fat as does no other nation, and give recipes for making savory fat of the cuisine.

In one of her cooking lessons the great Hedwig Heyl says in reference to making fats savory, "Leaf lard tastes best; it is, therefore, often eaten on bread. When it is rendered an apple, onion, marjoram, or mugwort is put in for seasoning. American lard is pressed, but not completely cooked fat; therefore, it must be cooked with an onion, apple, or bread crust, so that any liquid contained in it may evaporate. The original low cost is thereby increased."

Rendering Lard.

The best way to render lard is to pull the fat masses out of the membranes and put them in a double boiler with the water just boiling underneath until the whole or all but a little is turned to an oil. Strain then, and in order to get the cracklings for a number of nice uses—they make good sandwich fillings—stir them in a frying pan until they are lightly browned and will be crisp when drained of all fat. It was the custom of cooks of an older day than ours to add an apple or two when rendering large amounts of fat, to subdue the odor of the hot fat.

Savory Fat I.

Pork fat, if cold enough or even almost frozen, and suet may be chopped. Chopping is directed by the German method, but either of the fats are good so prepared. One pound unrendered fat chopped fine, one slice of onion about one-half inch thick and two inches in diameter, one teaspoon of broken bay leaves, one teaspoon salt, and about one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Render in a double boiler and strain.

Savory Fat II.

One pound unrendered fat chopped fine, two teaspoons thyme, one slice of onion about one-half inch thick and two inches in diameter, one teaspoon salt, and about one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Render in a double boiler and strain.

Savory Fat III.

One pound of unrendered fat chopped fine, one teaspoon of thyme, one teaspoon of marjoram, one-half teaspoon of rubbed sage, one teaspoon of salt, and about one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Render in a double boiler and strain through a fine cloth.

Making a Rendered Fat Savory.

Melt the fat, add seasoning like those in above recipes—same proportions per pound—heat the mixture gently for an hour or more, and strain or prepare one such thus: Melt one pound rendered fat, add one sour apple, one onion, and one teaspoon of ground thyme, or other sweet herb tied in a cloth. Cook together in the oven or on the back of the stove until the apple and onion have gently browned. Strain through fine cloth.

Bacon Seasoned.

A square of bacon or a piece of brisket bacon when beautifully cleaned and boiled with seasonings or pot roasted with seasonings or boiled and finished by baking as a ham is, after it is boiled and skinned, makes a fine sandwich filling, and no bit of the seasoned fat that it loses in the cooking needs be wasted. So this story of using fats for seasonings is as broad as it is long; that is, the seasoning of fats, whether to make them savory or to make the meat of which they are a part delicious, is highly worth while. It is the method we use all another way in making salad dressings—we season a fat.

Boiled Bacon.

Wipe the bacon first before wetting it, and cut out any ink stamps. Wash and, if necessary, scrape well and trim off any surfaces that have surely been exposed in handling and curing. Rinse off finally with boiling water, then pour boiling water over and allow to stand three hours, if it needs to be freshened. Frying out a slice of it will usually determine this and the bacon of today is not as salty as it generally was a time back. After it has soaked scrape again if it is necessary so that it may be as clean as a rose.

Put into kettle, cover with cold water, and add a cut up onion and carrot. Cover kettle and bring to a boil slowly and simmer for three hours, never allowing the water to cease moving with the heat a little but never boiling hard. After two hours add several more onions, a small yellow turnip cut in slices, several small carrots, and perhaps some green peppers. A little pod of dried pepper may be added at the start. The other vegetables are for a hash, but they season the bacon as well while they utilize the pot liquor.

When the bacon is tender, serve it h... from the pot or skin it, rub in sugar, stick in cloves, and bake it for a half hour in an over not hot enough to leech out all its fat. Brown sugar polished off in the oven will give the piece of bacon a superior brown shine. Nicely served with garnishing vegetables, this makes a fine dish. Use slices of it cold for sandwiches—no butter required.

Bacon Vegetable Hash.

Chop the mixture of vegetables boiled with the bacon. Put a tablespoon of the fat from the top of the pot liquor in the pan, lightly brown an onion in it, add the vegetables and a little of the pot liquor, stir well, and to have two brown crusts on the hash finish it in the oven or let it cook on top of the stove until it can be doubled over like an omelet. A tomato sauce or a sauce of nothing but one onion, one green pepper, and one tomato cooked together can be served with this.

UNUSUAL LIGHTING FIXTURES.

LIGHTING fixtures and their arrangements must be studied quite as seriously in their effects as any other feature in the furnishing of the modern home. In reality, they hold more importance than curtains, draperies, rugs, or other accessories, for they hold the power to change the entire appearance of a room. Soft lines and folds in the curtains and draperies, deep, pleasing color tones in rugs and furniture may be brought out to their greatest advantage by means of lighting effects.

France has ever been a leader in lighting because her decorators realise the weight of this item. Even the sometimes outré designs of their "modernists" are, on the whole, good. Almost invariably they are interesting and redolent of characteristics readily adaptable to less extravagant forms. At a recent French exhibit many interesting fixtures were shown. They ranged from mere parchment shades, always pleasing in their simplicity, to the most elaborate creations of brilliant colorings and concealed lights.

Conspicuously good are the models of the glass masters. A lovely piece, lighting a reception hall, consists of a tall, opaque vase which conceals intensely bright lights. These shine up through delicately graceful sprays of bright colored glass flowers, making fairy rainbows reflect on all sides from the gilded walls.

In a new art dining room the curtains and carpet are in splashes of flame color and blue. There is a charming frieze all around the room, in golden tones and plain blue. Above the round dining table hangs a canopy fixture of icicle design, as shown in Fig. 1. It is extraordinarily effective in crystal and gray glass, toning down to a deep, cold blue. This effect of coldness, of course, is relieved by the flame of the curtains and carpet.

An alcove at one end of a living room gives an opportunity for a decorative effect not afforded by the conventional, shaped room. In the recess is placed a gilded idol on a low table, silhouetted against a magnificent piece of brocade. At each side of the alcove opening is a tall, hollow brass stand, lighted from inside. Over the tops of these stands square pieces of batiked silk in bright, kaleidoscopic colors are draped. Clear pieces of glass, shaped into the top openings of the brass stands, serve as incense burners. The effect of the rising smoke, with the gay colors of the batiked pieces thrown through it by means of the lights below, is most mysterious, especially when there is only one dim lamp lighted at the other end of the room.

Against a long mirror, in another living room, is a wrought iron console table with a Malachite marble top. A decorative table lamp, all of glass, illustrated in Fig. II., is placed in the center of the table. The lamp is of heavy white glass, finely ridged to give an uneven texture when lighted from inside. The light inside this vaselike base not only gives a soft illumination but throws glistening rays upon the crescent embellishment of clear glass. A design of birds and blossoms is etched on the glass.

Wonderfully effective is a ball shaped center light in a dining room, made of three sections, joined by gold rings and hung from the ceiling by means of a single gold chain. The ball is of heavy, light amber glass, blown in a deep mold and etched where it is designed in fine detail. The beauty of this piece, when lighted is beyond the powers of description. It is supplemented by side lights of half spheres of amber glass, decorated with the same design and applied flat against the side wall, completely covering the light bulb.

In some instances instead of having the side lights completely covered by half spheres, they are shaded by quarter sections of spheres, laid over the bulbs so as to throw the light up or down. Always the manner in which the glass is tinted, designed, molded or blown, makes for its beauty. One particularly lovely set of these quarter sphere sidelights is used in a bedroom. The walls are a light pistachio green, flecked with gold. Quarter sphere shades of jade pink glass, of a velvety translucence, cast a delicate, pinkish light over the whole room.

Another effective side light treatment is that shown in Fig. III. Each side light about the room may have hanging in front of it a simple square or oblong glass, suspended from projecting racks by means of cords and tassels. These pieces of glass give just the right effect in softening the glow of lights. They are sometimes tinted, opalescent or etched—always beautiful. A certain "modern decorateur," in planning a living room, has used this type of side lights. There is no molding around the room. Pictures are hung from projecting racks, made to the exact measurements of each picture, and matching those which hold the side light glasses.

Some of the bedrooms have shades made of silk. Not always are they content with a single silken shade. One which is unusually striking is made of double skirted pieces, like a dress with overskirt. It is shown in Fig. IV. The inner shade is of turquoise blue georgette, the outer one of orchid color. Being of such transparent material, the light within transmits a glow of color from the inner to the outer shade so that the tones are happily blended. Each "skirt" is picoted around the lower edge and finished with crystal beads which catch the light in dewy sparkles. The shade is attached close to the ceiling, in the center of the room. Two others, made to match, are suspended, one over the dressing table, the other above the head of the bed.

The walls in another bedroom of modernistic style are hung with shining silver cloth. There is a convexly curved baseboard all around the room, set out about two inches from the wall. Inside of this electric bulbs placed at regular intervals make an exciting play of light on the folds of the silver cloth. The chairs and great bed are low, as is the combination dresser-dressing table-bureau. Every thing is squat. The furniture covering is a chaos of color.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

MAKING OTHERS HAPPY.

HERE is an idea for boys and girls—sent in by an eleven year old girl last week:

"Dear Miss Brown: I am eleven years old and going to school. I have new winter clothes and my old ones are still good, but I got too big for them. I have a friend and she has clothes to give. We thought if we knew some girl about our age, we could give her the clothes, and take care of her that way for the winter. Next spring we could help, too—and I think there are others in our class who would join in. We think it would be a lot better to have the clothes doing good than just hanging in the closet, where nobody can wear them.

"ANN G."

Now, girls and boys, don't you think that's a splendid hint for all of us? Most of you have clothes you don't wear. Maybe they're too small, like Ann's clothes. Maybe they needed repairs, and it was easier to get new clothes. And all the while there are thousands of boys and girls who have no winter clothes. Many of them wear two or three shirts to school, because their parents can't buy them overcoats. A lot of them have to walk through the wet and the snow with holes in their shoes. And while they're doing this, we have clothes we're not wearing. Wouldn't it be better to have these clothes doing some good, helping some poor boy or girl to be comfortable this winter?

And it's not just suits and dresses that are needed. Any stockings you can give would be a big help—and shoes, too. These wear out quickly, I know, so there aren't many of us with outgrown pairs. But many of us have worn shoes that could be made all right with a new half sole—and the expense is little, when you think of the good that can be done. And, best of all, it will be easy to take care of some poor girl or boy complete if you do what Ann suggests—get together with one or two of your friends, with each one giving something, until you have a complete outfit.

Won't you be happier all winter if, when you're skating or playing and having a good time, you can tell yourselves that while you're happy, you've made some less fortunate girl or boy happy, too? You can do it so easily—so why not let me know you and your friends will help?

Sick Child Needs Help.

"Has some one clothing to fit a 12 year old boy, which is no longer needed? My little brother has been in the hospital for some time, but is coming home soon. He has no warm clothing, and we cannot afford to spend anything on that now. My father is unable to work and my brother and sister, 16 and 18, are trying to support the family. We will appreciate your help, Miss Brown.

L. K."

Some one surely has clothing to give to keep this child, who is just returning from the hospital, warm. His need of it just now is great.

Coats Are Needed.

"I have made ends meet with the rent and groceries, but it seems utterly impossible for me to save anything out of my slim income to spend on clothes. I have girls 9, 8, 6, 5, and 3½, all in need of warm clothing. Can some of your readers help me? I will be so grateful to you and to them.

"MRS. A. L. B."

These little girls are wearing sweaters now, but it is getting colder and colder. Can you help them by passing on a discarded coat, or dress, or some warm underwear?

For a Golf Lover.

"I have some golf sticks to give to some one who would like to have them.

"MRS. J. S."

This offer must be called for. Are you a lover of the game and interested in this gift?

Gives Trunk and Pianola.

"I have a trunk to give to some one who needs it. I also have a pianola to give. A pianola must be pulled up to a piano, you know, so it will only be useful to some family already having a piano. There are records to go with it.

J. B."

These interesting gifts must be called for. Will you write in as soon as possible if you would like to have it for your own?

Wringer to Give.

"I have a wringer to give to some one who is in need of it. It is in perfect condition, and I am sure will be a help to some woman who has none.

"MRS. W. P. B."

You must make written application for this article if you wish to have it.

For a Medical Student.

"I have a medical dictionary, 1916 edition, which I would like to pass on to some student.

M. L. M."

Books are expensive and the expenses of students are many, so we know this offer will meet with sincere appreciation.

For a Shut-In.

"I have fancy work materials to give to some shut-in friend of yours. It includes cotton, yarns, and worsted materials, and I am sure some one will be able to get realenjoyment from its use.

F. B."

Let us know if you would like to use this material in the manufacture of Christmas gifts.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

American Books in England

By H. L. Mencken.

A CHANCE remark in this place a few months ago to the effect that the American novel, in late years, has gone far ahead of the current English novel in competence and interest, caused the loud alarum to be sounded in the Motherland, and ever since then I have been undergoing a process of waspish chiding in its great organs of literary opinion. One English novelist, Hugh Walpole, was so moved that he composed a polemic against me for purely medical consumption, and it has been printed lately in the Bookman. Another gladiator, Milton Waldman of the London Mercury, had at me in a syndicated newspaper article. And there have been others.

Nevertheless, I stick to my doctrine, and even venture to elaborate it. The English novel is down with diabetes, and there seems cure for it is quickly found it will soon be in a state of collapse. All the elder English novelists whose works dignified the Edwardian era are either dead or far gone in senility: Hardy, Moore, Kipling, James. All the middle aged novelists have obviously lost their grip: Wells, Bennett, Galsworthy. And all the younger boys and girls seem to be simply marking time. In two years past I have read but two new English novels of any merit whatever: "Passage to India," by E. M. Forster, and "God's Stepchildren," by Mrs. Sarah Millin. Is it only a coincidence that both deals with the English scene—and that one of them, and the better one, is the work of a woman living in faraway South Africa?

I offer Wells' "Christina Alberta's Father" and Walpole's "Portrait of a Man with Red Hair" to any one who doubts that the English novel is sick. Here are two books by men in position in England is of the highest. Wells is just over 60 and Walpole is in the early 40s. Both should be delivering their best work. And yet each comes out with a story so feeble and so dull that, if a beginner had written it, he would scarcely find a publisher, even in England.

The remarkable thing is that such dreadful rubbish is received in all solemnity by American critics and even gravely praised. Old habits, alas, die hard! There is still a great deal of abject colonialism among us, and it is nowhere more in evidence than in the field of literature. Where, indeed, does provincialism flourish more humorlessly than in the American Academy of Arts and Letters? Every ancient in that home for literary incurables has his eye on an Oxford D. C. L. that the younger literati have their eyes on I don't know, whatever it is it makes them sweat affably every time they see the word honor spelled h-o-n-o-u-r.

The result is that English books are always reviewed with great friendliness in the United States, and usually get prices that are far beyond their deserts. When, by any chance, they actually show sound merit—which is not infrequently, save in the field of the novel—they are lauded as masterpieces and their authors are hailed as immortals. I refer to the case of Lytton Strachey's "Queen Victoria," still well remembered. The book was unquestionably amusing, but was it really revolutionary? Was the author a genuine pathfinder? Only if the fact be conveniently forgotten that Brander Matthews and Gamaliel Bradford had been doing precisely the same thing for 15 years—and doing it extremely well.

But "Queen Victoria" at least had some merit—in fact, a lot of merit. Most of the English books that are so ecstatically greased and pomaded have little or none. There is not only praise for the third rate work of such men as Wells and Walpole, who have done good things in the past; there is also a fantastic friendliness for such ninth raters as Michael Arlen and A. S. M. Hutchinson, Arthur Machen and W. B. Maxwell, whose best is wholly worthless. If such incompetents were Americans the fact would be stated plainly. But, being Englishmen, they are anointed with goose grease and tickled with peacock feathers.

There is absolutely nothing of the sort in the other direction. The English reviewers are not only not amiable to American books, they are excessively savage with them. Not a few of them, indeed, appear to specialize in flogging the unmanly Yankee. If they can find nothing else to say against an American book they protest bitterly against its American locutions and American spelling, as if the English standard in such things were the only conceivably correct one. And if it is a novel, and they tire of deriding its style, they spit on their hands for a fresh start and deride its people.

In this matter I can speak with good grace, for my own books have been received with unusual politeness in England—possibly because, being somewhat critical of the republic and its ideals, they offer good ammunition for anti-American tirades. Seven of them have been republished there and the eighth is announced; none has been slated beyond its merits. But certainly not many other American authors have been so fortunate. The majority, when they enter the Motherland, have to pull up their collars and duck their heads. The dead cats begin to fly the moment they are sighted.

I offer, in point, the case of James Branch Cabell. Certainly no sane person would allege that Cabell doesn't know how to write. He is, in truth, one of the most accomplished artists that the United States has ever produced. More, he is a clear headed and highly civilized man; his ideas are easily comprehended, and they are pungent and amusing. Yet it is but a few weeks since the London Times' literary supplement, one of the most sober and influential organs of English literature, was denouncing him roundly as dull and clumsy! Imagine it! Nor was this Cabell's first seance on the rack. Long ago, because of the professional jealousy of the late Maurice Hewlett, he came under the ban of one of London's most powerful group of literary log rollers, and ever since he has been the victim of an ignorant, dishonest, preposterous enmity.

But he is not alone. American books, and particularly American novels, always have hard sledding in England. Most of them, in truth, are never heard of at all. There is not a literary periodical in America that does not print an article on new English books in every number, but if articles on American books are printed regularly anywhere in England I have yet to hear of it. It is, indeed, hard to find a bookshop in London that sells such books. Hugh Walpole, in one of the weeklies, was lately bewailing the fact. And in the article he found it necessary to print a roster of the leading living American novelists; many of them, obviously, had not been heard of before in England.

Mr. Waldman, in the syndicate article that I have mentioned, brought up Sinclair Lewis' "Arrowsmith" against the fact that it has sold 30,000 copies in England, which, he says, is equal of "more than 50,000 in America." Perhaps. But a sale of 50,000 for a successful English novel would not exist in America — and precious few American novels ever come to 30,000 in England. Lewis' "Main Street" was a failure there; it was not until "Babbitt" swept the land that he got any serious recognition. To this day it has not occurred to any Englishman that "Babbitt" is a work of the first rank—and vastly better than anything any Englishman has published for ten years.

The case of Miss Amy Lowell's "Keats" is too recent to be forgotten—and too glaring. The book was denounced in print as if writing it had been a sort of crime. Every man in the land devoted himself to searching for trivial errors in it. It was sneered at as biography and belabored as criticism. The thing went to such lengths that many Englishmen got alarmed and rose to protest. When Miss Lowell, victim of the uproar, died, it was whispered that the book had killed her, for she was notoriously eager for praise—in fact, a thoroughgoing Anglomaniac of the Boston model.

Her death, in point of fact, was due to other and purely natural causes. She had been for many years what the doctors call a poor risk. But the fact remains that a book which she had spent the labor of years and into which she had poured all her immense knowledge of Keats and still as a critic of poetry—that this book, because it was American, was assaulted as ferociously in England as if it had been downright illiterate.

LAST MONTH'S BEST MOVIES IN REVIEW

By Mae Tinee.

THE SIX BEST PHOTOPLAYS OF NOVEMBER.

THE DARK ANGEL, IRISH LUCK,
STAGE STRUCK, CLASSIFIED, HAVOC, THE CALGARY STAMPEDE.

GOOD MORNING!

Having handed out the above list of "best" November photoplays, I suppose the safe thing for me to do would be to crawl in a hole and pull the hole in after me. Black agin me will be chalked the omission of "Little Annie Rooney," "That Royle Girl" and, foreboding whispers, "The Knockout."

VILMA BANKY made her debut in "The Dark Angel."

The Mary Pickford fans will bless me!
The Griffith lovers all aghast be!
The Sills adorers say "Dod gast thee!"

It will be something awful, but I intend to live through it. After all, when one considers the continuous and triumphant survivals of Mr. Mencken—it is not to greatly worry!

"THE DARK ANGEL," without doubt, pleased most of you. Did it not give you your beloved Ronald Colman in a sympathetic role, than which no man ever had had a sympathetic-er? Did it not serve as the screen party at which Vilma Banky, made her American debut? Did it not offer a fascinating story, beautifully produced and photographed, and alive with the "touches" that mean so much to the heart hold of a picture?

Yea, all these things gave "The Dark Angel" unto you—and for them, of course, you were duly thankful.

"STAGE STRUCK" comes next in line—and I hear a mixed chorus of purrs and yelps. The purrs are loudest. The yelps come from those who will never like Gloria Swanson being an actress. The yelpers ask only of her that she spend her hours with the modistes and beauty culturists and relegate to them via of screen the latest thing in clothes, coiffures, and make-up.

In "The Coast of Folly," Miss Swanson proved herself a great actress by impersonating an artificial and dissolute woman of middle age, old and brittle before her time because of the life she had led. In "Stage Struck," an entirely different sort of production, she crowns herself with new laurels as a slavey who loves a pancake flipper. The picture is human and funny and interesting.

"HAVOC," I thought, was a great war picture.

The men in the production did some of the best acting ever witnessed by these eyes on any screen. The action seemed real; the sets and scenery little short of perfect; the story was one to hold you thrilled till "The End" was flashed on the screen.

Did you see "Havoc?" DIDN'T you like it a lot?

"IRISH LUCK" was the new Thomas Meighan film—the one that made even the folks who like to go on record as not particularly caring for the bonny Irishman say, "At last Tom Meighan has a good picture!"

It's great charm—outside of its star, pardong!—lay in the beautiful Irish scenery amidst which "Irish Luck" was filmed. I sure would love to have attended a performance in company with some dear old lady who was born and spent much of her life on the ould sod! I can just see and hear her as the streets of Dublin, Trinity college, Bickeen bridge, the Blarney stone, and the Lakes of Killarney unfolded before her eyes—and all the lovely countryside of the Emerald isle! A good story and vurr' fine acting made "Irish Luck" a broth of a photoplay, as was remarked at the time in this column.

"CLASSIFIED" was made from the story by Edna Ferber, and provided the luscious Corinne Griffith with a rôle in which she dolled up less and acted more than she'd done since I can remember.

The story, well worked out for screen purposes and utilizing the services of an excellent cast, was concerned with the life of a poor working girl employed in the classified ad department of a great newspaper. I enjoyed "Classified" immensely, and next Sunday if there's space you may see some letters in "The Voice Of The Fan" column, from girls who work in classified departments of newspapers—giving their reactions to it and telling you how true to life they found the experience of Babs Comet.

"THE CALGARY STAMPEDE" is a fine "western." Thrilling—because of the locale rather than the story. The latter was interesting but not a world beater. The scenery was immense.

The picture was photographed in the Calgary territory in Canada. I quote from the original review:

"Fascinating views of herds of buffalo and deer on the government reservation unfold before you and the "Calgary Stampede," which is what the yearly roDAYo in that country is called, is presented to you as large as life and twice as natural. . . . The picture starts and ends with punch . . . the best "Hoot Gibson" Universal's made . . ." —and so on.

Pictures surely deserving honorable mention were quite numerous last month, and these included "Annie Rooney," "The Knockout," "Bright Lights," "Compromise," "Camille of the Barbary Coast," "The Ancient Highway," "The Man On The Box," "The Fool," and "The Keeper of the Bees."

See you tomorrow.

Bits aBOUTem.

I had an interesting letter the other day from a man well known in the movie industry. Here's passing it along to you:

"Dear Mae Tinée: Have you ever thought about how much wealth Griffith has created for the movies?

"He gave Mary Pickford her street-gamin, semimentalimp role in the old Biograph days, a role that has made her rich, and which, when she deserts it, must be dug up again by public demand.

"He developed Lillian and Dorothy Gish and Blanche Sweet, giving them the characters which have made them famous and which they cannot leave without financial disaster. Remember how Lillian tried once to play a gay chorus girl and failed dismally? Remember how Dorothy tried to play a vamp and colorful beauty once and was rushed 'til she went back to the prankish roles? He brought out Blanche Sweet as the golden hatrid, persecuted lovely one, where she must remain if she is to get top salary.

"Griffith cast Constance Talmadge as the "mountain girl," wild, free, flirtatious, unconquerable, and every time she has repeated this basic idea she has scored; every time she has not she has failed at the box office. He started Wallace Reid on his roles of strong, likeable American youths. He took Richard Barthelmess out of obscure and sleek juvenile roles, and made him a dramatic actor in "Broken Blossoms," and Dick has followed the emotional idea every since. Henry B. Walthall still is called for when "Little Colonel" rôles come along, and for years he got huge salaries for repeating his "Birth of a Nation" part.

"Here's a thing that isn't widely known. When Douglas Fairbanks left the stage to go with the old Triangle, they had him doing straight hero parts and his pictures failed, one after another. Griffith, who had supervision of the

Taking the Grand Out of Grand Opera

By Edward Moore.

WHEN some greatly daring revolutionists started to act Shakespeare in modern clothes, they opened up more possibilities than even they thought likely at the time. The idea has not been transferred to opera yet, but what a field it offers!

For some reason not altogether easy to explain, the thought of opera in long pants has always caused composers and producers to emit startled cries. "Fedora." "Mme. Butterfly," and a small bit of "Pagliacci" just about complete the list in this costuming category. But why?

VIRGILIO LAZZARI as Ramfis in "Aida" on Saturday night. [Hartsook Photo.]

It is quite possible that modernizing operatic costumes would carry with it a modernization of operatic plots, and this would inevitably make opera more popular with those who attend as a matter of duty or do not attend at all. It might even cancel the effect of that alarming label, "grand" opera.

For the term "grand" opera is merely a hold-over from an age when literary gorgeousness stalked unchecked and unashamed. A century ago they had "grand" concerts and "grand" symphonies and "grand" sonatas. A grand opera really meant no more in the way of showy ostentation than a grand piano, and that means no more than a certain type of factory model, though Ashton Stevens believes that, as among pianos, operatic classification should be carried on to baby grands and parlor grands. He, however, draws the line at upright grands.

Just an Example.

Suppose a group of operatic enthusiasts decided to become intimate with opera. There are plenty of examples in the standard répertoire that merely by being played in modern clothing would become modern with hardly the change of a word or a note. Take "Die Walkuere."

In "Die Walkuere" we have Hunding, the perfect type of operatic Babbitt. He believes in one country, one scale of morals, and one wife at a time. In the modernized version, he comes home late in the afternoon to find that Siegmund, whom he has just run out of breath in a butter and egg deal on Main street, has dropped in for a cup of tea and a cigaret with his wife. The exchange has closed for the day, so Hunding merely warns Siegmund that settlement time will be next morning, and goes to bed. The tea hound and the wife decide to elope.

Modernization goes down to details here. In the Wagner version, Sieglinde keeps Hunding quiet for the night by giving him a dose of what our set used to call knockout drops. The transfer to synthetic gin becomes childishly simple.

Next morning, Hunding, who is really a much abused man, starts out in pursuit, and finds he is checked in his course by Wotan, the political boss of his district. But even a political boss can be made to behave by organized public opinion, and here comes Fricka, who is just that and full of language to boot.

Events now move rapidly. Siegmund comes to a violent end, so does Hunding, and Brunnhilde, the apostle of feminine freedom and a good bit of a boss in her own line, picks up Sieglinde and dashes away with her. It is difficult to see anything in the valkyrettes' chorus but a crowd of gossips at a country club, and the more because the instant any real trouble looms up they all give frightened squeals and disappear from the scene.

That is just a specimen of what can be done with one opera. As a matter of fact, the opera producers are sometimes forced to modernize in spite of themselves. Genuine emotion always moves me when I see the triumph scene in "Aida" where ancient Egyptian trumpeters wear horn-rimmed spectacles and play modern band instruments.

Here is a chance for a great movement; not that it is entirely original: they have been doing it in Russia for several years.

Concrete Support and Conversation.

The great trouble with the plan is that modernization will mean translation into English, and this is going to present difficulties all along the line. Some of them are unexpected, not to say disconcerting. When the friends of opera in English begin to join hands against opera in English, the case is hard.

A week ago this column told of the plans of the Civic Opera company to present three new American operas. It was suggested that this would be a good time for those who talked of the manifest merits of opera in English to rally 'round the box office with substantial tokens of their faith, and that, anyway, it would be a good test of how genuine such interest might be, particularly as the operas were new and American.

Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer, chairman of the American Society of Opera, Inc., now writes that the case is different. In speaking of the work of her organization, she says:

"The work has been done solely through conviction, and the society, its members, and other advocates have already collected and spent some fifty thousand dollars.

"Admitting that such persons are, as yet, small in number, it would hardly seem fair to ask this group to prove its principles, hand out its money, and fill the Auditorium, after the outlay mentioned and five years of arduous labors.

"And, it must be remembered, almost to a member, they (we) are guarantors and subscribers to the Chicago Civic Opera company, carry their money and enthusiasm to the Auditorium, help to keep the great art of opera going—and in spite of a system of which they disapprove. Recently I stated that, since the public was not being informed of these and other facts, the native operas and foreign operas in English should be given on subscription nights, assuring an audience and permitting the supporters of opera here to judge of this question, and not putting this matter to a six-dollar-a-seat test. If, after this, the subscribers prefer to be less intelligent listeners than foreigners, then let them go on with this un-American and polyglot system. Fortunately, all of the Chicago subscribers to opera are not all Americas; and even though my personal work should soon end, the matter is being discussed outside of the Auditorium, and Americans are coming to their own conclusions."

This is a bit confusing. This department did not single out any society or organization: it merely mentioned the large class of professed advocates of opera in English who favor it with letters and conversation on the subject. It still believes that the way to support opera in English is to support it concretely, to prove its faith by creating a larger attendance when an opera is sung in English than when it is sung in a foreign language. It was interested in the movement as a musical activity with a definite aim. But if the movement is to be more conversation than anything else, it must confess to a cooling of excitement.

"Polite Jazz" in Gotham.

They are going in for "polite jazz" in large quantities in New York just now. Walter Damrosch was announced to conduct George Gershwin's new piano concerto last week, and today the audience at Æolian hall will hear a new jazz symphony from the pen of Albert Chiaffarelli, whose name up to this time has escaped attention in this department.

No comments on the Gershwin piece have reached Chicago up to the time this is being written, but advance notices indicate that, while the conductor calls it jazz, the composer does not. In his own analysis of the work, Mr. Gershwin speaks much of the Charleston rhythm. After considerable investigation, it is learned that the Charleston is much the same sort of thing that in the old unregenerate days used to be called buck and wing.

Mr. Chiaffarelli announces that his symphony is founded

"MORALS," PRE-WAR COMEDY, GOOD FUN

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The actor's theater thought to give the subscribers a treat this week by producing Ludwig Thomas' pre-war farce called "Morals." At least, it is called "Morals" now. It used to be plain "Moral."

This play was inspired, as you may have read, by the escapades of a certain crown prince who, not having a war to play with at the time, was given to such escapades as aroused his papa's ire and caused him to threaten to clean up the bad places and persons for the good of the fatherland.

And where would the cleaning up begin, and where would it end? mischievously demanded the Thomases and their satirical friends. Would the higher-ups be reached and, if they were, what would happen?

In the play certain smug and hypocritical citizens of a certain mythical city, engaged in politics and other vanity games, form a society for the suppression of vice. And it is no sooner formed than an ambitious assessor of police, eager to expose these higher-ups who are the first to criticize the authorities, orders a raid on a certain exclusive scarlet house, and arrests its flashy lady proprietor.

As evidence the police pick up the lady's diary, and in the diary are the names of all the madam's prominent clients, together with such comments regarding their more distinguishing characters as may help her to remember them.

The raid probably would have been a success and the madam's lesson a salutary one if the night of its occurrence the crown prince had not happened to be among her callers, and to have been so embarrassed by the informality of his attire as the police entered that he was forced to hide in the wardrobe with the lingerie.

Of course, prosecution of the case is impossible. Herr Beerman, the president of the vice society, whose name appears frequently in the diary, is fearfully against it, and so are all the other more or less hysterical members. They had hoped only to suppress the immorality of the lower classes, anyway, they explain—the immorality that, when unrestrained, so easily sinks to the level of vice with the ignorant and the poor.

"Morals," which has been translated by Sidney Howard, is good fun and there are several broadly drawn characters and amusingly played scenes, but I doubt if the people will care a lot for it. Edwin Niccadu, Stanley Howlett, Alice John, and Marion Warring-Manley are principally engaged.

Fathers and Sons.

James Forbes' "Young Blood" came in at a good time. It was Thanksgiving week, and there were crowds of young bloods home from school wherever you might turn. They wise cracked for you in the subways and giggled themselves past you in crowds in the street. They flowed into the theaters laughingly and came out again laughing the harder. A happy, irresponsible, healthy, independent crowd.

The Forbes play is about such a college boy, home for the summer—twenty-two, I believe, and flunked by the dean. A champion at tennis but a bust at French. And, gosh, how he hates to tell his father. Father has been so darned good about a lot of things. Especially money.

But father has to be told, is told, and explodes according to expectations. How dare his son, the son of whom he has been boasting all these years, fail in anything? How dare he.

And the boy, resenting father's attitude, proceeds to seek solace in father's cellar stock. Urged on by the pretty parlor maid, newly come to that house, he puts away a quantity of cocktails and a pint of champagne. After which he follows the maid to the summer house—and is gone two days.

Enter then, Georgia, the girl next door. A fine little loyalist, slangy and free, but ever so decent. Since she was five and he was seven, Georgia has been tracking this boy, whose name is Alan, but he never has been able to see her. Now, suddenly, he does. And realizes that she is the girl for him and always has been. He probably was a little ashamed about the parlor maid affair and needed sympathy. Which he certainly was not getting from father.

Then, just as Alan knows he loves Georgia and Georgia is vibrating ecstatically with joy, up steps the parlor maid to announce more or less hysterically that Alan has not done right by her and must marry her as a consequence.

Again there is the devil to pay, and you know what sort of creditor that fellow is. Alan and father quarrel. Alan tells his male parent he can jolly well take a bit of the blame himself. Perhaps if he had ever taken any interest in his growing hopeful, if he ever had tried to get close to him and to talk with him like a human being, instead of like a father, he might have taken a greater interest in his studies and likewise his home. Other boys' fathers came to see them. Alan's father sent a check. Other boys' fathers talked over their school and their tasks with them. Alan's father was too busy with stocks and bonds and his poker games in the club car. Father can go leap into the lake so far as Alan is concerned. Saying that, Alan is out of the house and gone.

They find him again, of course. I think he comes back to apologize to father and to marry the parlor maid. He won't have her bought off. Drunk or not, framed or not, he is going through with the thing and give his child a name.

Whereupon, in hops the wise little Georgia again. What do men know about a situation like that? The oldest, commonest, bunkiest situation in melodrama. The ruined gal and the bad young fellow! Well, girls who feed boys champagne and cocktails usually know what they're about. And, as Georgia proves, so does this one. She admits it at the first suggestion that the family doctor be called in. Which is the beginning of the end of the play.

Truthful and human this "Young Blood" with Norman Trevor, the most convincing of fathers; Eric Dressler, the truest of sons, and little Helen Hayes, in this instance a particularly appealing flapper, playing the three parts it seemed a vital and helpful expose of a national home weakness in its first two acts.

I rebelled a little when the plot and the parlor maid began to tangle. Then the play seemed to let go of life and flop back to the theater. The girl was obviously helping out the playwright rather than the theme. But that is not terribly important. The audience I sat with like "Young Blood" a lot.

Fine, Old Time Melodrama.

For years, Sam Forrest has been one of the most successful of stage directors. Most of the larger western stock companies knew him in the old days. For a dozen years or more he was George Cohan's chief helper with the numerous Cohan-Harris hits and when George and Sam separated, at the time of the first actors' strike, Forrest continued with Harris and has produced numerous hits since then.

All this time, quite naturally, he has dabbled in playwriting. He has made over many plays as a part of his job. And once or twice or three times he has finished a full length play of his own. "Red Light Annie" was one of them. "Paid" is another, and "Paid" has just come to town.

It is not, as you might suspect, at all in the modern style. It is frank melodrama, without conscious frills. It has an extravagant plot, carefully built up and as carefully sustained, about one John Ramsey, a struggling inventor standing at the brink of success and debating the ethics of using $5,000 he has found in the street before, rather than after, he has made use of it to make himself a rich and successful man.

At the urging of his ambitious wife, Ramsey keeps the money, perfects his patents, acquires a quick fortune, and then goes in search of the man who lost it.

He finds him a waiter, embittered by the loss of his life-

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

PLAYGOING these weeks is less casual than at any other period of the year in Chicago: the economic implications of Christmas giving is the easy explanation. Few persons these nights "just drop in": those who go to the theater go mostly because they are keen for what they go to see; and it is to them that the successes look for the tiding-over from now till the 25th.

. . . The brokers are asking less for the good seats, and taking less, when pressed, than they ask. Their thoughts these days are with the city's law-makers, who seem to be committed to emit something new and comic in the shape and design of an ordinance. Regulatory laws are always a trial and a grief for the persons indexed for regulation: some of these laws may be so drastic as to require an hour or more of honest thinking before a scheme to get round 'em is worked out.

Mr. Gest sends an interesting bulletin about the plans for the opera-wing of the Moscow Art Theater, starting in New-York the 14th: interesting because he told me some time ago that he expects to give two weeks to Chicago, although he didn't appear to know in what theater, and was of the belief that the Auditorium would never do. . . . Anyway, the Musical Studio, as this opera-wing is officially called, is to start with the Moscow version of Aristophanes' great comedy of "Lysistrata," wherein the witty and visioned Athenian made more fun of feminism as a self-sufficient social code than all the wits and playwrights and novelists and jokers who have since then tried to be funny about it. When the well-meaning band of actors to which I belonged at college put "Lysistrata" into its prospectus one year, the trustees called a meeting, suppressed the printed pamphlets, and wrote to our parents, explaining that expulsion and public disgrace would follow if we so much as mentioned the comedy again as an activity of the university. Most of us were fired later, although not because of Aristophanes; and those who weren't became clergymen or teachers: in two or three cases, both! So much for "Lysistrata": doubtless, the Russian in which we shall hear it acted after the holidays will be as intelligible as would have been the edited English of the version we studied in the 'Nineties down in Jersey.

Offenbach's opera-bouffe of "La Perichole," which I haven't heard since the late Lillian Russell sang in it, and Lecocq's "The Daughter of Madame Angot," best of all the French operettas, are to be given by the Russians. What is likely to prove the bill of most popular interest is their make-over of "Carmen," fitting Bizet's matchless score to a new librette which, they aver, is "faithful to Merimée's novel." They call this "Carmencita and the Soldier." The fifth and final bill of the répertoire for this country is made up of three little music-plays grouped under the title of "Love and Death."

Miscellany.

Nazimova is to go into Noël Coward's "Nadya," which is said to be what is known in the market-place as Zenda stuff. Bruce McRae is to be with her in it, and maybe Basil Rathbone, too. The latter is now co-star with Miss Elsie Ferguson in a piece named "The Dark"; and report is that it isn't much good. . . . This will be Nazimova's first venture with a new play in ever so long. What a fuss the critics used to make whenever she appeared in anything new or anything old! They insisted for years that she was the world's foremost actress in comedy and in tragedy, and that Ibsen had never been acted until she took her antics into some of his best plays. Yet, she took less to Ibsen and knew less of what he meant than any other actress I have yet seen in any of his plays,—although I should note an exception here in favor of Miss Eva La Gallienne, who is now cutting up in "The Master-Builder" in New-York.

SIR: I suppose you're right about the brokers, even while what you say about them shows that we who buy of them are so many boobs. It is less the premium, whether large or small, than the stupidity and unfairness of a traffic singularly unnecessary in Chicago, where, as you once pointed out, the theaters are confined to so compact an area that the alleged "convenience" of the public about which the managers prattle is in reality a masterpiece of a plan for the public's inconvenience and annoyance. "Lookit Nooyawk," as one of them said to me the other day: "peepul there take it as a matter of course and expect it."

Thanks for the tip on books to read! You've hit two-thirds with me on "Fräulein Else," "L'Ile des Dames," and "Christina Alberta's Father." I mean that I think the last is punk: I'm with Mencken on it, and he sure tears it to shreds in this month's Mercury! However, it kept me from spending two-fifty and tax on "The Fascinating Devil" a night when I'd no place else to go.

&c., &c., &c.

Miss Estelle Winwood, as Katherine; Miss Ann Harding, as Bianca; and Rollo Peters, as Petruchio, are to give some special performances of "The Taming of the Shrew." . . . Not much else is being done this season for Shakspere, although New-York has two current revivals of "Hamlet"—the one with Miss Barrymore and Walter Hampden, and the one in what the ads call "modern clothes." Mr. Mantell, who is beyond the three-score and ten, is somewhere afield with his weird assistants and a répertoire. Miss Cowl, having made the to-be-expected failure as Cleopatra, is resting her case on Juliet and trying to find a new play that will sell. Miss Marlowe is in the second year of a retirement from which it is not thought likely she will emerge save for some sort of a stunt; and Mr. Sothern, after resting up for a season, is playing as a young man in long pants in a tract about a lawyer's conscience by the grave Eugène Brieux.

Believing that they should press their luck, Miss Beatrice Lillie, Miss Gertrude Lawrence, and Jack Buchanan are to add to their chores and their income by performing from midnight on in a new gin-club in New-York. It is to be called Charlot's Rendesvous. . . . As to the issue of Charlot's Revue current there, they and their associates are said to be translating it into terms it lacked the first-night, when the premium-paying crowd found it stodgy and unfunny, and decided that Mr. Charlot had made a bad guess as to what would be considered good in this country. I arrived in New-York in time to miss the opening; but I found while there no better entertainment than was contained in the tales of those who managed to get in. Their accounts tallied in the details of red carpet on the pavement of the theater, a canopy to protect the in-going audience from cigaret-butts tossed by the sightseers on the roofs, all the Messrs. Selwyn in toggery bought on a basis of What the Man Should Wear articles, an advance-sale in excess of $200,000, and a performance so dull that seats costing $25 at the brokers' were forsaken by ten o'clock. "Why," said one fair narrator, "the crush outside the theater from seven-thirty until nearly nine o'clock was so great that only a rumor that Michael Arlen was spending money could have justified the excitement!"

Mr. Frederick Calvin,
La Salle Theatre,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Calvin:

Permit me to congratulate you upon the very successful performance of the comedy "The Judge's Husband" that I witnessed at the La Salle Theatre last evening.

It is one of the best plays that I have seen in a decade and with the advance of the "new woman" so ably portrayed by Miss Gladys Hanson it presents one of the most interesting phases of American life today.

I enjoyed it immensely because I saw myself a hundred times in that play and I advise every woman in public office, every woman lawyer and every woman with political ambitions to see it.

I have seldom seen so fine a cast as that of your play - from the masterful interpretation of the title part by Mr. William Hodge down to Mari Worth, each contributed his share toward a perfect whole. Extend my best wishes to them.

Very truly yours,

Marie O. Andresen

Ramsey's boardings. Without telling him why, Ramsey makes him a foreman in the Ramsey Electrical factory. Later he advances him again and again and finally makes him, too, a rich man.

But the Ramsey conscience still pricks him, and his soul is heavy with deceit. For twenty years he has been trying to make proper restitution of that "borrowed" five thousand. His philanthropies are many and his donations to science generous. Still he is unhappy. It is almost a relief when the truth comes out; when the waiter, who has become rich, realizes the cause and cause of his good fortune. Being a greedy, avaricious, vindictive type, he is for tearing Ramsey down from all his social and commercial eminences and exposing him to the world.

It makes for a fine old time dramatic situation, this twisting of events. And Seig Forrest, author, has so cast and directed his play, with Carl Anthony playing the inventor Ramsey and Edward Ellis the hero of a thousand snivelling crooks and things, doing a lot for the waiter, that it is theatrically telling.

There are a son and a daughter, the son of Ramsey and the daughter of the other man, and they manage a settlement.

There is no exposure and Ramsey is forgiven. The boy and girl are to marry, so the Ramsey business eventually will be equally divided.

The critics have been of a mind to greet the Forrest play as old fashioned and cumbersome and filled with flowery language. Neither play nor author deserves the smarty and unkind things that have been said against it. But what the result will be it is too early to predict. Gail Kane is in the cast, and Roger Pryor and Katherine Wilson. There is a public for "Paid" if it can be interested before the smart boys laugh it out of the theater.

Gotham Has "A Lady's Virtue."

Rachel Cruthers, being an honest lady from Bloomington, Ill., still unravished by New York life, crusades earnestly for a better understanding of marriage in her new play, called "A Lady's Virtue."

This institution, which used to be pointed to with pride as the bulwark of society, is still something that cannot lightly be put aside, she insists. And proceeds to illustrate her argument with the adventure of the Halcombe, Sally and Harry, a couple closely related to the legion family.

They have been married for seven or eight years and are now discontented, restless—and out of love. Also they are convinced—or, at least, Sally is convinced—that, their married life being hopeless, the only thing that can assure it complete freedom of action for both.

In pursuance of this thought Sally goes to New York and steps out a bit. She visits the Cocktail boys, Shaker and Ice, and a swell lot of celebrities, including an opera singer, Madam Rose herself. And also an alluring style of dames she thinks she loves. By the time she is ready to go home she is convinced she and Harry can never be happy and that the sooner the break comes the better for everybody.

Sally takes Madam Sisson home with her. Also a selection of the madam's philosophy—that life is tricky, life is fleet, and that happiness should be grabbed while the grabbing seems approximately easy. Madam Sisson meets Harry, and the certain subtle something that intrigues the sexes flashes between them.

Next morning they are out before dawn, and stay out until night in Harry's airplane. Next night they are of a mind to confess their passion. They would like to fly away together, if Sally does not mind.

Mind! Sally is crazy about it! That fact should solve everything. And practically it does.

A fortnight later Sally, leaving the children with mother, packs a party dress, a nightgown, and a vanity case and goes back to New York in search of her friend. She finds him and bathes him, the same half hour.

Then she finds Harry and Madam Sisson. For a fortnight they have been supremely free, the madam thrilled, Harry a little doubtful. He can't quite forget the old home and the family.

And so it comes to pass that the Halcombs, a fortnight older, but years and years wiser, discover that the building that is marriage has little in common with the something that is physically scientific, but otherwise decidedly uncertain. And they go home.

The Nash girls are playing the piece, as they did in Chicago, with Robert Warwick the husband. Mary, being a flashy beauty and the mistress of the emotional actresses' full equipment, does nicely as Sisson, but Florence, who is Nature's own choice for farcical comedy, rattles around a bit unhappily as the wife. Warwick and Joe King play the men.

STARTED HERE IN RECITAL

THE MISSES NELLIE AND SARA KOUNS

THEY first come to notice in Chicago just nine years ago, when they appeared of a Sunday afternoon in one of the concert-rooms in a recital of duets. They were soon thereafter invited into the two-a-day, wherein their recital-bills seemed a bit stiff; but they have kept at it, and are today among the somebodies of the varieties. . . . The Misses Kouns are this week's bill-topper in the Palace.

News-Notes of the Stage

These are the new plays bulletined for the week in the New-York theaters:

"Easy Virtue," by Noël Coward, with Miss Jane Cowl, Halliwell Hobbes, and Mrs. Mabel Terry Lewis. . . . This is the third of Mr. Coward's plays to be staged here this season: the two others are "The Vortex," wherein he is acting in New York, and "Hay-Fever," a failure there through what the reviewers said was bad direction, although the author, himself, was the director. "Easy Virtue" has not yet been acted in England. . . . Mr. Hobbes, of the cast, was in Chicago last year as the actor of the kindly and well-born priest in "The Swan."

"Gypsy Fires," by Allan Davis, with Miss Lillian Foster. . . . The author is a Pittsburgh attorney; and Miss Foster, unknown in Chicago, is an actress who took the fancy of the critics when she acted last season in New York in a piece named "Conscience."

"Cousin Sonia," from the French of Louis Verneuill, with Miss Marguerite Sylva. . . . This play was bulletined here a week ago for performance last week; and it has been held off because of non completion of the theater wherein it is to be given.

"Oh! Oh, Nurse!" a song-and-dance piece by George E. Stoddard and, as to verses and tunes, Carlo and Sanders, with Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, John Price Jones, and Don Barclay.

"The Cocoanuts," by George S. Kaufman and Irving Berlin, with the Marx Brothers. . . . Reports from Boston and Philadelphia are that this show is a success.

"The Fountain," by Eugene O'Neill, with Walter Huston, Miss Rosalind Fuller, Crane Wilbur, Egon Brecher. . . . This is Mr. O'Neill's long-talked-about play having to do with Ponce de Leon. . . . Mr. Huston was the actor of the purty old farmer in "Desire Under the Elms"; Miss Fuller is recalled here as one of the three Fuller Sisters, who used to sing folk-ballads in the Fine-Arts Building; and Mr. Wilbur wrote the terrible piece named "Easy Terms," wherein he performed in September in the Playhouse.

"The Man Who Never Died," by Charles Webster, with Harold Vosburgh and Bennett Southard. . . . This is to be acted in one of the Village theaters; and that doesn't necessarily mean that it's bad.

Besides, George C. Tyler will tonight give a performance of his revival of "The School for Scandal," with Miss May Collins as Lady Teazle, Ian Hunter (a newcomer from England) as Charles, James Dale as Joseph, and Jefferson De Angelis, Miss Henrietta Crosman, O. P. Heggie, and Arthur Lewis among the well-knowns.

The present schedule for novelties in Chicago: The eighteenth Ziegfeld Follies, the 20th, in the Illinois; "Dancing Mothers," the 20th, in the Selwyn. Al Jolson in "Big Boy," the 25th, in the Apollo; "So's Your Old Man!" January 3, in the Playhouse.

A resident company of weekly-change players starts activities tomorrow night in the Chateau Theater, hitherto a movie-house, with "The Best People," popular Chicago diversion two years ago. . . . The prospectus says that the piece will be followed by "Just Married," shown here in 1922; "The Fool," in 1923; "The Whole Town's Talking," in 1924; "High Stakes," last December: and "The Bird of Paradise," which dates back to 1912.

OPERA SCHEDULE

Shadows of Coming Events.

The first opera in English of the season, Aldo Franchetti's "Namiko San," will have its initial presentation on Friday night at the Auditorium, with the Japanese soprano, Tamaki Miura, in the name part. They tell at the opera company that the work, a musical version of an old Japanese play, lays the scene in the medieval times of Nippon, and requires the use of swords of that period in the hands of a Samurai prince and his followers. A Masamune, which is to swords as a Stradivarius is to violins, was found in the collection of Kano Oshima of New York, and this weapon, heavily insured, is to be lent to Madam Miura for her appearance in the opera.

"Falstaff," the last and the finest of the Verdi operas, will be sung on Thursday night. It is a setting of the Shakespeare comedy, "The Merry Wives of Windsor." Rosa Raisa and Irene Pavloska will be the merry wives, Giacomo Rimini will appear as Sir John—he was immense, physically and artistically, in the part the last time it was given here—Edith Mason will sing the part of the daughter, sweet Anne, and Giorgio Polacco will conduct. It looks important.

Two other new features of the week will be "Boris Godunoff," with Georges Baklanoff making his first Chicago appearance in the name part tomorrow night, and "Lucia di Lammermoor," with Toti Dal Monte and Tito Schipa on Tuesday night.

Rudolph Reuter, pianist, will be the means of introducing two novelties into the Chicago Symphony orchestra's programs of Friday afternoon and Saturday night. He will be the soloist in De Falla's "Nights in the Gardens of Spain" and Richard Strauss' "Burleske." The purely orchestra numbers will be Mendelssohn's fourth or "Italian" symphony, Holst's oriental suite, "Beni Mora," and the Glazournow concert waltz in F.

When John McCormack sings at the Auditorium tonight it will be his last Chicago appearance for a year. Having an ambition to sing in every country in the world, he will sail in the spring for recitals in China, Japan, the Philippines, and other far eastern territory. He has already sung in Ireland, England, Scotland, Wales, France, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, Africa, India, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, Ceylon, Hawaii, Fiji, and Samoa, not to speak of the United States and Canada. This leaves only South America, Scandinavia, and Russia unmarked on his list.

John Charles Thomas, American baritone, appeared as Amfortas in a performance of "Parsifal" in Brussels on Nov. 20. It was the first time the opera had been given there since 1914, and they tell of having turned 1,000 persons away.

Clara Taylor, soprano, will appear at the Kimball hall Friday noon concert this week, and Anastasha Rabinoff of the same vocal classification, next week. There will be no concert on Dec. 25.

Ernest Hutcheson, the pianist, will be the guest of honor at the Cordon club this afternoon, following his recital at the Studebaker.

Anastasha Rabinoff has been summoned by wire to go to New Orleans to appear with Fortune Gallo's San Carlo Opera company on Tuesday.

AU REVOIR

JOHN M'CORMACK.
[Strauss-Peyton Photo.]

The minstrel boy of Europe, America, and points south and west, will sing at the Auditorium tonight, and then he is going away from here for a full year. The orient calls him, and it will be November or December of next year before he gets back. But he says it is au revoir and not good-by.

Familiar.

"I didn't get the number on it, but that car that hit you was a chummy roadster," said a man in the crowd.

"Chummy! Chummy!" snorted the pedestrian who had been bowled over. "It was downright familiar, that's what it was."

Son: P-P-pa hit his finger with the h-hammer.

Mother: Don't cry about that, you should laugh.

Son: I-I-did.

Or Wearing Rubbers?

Customer—"This skunk coat is fine, but will it stand the rain?"

Salesman—"Ecod, woman! Didst ever see a skunk carrying an umbrella?"

Kept His Word.

The best joke I ever heard was today in court. A certain man was before the judge, who said, "Well, K——, you told me the last time you would not come here again." The answer was, "Your honor, I did not come; they brought me."

Long Term Sentence.

Pat had recently married. He and his boss were talking one morning. His boss said, "Pat, you just tell me the meaning of this word matrimony."

Pat shook his head and said, "Boss, dat ain't no word; dat's a sentence."

Don't let tired, aching feet spoil your Holiday activities
Foot aches and pains are caused chiefly by weak and broken down arches. When they begin to sag, even though you cannot notice it from outward appearances, an extra strain is thrown on the muscles and ligaments, friction and pressure, are produced and all forms of foot ailments develop.
Such foot misery is absolutely unnecessary. Dr. Scholl, the well-known foot authority, has perfected appliances and remedies for all foot troubles. There is a separate one for every condition.
A Dr. Scholl Foot Expert
Here All This Week
The feet are delicately constructed. More than one-fourth of all the bones in the body are in the feet. Through wearing improper footwear and other abuses they quickly become weak and painful. To restore and relieve them they need skillful, scientific attention.
The man in charge of our foot comfort work is thoroughly competent and dependable. He knows feet, why they ache and pain and how to make them comfortable.
Bring your foot troubles this week to this expert. You will be impressed, yes, more than pleased with his services. Let him take Pedo-graph prints of your feet and give you a Free Demonstration. You will then know positively that foot comfort is awaiting you here.

Charles Ray's Stirs Holl

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.] — Nothing has stirred so much interest here in many a day as the announcement that Charley Ray is bankrupt.

Some of the comment centers upon who will be next owner to immerse the black tiled bathroom decorated in real turquoise and to dine off the famous $15,000 dining room suite.

Other comment attunes more sympathetically with Charley's heart story unfolded to friends and one or two others the day after his bankruptcy, of how he happened to go to the wall nearly a million and carry his father down with him for $200,000.

The bathroom of the Rays' Beverly Hills mansion, like the extreme drawing gowns of Mrs. Charles Ray, have been something of a source of envy to less celebrated Hollywood folk of some time. This bath, fitted out according to Charley's friends at a cost of $17,000, had the walls over the sunken marble tub decorated with a large mosaic tree of life whose branches, done in electric lights of various soft hues, furnished the illumination of the room.

The gnarled roots of the tree of life formed the soap and bath salts container.

The writer has often heard the "ahs" elicited from some of the beautiful of Hollywood's fair film favorites at Mrs. Charley Ray's frocks. Some of the girls make no secret about their efforts to trace down the modiste who achieved such linea.

What they found out was that Mrs. Ray patronizes not one but several modistes and wears one gown but once.

What another sleuth among dressmakers learned was that $24 a yard for dress stuffs to be worn once is something about the appropriate price to pay in return for the sobriquet on the few tongues that really count of "Hollywood's best gowned."

High Cost of Art.

Hard Luck Charley's own heart story contained no mention of the costline of a wife's dress stuffs.

"What got me," Charley said in a tone without bitterness, "was a desire to give something of my own inner fiber and leave something of an artistic heritage for a remembrance of Charley Ray."

Charley feels that in spite of a roof full of bad debts he has achieved one goal: that of showing the world he is as an actor and not just a farmer by type.

"I made artistic photoplays in the face of bitter objections and against the advice of my best friends and business associates," he said. "I was not content to make good light farces that wouldn't last. Well, I did what I wanted and now I am busted, but not unhappy.

"I could have made millions, but I would have been traveling in a rut. It was not many years ago that I visited New York and carried a million dollars with me—cold cash, all my own. Last year I was in New York again, but all I had was a couple of dollars when I reached into my pocket."

There was no distress in Charley's tale and no wrinkles in his cheerful complexioned countenance as he went on to tell how at the height of his troubles within the last year, "I always had enough to eat, but just enough."

Ray esteems "The Girl I Loved" as his masterpiece. He said he knew at the outset that making "The Courtship of Miles Standish," would be a financial flop, but he thought he could cover the cost by making a few other independent pictures.

While on the subject, favorite economies of picture people are even more interesting than their extravagances. Tom Mix has never got over one economy he acquired in his cowboy days. Soap was a scarce and treasured

Charles Ray's Bankruptcy Suit Stirs Hollywood Film Stars

The bathroom of the Rays' Beverly Hills mansion, like the extremely fine gowns of Mrs. Charles Ray, have been something of a source of envy to less celebrated Hollywood for some time. This bath, fitted out according to Charley's friends at a cost of $17,000, had the walls over the sunken marble tub decorated with a huge mosaic tree of life whose branches, done in electric lights of various soft hues, furnished the illumination of the room.

The guarled roots of the tree of life formed the soap and bath salts container.

The writer has often heard the "chic" elicited from some of the best dressed of Hollywood's fair film favorites as Mrs. Charley Ray's frocks. And of the girls make no secret about their efforts to trace down the modiste who achieved such lines.

What they found out was that Mrs. Ray patronizes not one but several modistes and wears one gown but once.

There was no distress in Charley's tone and no wrinkles in his cherry complexioned countenance as he went on to tell how at the height of his troubles within the last year, "I always had enough to eat, but just enough."

Ray esteems "The Girl I Loved" as his masterpiece. He said he knew at the outset that making "The Courtship of Miles Standish" would be a financial flop, but he thought he could cover the cost by making a few other independent pictures.

While on the subject, favorite economies of picture people are even more interesting than their extravagances. Tom Mix has never got over one economy he acquired in his cowboy days. Soap was a scarce and treasured article in the cow country, and it was saved religiously, even to the smallest scraps, by the men on the ranches.

Tom on location will go about gathering up the tiny scraps and treasuring them all in a cotton bag he keeps for them when a week's wages would buy him the total output of a tolerably large soap factory.

Thanksgiving Week Parties.

Thanksgiving week was marked by a series of parties; many of the picture people are enjoying a lull between pictures, and were glad to seize on Thanksgiving week as the time for stylish entertaining.

Romain de Tirtoff Erte was guest of honor at one dinner given by Ruth Clifford at her new home in Beverly Hills on Monday evening. An elaborate dinner included a wild duck for each guest. Ruth is becoming famous for her wild duck dinners. Her husband, James A. Cornelius, is an enthusiastic hunter, and when not bringing home the bacon in Beverly real estate brings home the fowl from week-end shooting trips.

Following the dinner, entertainment was provided by Alma Riel, a Spanish singer and dancer, and Sol Cohen, violinist, and a singer and pianist. Twenty guests were present, including Anna Case of the Metropolitan Opera company, who wore a peacock blue butterfly gown with sleeve drapes forming the wings and the body of the butterfly represented by the solidly beaded bodice of the gown. Peggy Hamilton, fashion designer, helped Mrs. Cornelius receive the guests in a pink crêpe Elizabeth gown beaded in blue and gold. Ruth Clifford herself wore a Chinese vermilion chiffon velvet costume faced with orchid crêpe chiffon around the hem. A trailing orchid ornament was fastened at the waist and hung below the hem. Silver kid slippers touched off the ensemble.

Winifred Hart wore her wedding gown of flesh crêpe beaded in crystals and pearls. Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Behymer, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Brown, and Miss Elizabeth Brown of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. T. Locke, also of Pasadena; Mr. and Mrs. David Pascoe, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler-Reid, and Prince Nicolas Ourousoff completed the guests.

M. Erte, who has gone about little in Hollywood, proved a hit as a conversationalist, and remarked that if he had been entertained so charmingly earlier in his visit his departure from Hollywood would not have been so abrupt.

Erte's shattering of Hollywood's fragile sensibilities a short time ago by his remarks on prominent Hollywood beauties caused a sensational stir. He criticized filmdom's shoulders as being too square; the figures as too mannish, and the faces as "expressionless with dead eyes." To only one did he give credit for "the speaking eye" so much admired in France, Aileen Pringle. Erte even aired his violent falling out with Lillian Gish, whose costumes he was designing for "La Bohême." In the part where Lillian enacts the rôle of the attic dweller he clothed Hollywood's pride in the calicoes and cottons he considered fitting for such a rôle. Lillian rebelled, saying that when she acts her skin acts too, and she must have silk. The upshot of the fracas was that Erte invited the lady never to darken his studio doors again.

Comment and Gossip.

Sally Long, once of George White's "Scandals" and then of Zeigfeld's "Follies," whom the canny Florenz insured to the tinkle of $100,000 against her falling in love, is taking a rest after finishing "Fifth Avenue" in New York and getting ready to start in "The Prince of Plisen." Sally does much entertaining in her lovely home in Beverly Hills, which is just a block from Mabel Normand's house.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Borzage were among the many picture people who spent Thanksgiving in Tijuana at the races.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Chattering Some More.

Dear Miss Tinée: You invited me to chatter some more, so here I am again.

Those wishy washy producers surely did an injustice to Temple Bailey when they made "Peacock Feathers." It was just as badly produced as "Chickie."

I understand it would make a play too long to produce it exactly like the book, but why do they change it so much that a person can hardly recognize it? I was looking forward to seeing Mimi Le Brun in the beautiful riding habit she wore when she first met Jerry in the woods, but I sure was disappointed.

"Wild, Wild Susan,"—O—I just loved it—one of those plays that makes you sit up and take notice and wonder what is going to happen next. A good clean picture all the way through. Who could have taken the part of Wild Susan better than Bebe did, breezy and peppery. Maybe Viola Dana might have done it, but nobody else. Rod La Rocque was great, too. I think he and Bebe ought to star together forever.

Do you know there are a number of old pictures that are on my mind constantly? Some of them I have seen years ago, but still it seems I cannot forget them. Here are a few of my old favorites: Forest Stanley in "The Pride of Palomar," Constance Binney in "Such a Little Queen," Alice Brady in "Alice Ascends," Edith Roberts in "Backbone," Tom Moore in "The Cowboy and the Lady," Mary Miles Minter in "The Heart Specialist," Marion Davies in "Beauty's Worth," and Betty Compson in "Eve's Secret."

There are so many of those old ones that I wouldn't attempt to put them all down on paper. If these pictures would be shown again I sure would not miss seeing them, even if I were a hundred years old I'd take my specs and my cane and go just the same.

PUG NOSED PEGGY.

company, one day saw Doug vault over a fence running to work.

"'There's the thing. Do that stuff with him and he'll be a sensation," he said. They did and Doug did.

"He made Walter Long one of the highest salaried villains by taking him out of comedies and making him do brutes unforgettably. He took Carol Dempster out of Denishawn dancers and made her. He took W. C. Fields, the stage comedian who had had two dismal trials in pictures, and in one film—"Sally of the Sawdust"—lifted him to the stars. At the conclusion of "That Royle Girl", Griffith saw Zukor hire Fields at $5,000 weekly for a year—the second year to be $6,000 weekly with a percentage of profits—to do his "Royle Girl" role and character.

"Griffith has fattened the coffers of the film industry as no man ever has. He has made stars galore, given them their proper roles, divined what they could do best, shown them how to do it.

"Griffith today tolls for $6,000 weekly, and every penny of it goes to the public that bought stock in his picture company which failed. He doesn't have to pay this back under the law, but he's doing just what Mark Twain, Sir Walter Scott, and Ulysses S. Grant did, fulfill moral obligations to the letter of conscience by artistic or literary toil."

"BURGLARS"

When the burglar came, what happened? Were you scared and did you show it or—were you brave and did he know it? We will pay $1 for each burglar story printed. Write of your experience to the Burglar Contest Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Impostor.

I had gone to my mother's for lunch when a deaf and dumb man came to the door with a note, saying he was hungry. We had just seated him at the table when in walked his friend with a revolver in hi shand. They left with my diamond ring and my mother's pocketbook, containing $15.

The deaf and dumb man was in much better condition to speak than I was at that moment, and we have never believed in signs since. M. K.

Why They Ran.

The automobile had not yet made its appearance felt and my father kept a livery stable. I drove for him, usually taking traveling men to nearby towns which were not reached by railroad.

The team I drove was a span of mustangs that had been trained to start at the lifting of a hand instead of the usual, "Get up."

I had been to a neighboring town with a drummer and we were returning through a stretch of woods when two men appeared on each side of the road and ordered us to "stick 'em up."

We responded instantly; so did the ponies. As our hands shot up they sprang forward and before the robbers could grab the reins we were past them and going lickety-split over the corduroy road.

Having dropped the lines the ponies ran nearly a mile before I got them under control. C. C. S.

Badly Scared.

I awoke one night with the feeling that I was not the only one in my room. I lay for a few moments trying to catch some sound. Finally I was dozing off again, when I heard a click and the round, yellow light of a flash-light appeared on the black wall in front of me.

The first idea that flashed into my mind was to throw something in the direction from which that sound had come. I grabbed my pillow and threw it with all my strength. A muffled exclamation came as a result, and at that all my bravery vanished and I crawled as far under the covers as I could get. I lay there trembling and expecting every moment to be my last.

When nothing happened, I put my head out and yelled for help at the top of my lungs. My family came running and switched on the light, but my unknown visitor had disappeared, taking with him my wrist-watch and a couple of rings. E. T.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

One Thing After Another.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a neighbor who was in the habit of borrowing and then not returning what he borrowed for a good long time. One day last summer he came over and wanted to know if he could borrow our new lawn mower. Of course, being a neighbor, we couldn't very well turn him down, so we gave it to him. Well, we didn't see that lawn mower for over a month and then one day he brought it back and wanted to know if he could borrow the garden rake. G. E. B.

Reproved.

My father is a farmer. This fall he had a big field of corn which had not been gathered. He noticed a neighbor tenant farmer was allowing some 200 leghorn chickens to feast on this corn.

The men were all busy with other work so father decided instead of losing his cron he would turn his hogs in his field.

Imagine his surprise a few days later when the owner of the leghorn chickens sent this note: "Dear sir: Yure hogs has ate 23 of my fine leggern pullets. Plese send check for 30 dollars or I will have the law on you." O. W. G.

Finding Health and Keeping It

Mr. A. B. Stiefel, president of Stiefel Brothers, well known south side furniture merchants, takes Biofood regularly to keep himself in trim, and testifies to increased capacity for work since its use.

Science now says that good health is largely a matter of eating; that given the right food elements, almost anyone can enjoy perfect health.

Eat and Be Well

Food has a more important place in nature's scheme of life than most people realize. Science knows that the normal human body consists of certain chemical elements always in about the same proportion; that many human ailments are due to a disturbed balance of these elements, and that when this balance is restored the body becomes well. Ask any physician about the theory of Biochemistry—the science of rebuilding cell tissues, thus bringing health through feeding; not by a change in diet or system of starving or fasting, but by supplying in assimilable form the elements that nature needs to effect her own cures.

The principles of Biochemistry have been known for a hundred years, and now Biofood provides a way to supply the elements needed, in a tasty, convenient form. Everyone should know about Biofood, by inquiring of their family physician, local druggist or by writing us for the book, "The New A B C of Health." We will send it, gladly, without charge and fully prepaid.

Mr. Edwin Stiefel, secretary of Stiefel Brothers, gives full credit to Biofood for his recovery from a severe case of stomach trouble. He joins his brother in telling of his experience in gaining new health.

Biofood for Better Bodies

South-siders in Chicago know this new store of Stiefel Brothers. The business it represents has been built through public service by the three Stiefel Brothers, all of whom are enthusiastic over Biofood.

No one chooses deliberately to be ill, but many continue to suffer who might be WELL

For a century or more scientists have known of the theory of deficiency, knew that most diseases are due to something lacking, something needed by the body organs to keep themselves in trim.

Now comes Biofood, the scientific formula to supply those elements which the body needs for new cell structure. Not a theory, but a practical, scientific combination of natural elements, supplied in tasty form, pleasant to take and a real aid in helping you back to health.

Surely this product, which has helped so many, is worthy a trial. Hosts of individuals are ready to testify as to what it has done for them. People who have taken Biofood go out of their way to tell friends and acquaintances and to advise its use.

Are you ill or not up to par physically or mentally? Do you tire easily, worn out before the day is half gone?

You will do well to learn more of the principles of Biochemistry and how it helps through Biofood. Send for the book—it's free.

The head of one of the world's greatest oil companies, the head of a great steel plant in Chicago, the Benedictine Sisters, and thousands of other representative business and professional people, men and women, use Biofood and tell their friends about it. The cost is little compared to the good it can do. Remember that you need not change your mode of living—just eat the things you are accustomed to and that you like, but take Biofood in addition. The mind and body will soon respond. You'll feel a new interest in life—new vigor, new life are sure to come.

Biochemistry and Biofood

By Eugene Kuhne

Nature intended that we should all have perfect bodies, bodies whose machinery should run evenly, smoothly and painlessly. Modern life, processed foods, have conspired to throw much of our body machinery out of gear. How can we correct this? How overcome the wastes and faults due to our unnatural mode of life? How provide those elements which the body needs to keep itself in health? Biochemistry is the answer. In the form of Biofood, it offers those elements which the body needs to rebuild wasted cell structure, to supply the deficiency which spells disease.

Most illness is due to deficiency. Biofood corrects this. Isn't it sensible to believe that if every cell, every part of the body is perfect and healthy, that you must be well?

Think it over carefully. Send for the book, The New A. B. C. of Health. I offer it to you free, for I want every one to know of this method which has brought health and happiness to countless thousands.

ART AND ARTISTS

"Christ Falls the Third Time," from the Stations of the Cross, by Faggi, in the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle.

Chicago Church Has Art Treasure

By Inez Cunningham.

TO WRITE adequately about a great artist requires a much wider knowledge of art, a more exact pen, and a maturer experience of life than mine. Yet I feel it is fitting that some one express gratitude for having in Chicago the Pieta and stations of the cross by Faggi that adorn the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle.

They are the best work of a Faggi so far. This is not my opinion alone, but the artist's too, and Faggi's is a mind impersonal enough to be a critic even of his own work.

When he was working on them the war was in progress and his poetic imagination, already profoundly stirred, became peculiarly receptive to the great drama of the crucifixion. Through him flowed an uncanny knowledge of the suffering and the nobility of mankind, and he saw in Christ the symbol thereof.

Christ and the human race were one to him in suffering. Christ man through his crucifixion and man Christ by that same token.

So in his work he returned to utter simplicity. Details were washed out as color is washed out by perfect light. Nonessentials dropped away. There remained only the suffering and the tenderness, and as Faggi was able to produce a work of utter simplicity and utter beauty, not one line can be spared, not one touch is without meaning, and the design is perfect—not only in the Pieta, but in every one of the stations.

In one essential, it seems to me, more than any other, Faggi shows his real worth. He has used design as it should be used, i. e., as a language in which to disclose thoughts. The design is not the body of his work, as it is in the works of lesser men; it is only the clothes that drape the body of his thought. The work does not exhibit for the design, but the design for the work.

For instance, in the Pieta the mother and son form a perfect whole in design just as they are indivisible in destiny and in suffering. In the station where Christ receives His cross, Faggi has made Him already part of the cross, and where Simon helps Jesus to carry the cross, Simon's inability to carry the spiritual burden is made apparent in the design as it is in the thought. Again in Christ's meeting with His Mother the unity of the design expresses perfectly the wordless communion between Mother and Son.

If you have not seen these things, you must go to see them for yourself, for they are not for any creed, but for all lovers of beauty, Faggi has been called a radical. Nothing, in my opinion, could be farther from the truth. If he can be classified by a school, which I do not believe, he must be put with the primitives, for it is not a modernistic reaction which animates Faggi, but the same spiritual power which animated El Greco.

Now some critics are saying that primitivism and modernism are the same. They have an apparent likeness, it is true, but are none the less different with an essential difference. They differ as an intellectual process differs from an emotional one. The radicals are in revolt against tradition; the primitives return to simplicity—or at least Faggi does. The radicals are turning from many things, he is returning to one. If the primitive and the radical, therefore, seem to meet in the middle of the journey, it is only an optical illusion. It is only that they are both passing a given point at the same time, but there is a great latitudinal distance between them. They are as two men standing at exactly the same point on opposite sidewalks, looking like one man to persons beholding them from windows on either side of the street—and yet the width of the street would be between them.

The distance between radicalism and Faggi's so-called primitivism is the difference between destruction and reconstruction. Not that the "destruction" is not good, too, in its way. Modernism was almost a necessity. During the last twelve years or fourteen years it has served, and will serve until it destroys itself by becoming a tradition, as some day it must. When was there a school that destroyed its own little people so speedily? In this, modernism has been of great benefit, surely. Every year the cat of modernism devours its kittens as they are born, until finally only those moderns will survive who would have survived any school, as the great have always survived schools. We must thank modernism for another thing—its devotees must at least have imagination—there is no room in it for mere technicians who are like singers too deaf to control their beautiful voices.

If out of modernism comes one master to add to the surgery it has already so serviceably applied to the dead tissue of art, no one can say it has not been a good influence.

Faggi, however, is not a radical. But why bother about his classification? He is, after all, that happy accident—a great artist.

He has digested his traditions, he has assimilated form, anatomy, design. He is calm and sure in his technique, and his purposes are vital. He selects only what he needs, and has the courage to cast out many richnesses. He has the unconscious simplicity and purity of a child and, like the child, he flatters his audience by believing they have as much imagination as he. Miraculously it becomes true, just as it does in relation to childhood.

For instance, stand before the station of Christ's entombment. There is the Christ newly laid in the tomb. Already there is about him a rising, an upward motion. Above him the three Marys watch. They are reduced to the likeness of each other by their common grief, yet in the calmness of their folded hands, their folded veils, sits perfect faith.

Below the reclining figure of Christ there is a blank space—it is only a possible twelve by eighteen inches of bronze, and yet it is a mystic void.

Faggi says to you: "Fill it in yourself."

Here is the mystery of death and resurrection, the mystery of the returning seasons, the mystery of the rising sun, the mystery of old civilizations that vanish and new ones that appear. Fill in the void according to your desire, but see above it hope and faith.

The classes in advertising design in the school of the Art institute under the instruction of Louis Grell have been engaged in a National Horse show poster competition for the Chicago Riding club. A total of more than fifty posters were entered.

The following awards were made: Miss Artine Smith, first prize, $75; Clarence E. Fricke, second prize, $50; Milton Sellhorn, third prize, $25.

HOW SHE PROPOSED

Tell us how your wife proposed and if the letter is used The Sunday Tribune will pay you $1. Address How She Proposed Contest Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Following Him.

I was in camp when my sweetheart came to visit me from her home town 500 miles away. The fellows kidded me, saying she had followed me to get married.

One day, in her presence, they expressed their opinions, and, as a joke, she answered lightly, "Maybe I did!"

Well, she did, or at least I persuaded her she did, for that night we invited all the fellows over to the "Y," where we staged an impromptu wedding in fine military style. L. J. L.

She Didn't Care.

We had been going together for about six months. One Sunday afternoon in the fall we were out walking in a new addition of the city, where many young couples lived. As we passed one newly built home I said, "There is one house that young married people won't live in because it has no heating plant."

She immediately turned to me, and, putting her hand on mine, said, "O, that wouldn't make any difference to me; I could get along with a stove."

We are now married but do not live in the house that has caused all our happiness. K. P.

Easy to Please.

I was keeping company with a young lady for a short while. One night, after the theater, I took her into a restaurant, and, after looking over the simple food I ordered, she remarked, "My, it wouldn't be hard to cook for you!"

I asked her if she would like to, and the result was she has been cooking for me ever since. G. H.

IDENTIFY THE GENUINE BY THE NAME ON THE FLAP

For MEN — Smartly designed on masculine lines to fit trimly the popular brogue and other shoe models.

—and KIDDIES, too! A neater, lighter, more snug and protective boot for hustling, active feet—and wear aplenty in every pair. In boys' and misses' styles.

Rain or Snow—

Smart Fashion Says Zippers

The best dressed women have definitely proclaimed Zippers the correct footwear attire for wet and slushy underfooting.

Here is a boot that not only provides a quick, convenient method of fastening and super-fine quality but grace and youth in foot line—loveliness from slipper to frock hem. Observe how it follows the natural lines of the foot, curves under the arch and obeys the dictum of the fashionable narrow heel. Contrast its shapeliness and trimness with the heavy, old-fashioned gaiters.

Good taste is woman's fondest possession. Make fashionable Zippers a part of your season's wardrobe now.

Observe Today as Golden Rule Sunday

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

WHISTLES are to sound and bells to ring today noon as a signal for those in church to rise in prayer and thanks giving while they think of the orphan children of the Near East. It is requested also that families perform the same act of devotion at the noon day meal. The day is known as Golden Rule Sunday, and will be participated in by fifty-three nations, although the chief dependence for offerings must be from the United States.

Chicago's quota is $300,000, Illinois' $600,000, and the nation a minimum of $5,000,000. Practically all the governors of the various states of the union have issued proclamations calling on the people to give generously.

Praise for what has been accomplished pours in from all sources but the need for continued help is considered by all who know conditions imperative. The headquarters of the Near East relief is 37 South Wabash avenue, with F. J. Michel in charge. The canvass of the trades is under the chairmanship of George Woodruff.

Dr. Albert Parker Fitch of Carleton college, Minnesota, president for sixteen years of Andover Theological seminary, Massachusetts, will speak at 8 o'clock this evening at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall on "Why Believe God?" Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club and president of the Chicago Church federation, will speak at 7 on "Some Old Letters."

A motion picture travelogue on "Palestine" will be given on Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the assembly hall of First St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, 1301 North La Salle street, by Stephen A. Habousch, a native and former shepherd boy in Palestine.

The Presbyterian union will hold a banquet on Thursday evening at the Hotel La Salle at which the speakers will be Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, "A New Order in an Old World," and Dr. John Timothy Stone, "The Old Order in a New World."

Bethel congregation is the fifth Jewish congregation in Chicago to inaugurate Sunday services. Today at 11:15 Rabbi Julien Gusfield will preach on "Religion Plus Education" at the community house, 3228 Palmer street.

Former Gov. William E. Sweet of Colorado will speak this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Apollo theater under the auspices of the Chicago Forum on the subject of "The World Court, a Reply to Senator Borah."

The First Congregational church of Glen Ellyn, Ill., will install on Thursday evening at 7:45 o'clock its pastor, the Rev. Orville L. Kiplinger, formerly of Mansfield, O. Dr. A. W. Palmer of the First church of Oak Park will preach, and a reception to the new pastor and his wife will follow.

The Church of the Atonement, Episcopal, is preparing for a carnival on a large scale at the Broadway armory on Wednesday and Thursday. Christmas presents and a show by vaudeville artists will be features.

SERMONS AND SERVICES in CHICAGO CHURCHES TODAY

THE REV. JASON NOBLE PIERCE, D. D.

[(C) Harris & Ewing.]

Dr. Jason Noble Pierce has the distinction of being the pastor of the President and Mrs. Coolidge in the First Congregational church, Washington, D. C. He will be in Chicago today and for part of the week. This morning he preaches in the Hyde Park, formerly the University Congregational church, Dorchester avenue and 56th street, and this evening in the New England church, North Dearborn street and Delaware place.

On Tuesday noon he will meet a group of the leading ministers and laymen of the Congregational church for lunch at the University club. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton and Dr. Pierce will explain the plans for a new First church of Washington, which will be erected by gifts from all parts of the nation and be in that respect a national church. The cost of the proposed church, including a certain amount for maintenance, will be $1,250,000.

Washington has so many transients and so many young people employés who need the ministry of the church, although their contributions are small, the national appeal is deemed by the church generally as justified. A committee from Chicago, New York, and other cities decided against building a church having in it stores and apartments in order to become self-sustaining and voted to build instead a church of strictly ecclesiastical design. A picture of the proposed colonial church is shown in the real estate section of this paper.

Dr. Pierce is a graduate of Amherst and Yale and has been pastor of the First church of Washington for five years.

Is there a more exacting test than this?

The Howard Neutrodyne is built and tested in the midst of a group of the most powerful broadcasting stations in the country.

KYW, WGN, WMAQ, WLS, WQJ, WEBH, and others are all so close to our plant that it is a real achievement to tune in clearly any one of these stations while the others are operating. (Ask any radio owner on the near North Side whether this is true.) To break through the wall and pick up distant stations with utmost clarity and volume is the test on which we ask Howard owners to base their satisfaction.

A severe test indeed. But we actually welcome an opportunity to prove Howard qualities under such unfavorable circumstances. We know that Howard owners will seldom have to contend with conditions anywhere near so exacting.

If we were content with ordinary tests it would take much less time, less care to produce a Howard. Our product would go out faster, and probably give "satisfaction"—as generally understood.

But the Howard "Six" must do more than give average satisfaction. It must produce extraordinary results—performance that is beyond anything previously experienced. We make certain of this by proving that each set is capable of such results before it leaves our plant.

That wall of high-powered stations is formidable, but if it were possible to subject the Howard to a more rigorous test we would gladly do so.

Write us, 469 E. Ohio St., Chicago, for name of nearest Howard dealer who will gladly demonstrate the new "Six" at your convenience

The Chicago Tribune is Paying

$1600.00 a Week for Moviegrams

An Interesting New Game. Open to Everybody. Winners Are Announced DAILY and SUNDAY in The Tribune

ARE YOU playing The Tribune's new Moviegram Game?

It is open to every man, woman, boy and girl. Simply write a Moviegram and send it to "Moviegrams," The Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.

A Moviegram is a sentence of ten words or less about any motion picture actor or actress. The first letter of each word must be the same as the first letter of the star's last name. Note these samples:

Pickford's Pretty Pictures
Please Particular People.
Chaplin's Champion Chuckles
Cheer Children.

The Chicago Tribune is paying $1600.00 a week for the best original Moviegrams submitted by the public. $100.00 is being paid for each one accepted and published. Two are being accepted every day and four every Sunday. See today's winners on Page 2. See The Tribune DAILY and SUNDAY for names of other winners.

Easy—isn't it? Just choose the name of any star you wish. Write a Moviegram today—another tomorrow, etc. You may submit as many as you wish. Use the dictionary for suggestions if you want to.

To help you get started, the names of a few stars are listed here.

Mary Pickford	Charlie Chaplin	Gloria Swanson
Milton Sills	Tom Mix	Bessie Love
Lowell Sherman	RudolphValentino	Betty Bronson
Tom Moore	Norma Talmadge	Bebe Daniels
Mae Murray	Lionel Barrymore	Lon Chaney
Lillian Gish	Agnes Ayres	Ben Turpin

Start playing this interesting game at once. Send your Moviegram suggestion on the Blank below or on a separate sheet of paper. Then watch The Chicago Tribune DAILY and SUNDAY for the winning Moviegrams.

The Rules:

1. Until further notice, The Chicago Tribune will pay $1600.00 a week for the best original Moviegrams submitted by the public. $100.00 will be paid for each Moviegram accepted and published. Two will be selected every day and four every Sunday.
2. A Moviegram is a clever sentence of 10 words or less about any motion picture actor or actress, in which each word begins with the same letter as the first letter of the star's last name. For example, if a Moviegram is written about Gloria Swanson, each word must start with the letter "S."
3. This offer is open to everybody—men, women, boys and girls—except employes of The Tribune and their families. It does not matter where you live.
4. Entrants may submit as many Moviegrams as they wish. Originality will count. Neatness will count.
5. All entries should be addressed "Moviegrams," The Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.
6. You need not purchase The Chicago Tribune to compete. Your Moviegram need not be submitted on the attached blank. You may write on a separate sheet of paper. These rules may be obtained free of charge at The Tribune Office and will be found in the copy of The Tribune on file at the Public Libraries.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Smart Set Faces Demise of Balls

Today's New York society letter is on page eight of this section.

By Mme. X.

TO THE careful student of the past, present, and future of society—using the word in its most frivolous sense—the outlook is dark and full of menace. Said one of the best known leaders of Chicago's smart set to the writer only the other day, speaking of a ball the night before:

"No, it wasn't very gay. Of course, under this Yellowley administration there is absolutely nothing to drink at any of these affairs, and the guests come late and leave early. I don't want people to get drunk, but without a little cheerful stimulus, a company anywhere—no matter in what part of the world—is bound to lack a certain devil-may merriment and capacity for enjoyment which is the backbone of a ball. The truth is," she went on, "the giving of big balls will shortly be abandoned entirely, I believe, in favor of smaller dances in private homes."

Last Word in Chic.

Of course, the most choice and elegant form of entertainment, as we have no great palaces with their own big ballrooms, is the fashionable, carefully thought out private ball in one of the beautiful hotel ballrooms, to which many hundreds of what my friend, Rufus MacVeagh, calls "pretty people" are bidden, with two dance orchestras and a handsome course supper served towards midnight.

If to this be added as a prelude a charming musical, you have in this combination the last word in the ultra chic and smart as well as utterly costly expression of hospitality. It is a form of entertaining possible only in great cities, centers like London, Paris, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, and such congregations of wealth and fashion.

Big public balls to which thousands are invited to come on paid admissions do not come under this heading, nor do they need the forbidden stimulus which is the sine qua non of a gay, private affair, where all the guests are controlled, or supposed to be, by the same conventions and standards of good taste.

To lose this once charming and choice form of entertainment from our social life would be a calamity. Such balls are the only occasions which bring together in gay companionship people of the same general outlook on life, all in their best clothes and with that unconscious mental elation that comes from fine attire.

Wasn't it Emerson who said, "To be well dressed gives a satisfaction that religion itself cannot impart"?

Take out balls from the social season's scheme of life and the intangible, indescribable institution we call society dissolves into thin air and its substance becomes fluid, formless, inchoate and incoherent; the individuals that formed and directed it scatter and lose identity, each being merely one of a small, unimportant group.

Perhaps it is merely the continued prostrate position of this p. p. p. p. p. that induces this melancholy outlook. We defy any one to feel hopeful or proud who has to stay abed thirty-three days, looking up at sturdy mortals who are erect and active. Yes, it's the self-esteem that suffers under these conditions. I doubt if that embodiment of pride, Queen Mary of England, could keep her belief in herself, if she had to lie flat on her back in a world of perpendiculars. Even that haughtiest of God's creatures, the Okound of Swat, would wilt and wither and take dark views under similar circumstances.

So perhaps the outlook on great, private balls is neither so tragic nor so imminent. We may not have to dispense with them and, if we do, life may still have gay moments without them. There's many a weary paterfamilias who thinks so.

Death of John Borie.

Although the news of the sudden death in London of her youngest brother, John Borie, last Sunday was both a shock and a source of profound grief to Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, with courage and sanity she decided not to abandon preparations for the Russian cabaret dinner to be given at her residence, 2700 Lake View avenue, on Dec. 16, for the benefit of the Russian refugee students' fund. Her nephew, Joseph Ryerson, and George F. Porter, Arthur Cable, and others came immediately forward and offered to carry on the enterprise for her. So the education of the Russian refugee students who are being shepherded by Thomas Whittemore will not be impeded or halted by Mrs. Ryerson's private and personal sorrow. It is hoped to raise a goodly sum for them by this fête.

John Borie, better known to his friends as Dick Borie, lived in Chicago for four or five years a quarter of a century ago. He was unusual in many ways. Artistic and extremely sensitive, his was not a temperament adapted to the rough and tumble of workaday life in this country, so, after working at architecture here in Gamble Rogers' office for three years or so, and two or three more years in an office in New York, he betook himself to the gentler, more sympathetic atmosphere of Europe's ancient civilization, eventually settling down with a musical friend in London.

The marriage of Miss Martha Blair Hamm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hamm of Kenilworth, to Rush Clark Butler Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Rush Clark Butler of Indian Hill, took place on Nov. 25.

Miss Mildred Wetten, who made her debut at a tea last Tuesday at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Wetten of 4810 Ellis avenue, is one of a group of girls who are to take part in the debutante group of the Arts ball pageant on Dec. 18 at the Congress hotel.

Miss Rosamund Coffin, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Spaulding Coffin of Winnetka, is to come out at a tea on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Franklin Groves Clement is the former Miss Helen Haugan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Haugan of Evanston, whose marriage to Mr Clement, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan M. Clement, took place on Saturday, Nov. 28.

His most notable piece of work here was Robert Allerton's far famed country house near Monticello, Ill., which, with its spacious and utterly lovely formal gardens, is one of the most beautiful residences of its kind in the middle west.

Death deprived the world of a choice, rare, appealing personality when it took Dicky Borie. We shall not see his like again.

Shadows on the Path.

Still another friend of many years, Alexander McCormick, left the warm and cheerful precincts of this life last week. He was always so vividly alert, so keen on the things of the moment, and so genial in his contact with those about him, that it casts a distinct shadow along the path ahead to think that we shall meet him no more. He was a fine and really ardent citizen, giving some of the best years of his life to public service both on the city council and the county board. If there were more of his ilk this city and county would be better run than they are now. He did what he could when he was in civic harness and Alec McCormick will be long remembered in this community by all in many walks of life who knew him, by those who worked with him, and by those who, in his lighter moments, played with him. He was a good comrade.

Of a Housewarming.

Among the many pleasant events ahead on the social calendar is the big dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster are giving in their charming new home, 2704 Lake View avenue, on Dec. 14. This is to be in the nature of a house warming, though it is given in honor of two popular former Chicagoans, the Roy McWilliamses. The latter are returning here after a lapse of years to make a last roundup of their household possessions.

For a decade or so they dwelt in a charming apartment at 199 Lake Shore drive. They were among the smartest, most attractive, and up to date young people here, cultivated, hospitable, popular.

Their abandoning Chicago, the city of their birth, was regretted by all who knew them, but it was inevitable. Mr. McWilliams was a man of means and had no inescapable daily occupation. Chicago is a poor place for such, especially if they be young and presumably vigorous. Europe welcomes such. They fit into that ancient scheme of things where the majority toil, while the comparatively small minority loaf and do nothing.

Famous Costume Dinner.

While they were here the McWilliamses made a good deal of renown for themselves by a famous costume dinner dance they gave in their apartment. I've forgotten what the particular phase illustrated by the costumes was—post-impressionist, or some such.

League for Deaf Active in Schools

THE Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing, the only organization of its kind in the city dealing specifically with the problems of the deafened, is entering upon its ninth year of existence; and, what is of greater interest, is making tremendous strides in its most interesting and constructive work—the preventive treatment among children of early school age.

An otological survey made in the summer of 1922 convinced the league leaders of the emergent need of tests and subsequent education of parents to the prevention of children's deafness.

Through special arrangement with the board of education, this work was actually started early this year, when a simple but effective whisper test was conducted by the teachers at the Perkins Bass school. The result was astounding; the teachers finding that out of seventy-seven children tested, thirty-four serious cases of ear trouble were found.

The tests were subsequently carried on in seven more schools, with practically the same results. Through the services of the league's trained social service medical worker, intensive follow up work has been carried on among these cases. Instruction of parents, the urging of proper medical care and, when necessary, operations at the league's expense are some of the duties.

Since this year's school term started the preventive work has been carried on in five more schools, totaling more than 5,000 pupils cared for.

Superintendent of Schools McAndrew and others have indorsed the work accomplished by the league. The principals have all agreed on the benefits and increased efficiency derived from the tests as carried on. The league feels that in urging examination of eyes, throats, and teeth the condition of the ear often has been neglected in proportion to its importance.

Dr. Harvey Fletcher, speaking before the recent convention of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Oto-Laryngology in Chicago, said that experts who have studied conditions in American school children state that 30 per cent of our school children have ear defects, 75 per cent of which can be cured if treated in time.

Membership in the league is open to any person who is hard of hearing or to any one interested in promoting a constructive work in the community. Much has already been done, the members feel, in removing the social and commercial barriers which deafness creates.

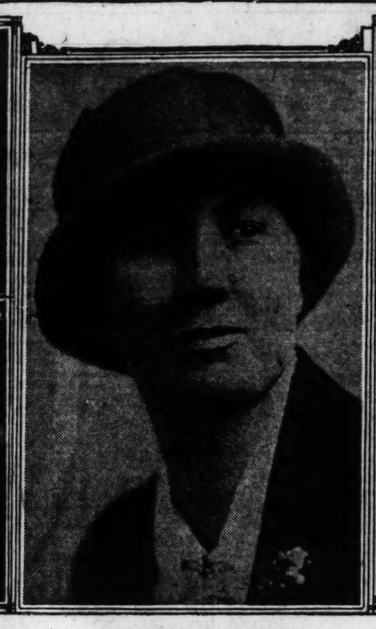
Four branches of work—educational, social, employment, and vocational—work out the league's program.

Lip reading classes are held at the community house, 206 East Superior street, on Monday and Friday evenings at 7:30 o'clock, and on Tuesday and Friday afternoons at 2:30. Details of other events and programs can be found by calling the community house.

Mrs. A. L. Drum is president of the league, Miss Abby Hosmer and Mrs. Louise Steiner, vice presidents; Miss Anna Juergens, secretary; Ravilo Fuller, recording secretary; Orpheus M. Shantz, treasurer.

MRS. GEORGE E. BAXTER.
[Moffett Photo.]

Mrs. George E. Baxter will be in charge of the linen booth at the carnival to be held on Wednesday and Thursday at the Broadway armory for the building fund of the Church of the Atonement. Dinner and programs each evening will be added features to the usual attractions of a Christmas sale.



MISS SUSAN A. MURPHY.
[Koehne Photo.]

The work of the Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing, which is outlined in the club column today, has made great strides since its beginnings only a few years ago. Miss Susan A. Murphy is executive secretary of the league.

The gift is to take the form of a fund for her care. Mrs. Maud Swalm Evans is chairman of the fund committee, which is planning a program for the benefit of the fund, to be given on Thursday evening at the club's meeting place in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's club, 410 South Michigan avenue. NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Ramona—but I remember that the Harry Harveys made a great hit by arriving in the middle of dinner as Adam and Eve. They were late because they had stopped to pin on more leaves.

There wasn't an outfit that night that would have caused any one today to turn a hair, but the party made a good deal of talk, chiefly among those who were not invited and therefore were not present. It was charmingly and wittily designed and carried out by the host and hostess, with not a touch of impropriety.

Dick Little was there as a tall gaunt devil, with horns and tail and all. He's no devil any more, but a very settled, married man. He and his clever wife have gone to housekeeping lately in an apartment at 100 East Chicago avenue. They are under the same roof and use the same little automatic electric lift with Arthur Aldis on the top floor and the Graham Aldises on the fourth floor.

Precious Old Possessions.

A more than commonly interesting loan exhibit is that planned by the women's auxiliary of the Chicago Historical society. It is to be held from Dec. 9 to 20 in the old S. E. Barrett mansion, 1412 Lake Shore drive, lent for the occasion by Miss Adela Barrett. It is to be an exhibit of furniture, bric-a-brac, and belongings of all kinds that date back at least a century. They are owned by well known Chicagoans. Many of those lending their precious possessions are of Chicago's real old stock, their parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents being part of the city's earliest history.

Mrs. Potter Palmer is going to arrange two rooms; another is in the hands of Mrs. C. M. Ely, Frederic C. Bartlett, and Robert Allerton; a fourth by Mrs. Henry Robbins, Mrs. William McCormick Blair, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, and Mrs. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman; a fifth by Mrs. Paul Blatchford; a sixth by the Colonial Dames, while Mrs. William Mundie promises two complete bedrooms and many other treasures. It will be a great show.

My friends, the Friends of Opera are giving a party on Tuesday afternoon at the Arts club, when that lovely, Chicago produced artist, Mme. Claudia Muzio, will sing.

Mrs. Arthur Meeker, president of the association, will preside. I envy those who can be there.

This Is Station S. O. S.

Two of the best known and most popular young women in Chicago's gay world, kind friends of this p. p. p., offered to supplement its somewhat abbreviated weekly chronicle, and here's the result. It's spicy and appetizing, isn't it? Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest it.

Did any of you try to cross State street the Friday after Thanksgiving around midi, I wonder? These elderly S. O. S. dames made such a venture, and found themselves in a solid wall of humanity. We swayed a bit forward, were pushed to the right, shoved to the left, and finally back to where we started. Now, if everyone crossing the crowded thoroughfares these days were made to dance the Charleston, at least they would have breathing room all about them. It would be most amusing even if you found yourself in one place for ten minutes, for it is grand exercise and guarantees to put the most solemn corner policeman in the best of humors and, incidentally, warm him up on a cold day. It would be an adventure for all of Chicago to Charleston to and from its lunch. The outgoing kicking feet would be their own best protection.

Everyone who stayed on till the wee, small hours at the Red, White, and Blue ball the other night was doing it right merrily. We noticed all kinds of timid young maids and matrons kicking themselves all over the ballroom floor. Not because it is one of the ennobling arts does it enthrall your attention, but from its lack of everything alluring or graceful you find yourself fascinated. I have a feeling that some dusky mule driver who could do the shuffle had the inspiration to imitate his kicking mule one day, and then added the mule's grace to his repertoire. It was something new and different, and consequently was passed on over the footlights; you know—from one mule to another, that sort of easy give and take of life. Anyway, the ball was a great success. I haven't heard in dollars and cents its outcome, but they do say the budget's bulging.

The next event of importance to our community is the horse show. Messieurs Y and Z told you last week most wittily all about those of other days and of today, so we shall not dwell on its lure and luster. But surely go to see for yourself. You will enjoy it hugely and be doing a real service to the Illinois Children's Home and Aid.

MRS. LEON GLASER.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

The marriage of Miss Margaret P. Strauss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Ettelson of 1020 East 48th street, to Leon Glaser, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Glaser of the Windermere hotel, took place at 6:30 o'clock last evening at the Blackstone hotel. Mr. Glaser and his bride have departed on a honeymoon trip to Florida and Cuba.

Nursery to Benefit.

Little faces also will be looking out of the North Avenue Day nursery this week. They are looking eagerly toward the sale of tickets for their benefit performance of the Ziegfeld Follies on Tuesday evening, Dec. 22. While their mothers are at work, fifty little children are cared for every day in their own comfortable house whose walls have been charmingly decorated by Elizabeth Cramer McCluer and Julie Thompson Le Baron. This appealing charity has been less advertised than many others, but if you could see the smiles on their faces as depicted by John T. McCutcheon on the program cover for the performance, it would send you hot-foot to the telephone to make your reservations for seats. Mrs. John T. McCutcheon is ready to answer such calls.

Speaking of seats, have any of you noticed how chic a thing it is for a gentleman to fall out of his when sitting in a side box at the opera? The other night when "Herodiade" was being given, just as John the Baptist walked on to the stage with thirty restless virgins, suddenly at the side of the horseshoe, up went a pair of manly feet and down the two steps at the back of the box and into the foyer sprawled a dignified Chicago bachelor.

Was his loss of balance superinduced by slumber, I wonder, or could it have been the scenic effect? Anyway, it seems quite au fait, as one hostess remarked tactfully when it occurred in her box: "It's quite all right. Don't worry. It happened the other night, too."

It's a novel way of falling out of a party, what? It may not be graceful, but at least it is a most effective method of exit.

This exit offers opportunity for mention of the merry entrance of the Roy McWilliams into Chicago (the S. O. S. Sisters are trying to connect up their paragraphs literarily, n'est-ce pas?) It is bound to be a merry one. Their places never have been filled since they betook themselves to abide in Biarritz several years ago. Their originality, chic, wit, and kindliness have made them hosts of warm friends who will welcome them with open arms.

One party already scheduled for them is the dinner Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster are giving on the fourteenth. The guests are asked to don costumes of 1870. What a tactful hostess to insinuate so gracefully how long their absence has seemed.

So we're all getting out our old bustles and basques,
Whose places are taken by modern hip flasks.

Apropos of flasks, are you not impressed by the fact that in so many of our north side apartment buildings the elevator men are generally to be found studying religious books? Are they chosen to camouflage the liquid welcome likely to be dispensed throughout the buildings? I am always deeply impressed by the quality of literature these young men read. One such book on strengthening the memory seemed particularly pat. How wonderful to find a trained attendant who could answer correctly all questions concerning the ins and outs of his patrons—even domestically. Perhaps even be a human inventory for furnished flats. Did you hear of the woman who, in her eagerness to leave her erstwhile domicile exactly as she had found it, ordered ten thousand cockroaches?

Creeping from one paragraph to another, the whole world seems to be invited to the luncheon Mrs. Crane is giving at the Casino on Dec. 14. We are greatly intrigued over the fact that Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen and Mrs.

Medill McCormick will speak on a subject of interest to women. The field is so large. What will they choose? The motivating forces of life are said to be hunger, sex, and vanity.

An important event in the literary life of the city, of real interest not only to women but also to men, was the thirteenth anniversary of the Poetry Magazine, celebrated last Tuesday evening at the Arts club. The hosts and hostesses of the occasion were Anbouin Barthelemy, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, and Dr. and Mrs. James H. Mitchell. Robert Frost came from the east especially to pay this tribute to Miss Harriet Monroe, its editor, and to urge Chicago people to support the magazine. And Lew Sarett spoke feelingly of the work Miss Monroe has done to encourage this art and its appreciation.

There's a lot more we'd like to say, but we feel THE TRIBUNE'S appreciation of our art might be lacking and our efforts consigned to the waste basket, so S O S is signing off.

Writing for THE TRIBUNE is like praying ~~to~~ for money and going to church. All keep you from doing and saying rash things.

Rest Cures Precede New York Society's Palm Beach Season

By Grace Robinson.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A new plan of campaign for a social season has been mapped out by Mrs. Frank Henderson, the well known Betty of all Turf and Field club events.

Instead of a term of rest following a long round of social pleasures, Mrs. Henderson has struck on the brilliant idea of storing up strength ahead of time to go through with a full program of engagements.

Preparatory to going to Palm Beach she is passing some time in a fashionable hospital, storing up color in her cheeks and vivacity in her manner, so that by the time the Florida season is fairly under way she will not be obliged to play the rôle of a listless lady.

Mrs. Henderson tied a few strings to her enforced retirement, however. She stipulated that she should be permitted to attend two or three highly important parties, which she did, to the horror of her nurse and amusement of her friends.

When she went to the hospital she took with her several hat boxes and suitcases full of bills, letters, manuscripts, and other documents. There was a protest, but she explained that it was a part of the equipment of the rest cure. She could not be really herself, she explained, unless she were allowed to go over the bills, answer the letters, write every day in her diary, and, most important of all, put in some real plugging on her memoirs.

This interesting narrative, supposed to reveal all, has been in progress for the last ten years. Mrs. Henderson really expects to have it finished some day, and then what a furore there will be in smart Park avenue circles, when the gossip about "myself and friends" is offered to the world at large.

Mad Rush of Pleasure.

It is a wise woman who lays up an extra supply of vitality as a preliminary to a Palm Beach season.

For American society knows no more hectic annual period than the months from New Year's day until the middle of March which are passed at the popular Florida resort.

Many persons, particularly the owners of the beautiful Spanish villas, remain well into April. Contrary to general belief, Palm Beach is as pleasant in the early spring as in January. The sapphire ocean tosses its snowy turf on the sand just as during the peak of the fashionable season. And strange it seems to late lingerers to see the smart Breakers hotel beach nearly deserted when nature has not abated her supply of the wondrous beauty which draws thousands every winter.

But the height of the season—February—is a mad rush of pleasure for those fortunate souls who work at the serious business of having a good time.

Here's the Program.

The average society girl—the girl who is a debutante, or has been out a season or two—falls into this routine. She awakes at 9 in the morning, and has her grapefruit and coffee in bed.

A quick bath. Then she sinks into a plaited skirt and blouse—white, or fashioned in one of the glowing colors that are increasing in popularity, and dashes over to the Everglades courts to play tennis.

Here she works up a perspiration—a prosaic but valuable part of the physical training of a girl who must combat the damaging effect of cocktails and late parties.

At 11:30 there is a quick dash to the bathing beach. The society daughter may bathe at her own private beach, or at the beach belonging to one of her friends lucky enough to have ocean front property.

But she is more likely to go to the Breakers beach—that important bit of sand near the site of the now demolished Breakers hotel. Here she meets all her friends—everybody worth greeting is there, basking in the warm sunshine, drowsing under beach umbrellas, playing medicine ball on the beach, frolicking with the floating mattresses, and shouting with glee as the great breakers pound in.

A swim—a half dozen cigarets—a few nips at the flask buried, like Capt. Kidd's treasure, under sand. Then a quick change in the bathhouse and off for lunch. Or, if our young woman has come to the beach in her bathing suit—which is permissible at Palm Beach, but not at northern resorts frequented by the great unwashed—she dons a bathrobe and is driven home.

Luncheon at Everglades.

There is a quick change to a luncheon costume—something crepy with a jabot or frills on the skirt. Then lunch at the Everglades club—on the shores of Lake Worth under the pecky cypress ceiling that the club members rave about.

Here are dates made for the evening or for future evenings. An important part of the day—that Everglades club luncheon.

In the afternoon—what is left of it—there may be a little golf. This ends in time for cocktail parties at the homes of friends. An honest to goodness society girl of breeding and training should be able to kill half a dozen of these concoctions without raising her voice or falling over the chairs.

Then—heavens—the Cocoanut Grove. This may involve another change of costume. No one in her right mind would miss this tea and dance place on the grounds of the Royal Poinciana hotel. Occasionally, it is true, one goes to the Orange Grove at the Everglades club. But the Cocoanut Grove is gayer—one must not miss it often.

This grove of cocoanut trees on the shores of Lake Worth, with the setting sun showing dull red on the western side, is a place of magic. Occasional recourse to the plainly labeled bottles standing about coupled with the music of Broadway Jones' orchestra produce in any breast—social register or otherwise—a conviction that all is well with the world. There are tea and cocoanut cake, too.

At seven, lights out. Home to dinner—or if not home for dinner, our young woman at least goes there to dress for the dinner that she will attend somewhere else.

Dancing Under the Stars.

After dinner comes the most divine part of the day. Dancing—music—dancing under the brilliant stars of a Florida night, if one visits the Everglades club—and that is the favorite place to go.

It may be a party at some mansion where the boom of the ocean accompanies the saxophones—where one can look from the door over the waves dancing in the moonlight. You may well deduce that this pleasure is prolonged as late as possible.

Ham and eggs—then home before dawn, if one is particularly strong-minded. There are many who will argue with you when you say that our typical party goer arises at nine the next morning.

"At best," they tell you, and get quite excited in the argument, "at best your society girl gets only five hours for sleep. She could not last on that allowance."

But she does—with the aid of daily exercises in the fragrant outdoors and exhilarating swims in the salt surf. Of course, she occasionally takes a rest cure when it is all over.

Do you wonder that Mrs. Henderson is praised for going into training before a Palm Beach season. We predict others will follow her novel example

Admitting the Public.

The public, or that limited part of it that is numbered among the subscribers of the Schola Cantorum, had the privilege last Tuesday of viewing the interior of Mrs. Charles B. Alexander's house at 58th street and 5th avenue.

Mrs. Alexander has often been declared society's leader—if the variegated New York society of this day and age can be said to have a first lady. She is a cousin of the picturesque Aimee Crocker Gouraud, who recently visited this country with her latest husband, the distinguished looking Prince Galitzine. Mrs. Alexander is not in the habit of admitting the relationship, however. For Princess Galitzine has lived her life in her own way, contriving to get much fun out of her vast fortune, but incidentally getting herself much talked and written about.

In view of this aloofness, the great lady's willingness to open her home for a lecture musicale occasioned much remark in New York. And the music fans who attended are still talking about what they saw.

The house obviously was built for entertaining—in a day when hostesses would not have dreamed of regaling their guests in a hotel ballroom or public restaurant, as is customary today.

The first object that strikes the eye on entering is the large painting of Mrs. Alexander by Sargeant. Her titian hair is the focal point of this picture—hair which, by the way, is still as glowing as when Mrs. Alexander sat for the artist, many years ago.

Priceless tapestries embellish this portion of the house. A number of reception rooms, virtually useless except for the accommodation of a great number of guests, give an unusually spacious appearance to the first floor.

The dining room, too, is there—a dining room which has seen many notable guests. It is almost overpowering, with its exceedingly ornate paneled walls and its enormous fireplace, adorned with wrought iron.

The vast wealth of which this mansion is only a feeble expression was accumulated in California during the gold rush. Mrs. Alexander's father, Charles Crocker, left his daughter a paltry $20,000,000 which came out of the earth to crown the pioneer efforts of a man who happened to be lucky where thousands failed.

Later the daughter of the burly forty-niner inherited an additional $15,000,000 from her brother. Despite her staggering wealth, Mrs. Alexander frequently recalls the early struggles of her parents and apparently is not ashamed of her descent from poverty.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

At the invitation of the new president and the board of directors the club expert had been quietly studying the ways and methods of the Oldtown Woman's club. She had given an informal report and the board members were discussing her findings.

"You spoke at one time of 'irregular meetings,'" said the secretary. "Will you please go more into detail?"

"In looking over your minutes I find after you had adjourned your last annual meeting, sine die, you reconvened and took action on a matter that had been overlooked at the regular meeting. You can readily see that if such proceedings were allowed the friends of a measure that failed could agree to linger after adjournment, reconvene, and reverse previous action."

"That was before my time," the new president remarked with a virtuous smile.

"Practically the same thing happened last month when you adjourned your business meeting before the program, and then, because of a chairman who came late, went into session again with those who remained afterward and took action on a recommendation in the report."

"O!" exclaimed the new president, her virtuous smile vanished.

"Also, at a social meeting held month before last," continued the club expert, "you voted to donate $25 to a cause after a talk by an eloquent speaker. Club business can be legally done only in a meeting or an adjourned meeting called for that purpose. Your donation should have been ratified at your next formal meeting. Probably each case I have cited would have met the approval of the membership as a whole, but if such hadn't been the case difficulties could easily have resulted."

"Things like that do start trouble, although innocently done," reflected the new president. "We have been fortunate to escape it, and I'm sure that from now on we'll let the forgotten matters and the late chairman and the donations wait until the proper time for action."

NOTICE TO EVERY SALESMAN IN CHICAGO.

[Salesmen's big mass meeting Tuesday evening, 8 o'clock, December 8. Every salesman in Chicago invited. Auditorium, 11th floor, Lake View Bldg., 116 S. Michigan-av.]

SPECIALTY SALESMEN, TRAVELING SALESMEN,
RETAIL SALESMEN,
BOND SALESMEN,
REAL ESTATE SALESMEN, EXPERIENCED SALESMEN,
and men who would like to get into the salesmanship field. The biggest sales opportunity ever offered in Chicago!

Here is a message of truth—of facts—of big earnings of men who have recently joined in a campaign of the fastest selling proposition that has ever been put over in Chicago, backed by a multi-millionaire, a man whose name is known from coast to coast, a real sportsman. Proposition offered is one that comes only about every 10 or 15 years. You men now selling Chicago real estate, you fellows who are selling bonds, books, stocks, merchandise, and you traveling men who are out on the road week in and week out, I want you to heed this advice and then put yourself in line to get the full facts. Any average, every day, ordinary salesman should make $250 a week, and the live wires should make better than $1,000 a week. Figure this on the year and see what kind of an income you will have. We work 12 months in the year, and in 4½ months last winter we paid out more than $1,000,000 in commissions to our salesmen.

YOU SALESMEN!

Get off the dead propositions—get off the slow going, hard grind selling field that breaks your heart and leaves you discouraged all the time. Go with the live wire man who spends millions—the man who pays out more money to his sales force than any other man in America. Go with the man who is famous for making his associates and sales people rich. Go with the man who is a prince to work for. Go with the man who makes you feel that you own the business with him—who has your interest at heart. Make every day a pay day.

HUNDREDS OF LIVE
LEADS GUARANTEED.
SURE SALES.
BIG COMMISSIONS.

You can go over the top in this campaign easier and quicker than in any other selling proposition in America. You don't have to take my word for it. Come and investigate. I'll give you an opportunity to make $10,000 cash and make it quickly behind one of the biggest advertising campaigns ever put over in Chicago. There is room in my sales organization for 1,000 men, and plenty of money for all. Every salesman in Chicago should attend my big mass-meeting next Tuesday evening, 8 o'clock.

DON'T FORGET,

The big massmeeting will be held Tuesday evening, December 8, at 8:00 o'clock, Auditorium, 11th floor, 116 S. Michigan-av. Every salesman in Chicago invited.

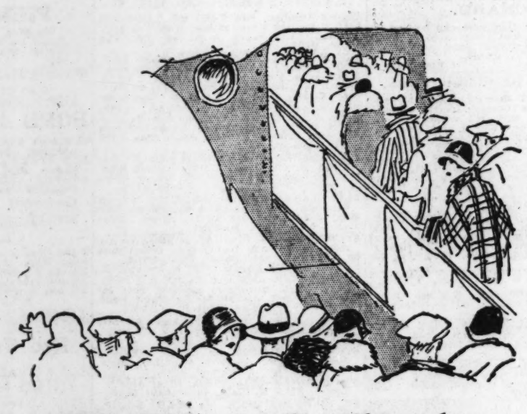
THE TALK OF THE TOWN

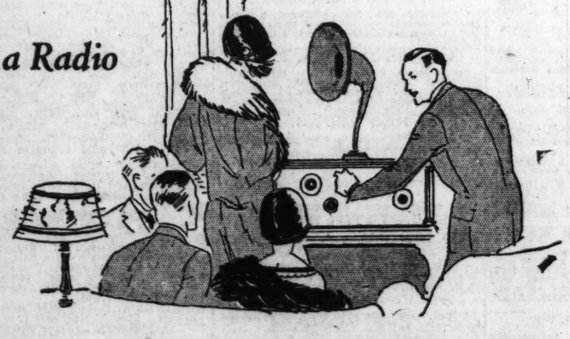


The Warrens Go Abroad—

Off to the Bay of Naples and the Plaza of St. Mark's they are gone on their annual pilgrimage to Europe. The only trouble is—so many things have to be left behind. But they found a way out of the difficulty by subletting their apartment to responsible people, yes, and they sold their car, also through a Tribune Want Ad.

The Hendersons Are—

happy now. The vacant corner in their little apartment has been filled by a Cogswell chair, a reading lamp and a smoking stand. It was a pleasant surprise, for the newly weds felt that it would be months and months and a long time before they could have bought the furniture any other way than through a Want Ad.



Jack and Mary Have a Radio

Voices out of the night and music from the stars, jazz from W-G-N and highly instructive whatnots from far and near—it was all theirs for the measly price of a 5 tube set. But oh, Bebe, the dance music. What price entertainment!

WHAT others have done you, too, can accomplish through Tribune Want Ads.

The last ten pages of your Daily Tribune and the last twenty-five pages of your Sunday Tribune are not, by any means the least important part of the paper to you. In fact, to many men The Tribune's Want Ad pages are the most important part of the paper they have ever read. For it was a Tribune Want Ad that gave them a clew to the job out of which they built a substantial success. Or it may be that here they found a small business, a home they could afford to buy, or a slightly used car at a fraction of its worth.

Whoever you are who read this, you cannot afford to skip the Want Ad Section. Every day and every Sunday there are Want Ad offers that would interest you. The usefulness of this section is immense. No wonder it is "The Talk of the Town."

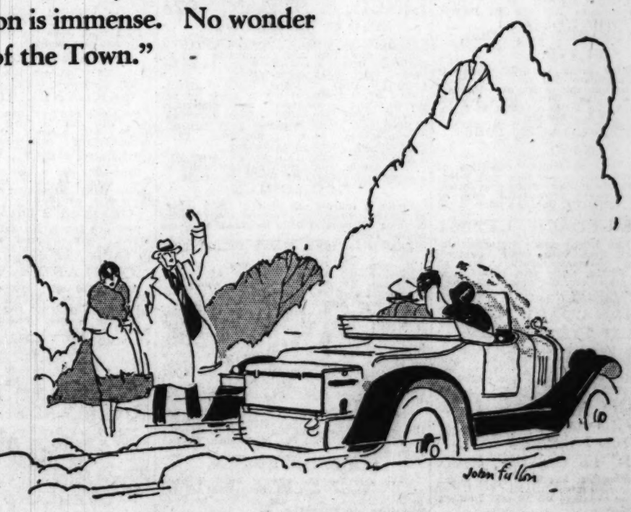
The Smith Home Is Sold

Only three years ago a happy family moved into the fine looking residence we have reproduced above. They had built it to last a lifetime, but . . . an unexpected loss . . . the demands of growing youngsters made less pretentious quarters necessary. But they were fortunate. They turned their home into ready money quickly and the ever increasing value ot real estate enabled them to realize a profit on the sale. Their method was simple (but sagacious)—they used a Tribune Want Ad.

Buddie Found a Pal

You know Buddie—you probably know several Buddies . . . well-cared-for youngsters but lonesome! — always looking vainly for "someone" to play with. This "Buddie's" dad knew what was wrong (he was blessed with an imagination), moreover he was a smart business man, and he knew that a Tribune Want Ad would help him.

One little Tribune Want Ad found Buddie just the pal he wanted (look to the right) and you should see the happy pair.



Taxi, Sir!

Our hero laughs at taxis now, but time was when they brought fear to his heart, i. e. after taking his girl to a show and to dinner . . . the funds getting pretty low. But youth will not be leashed and someone told our hero that a Tribune Want Ad would find him a used car to solve his trouble, and make him feel a man of affairs.

He took the advice, has the car—and the girl!

Mr. Meekes' Bombshell

by E. Phillips Oppenheim

"You've forgotten me altogether, Mr. Haselton!" Cynthia exclaimed.

In Which the Draper of Melhampton Stirs a Puzzling Question of Social Distinction by Seeking Admittance to the Select Tennis Club

IT WAS obvious, from the moment that Mr. Haselton, the vicar, Dr. Spendlove, and Mr. Tidd, the bank manager, walked together to a distant part of the courts and held converse there, that something had happened. It was not until later in the afternoon, however, that the news spread as to the exact nature of the bombshell which had been exploded amongst the committee of the Melhampton Lawn Tennis club. Mr. Meekes, the draper of High street, had written a polite letter to the secretary, intimating his desire and the desire of his family to join the club.

The position, as Mr. Tidd, the secretary of the club, aptly remarked to Mrs. Spendlove, in the course of the subsequent discussion, bristled with difficulties. There was nothing whatever against Mr. Meekes. As the custodian of his financial reputation, Mr. Tidd felt bound to be emphatic on that point. He was a pushing, well behaved and successful little man, who had brought up a family of two daughters and one son in the best possible manner, and who had just signalized the advance in his fortunes by taking the Manor house, a pleasant residence some time ago vacated by the declining family of Pleydells. The girls were just home from boarding school, and it was in their interests, no doubt, that Mr. Meekes had taken the momentous course of writing to the committee of the tennis club.

There was nothing against the Misses Meekes. They were good looking, better dressed than any other young women in the place, they had been expensively educated, and though there were rumors of occasional cigaret smoking and a somewhat lavish use of her vanity case by Miss Ella, it could not be argued that there was anything in their personalities which made them undesirable companions for the remainder of the youth of Melhampton.

But facts were facts—this elucidating phrase also emanated from Mr. Tidd—and hitherto the counter had been the dividing line in the election of members to the club. If Mr. Meekes was eligible, so also was Mr. Scroggins, the butcher, Mr. Giles, the grocer, and so on.

"It's a stupid and annoying business," the doctor declared, a little pettishly. "If we three men comprised the committee of the club, I think we should soon deal with the matter; but, of course, when it comes to the vote, there is a majority of ladies associated with us, and one knows, before breathing a word to them, exactly what their attitude will be."

The vicar caressed his rather long brown mustache. He was a ruddy complexioned, stalwart divine, who, one learned, always with a certain feeling of surprise, was connected with one of the great families of the county.

"It would be perhaps advisable," he remarked, "if some one could see Mr. Meekes and induce him, under the circumstances, to withdraw his letter."

"So long as the task does not devolve upon me," Mr. Tidd interposed hastily, "I quite approve. My business connections with Mr. Meekes complicate the matter immensely, so far as I am concerned."

"Quite so," Dr. Spendlove mused. "We mustn't get Tidd into trouble. At the same time, I have to remember that Meekes is a valuable patient of mine. We all must live, you know."

"It is borne in upon me," the vicar said thoughtfully, "that Mr. Meekes has promised a handsome donation to the organ fund, and, with the exception of the squire, is our largest contributor to the expenses of the church. His last Easter offering," he added, with a little cough, "with its—er—personal note, was a deeply gratifying one."

IT was Dr. Spendlove who first saw light.

"Look here," he pointed out, "we three men are all agreed. We'd let the Meekes family in like a shot, so far as we are concerned. If the women want to keep them out, they must take the brunt of it. I propose that Mr. Meekes' letter comes up before the committee in the ordinary way, that we three vote for his election, and that, if he is turned down, the women who do it must take the blame. We can all," he added, with a sly wink at Mr. Tidd, "take an opportunity of explaining our own share in the matter."

Whereupon the discussion was abandoned and the business of the afternoon, which was tennis and tea, proceeded with.

When the matter was informally mentioned amongst the ladies, the worst prognostications of the three men were more than verified. Mrs. Spendlove, who had two plain but marriageable daughters, was horrified at the idea. Miss Tichbourne, an old maid, niece of a baronet and sister of a solicitor in Exeter, considered that Mr. Tidd should have at once torn up Mr. Meekes' letter without further reference to the subject. Miss Holywell had very little to say, but hoped that every woman there present who was upon the committee knew how to do her duty. The vicar's wife, who was an earnest Christian, declared she had never blackballed anybody and never would, but she should certainly withdraw her name from the list of ladies willing to give tea once a season if Mr. Meekes and his family should be elected. Mrs. Pleydell, who was the fifth lady upon the committee, said grimly that there was not the slightest fear of that.

"And there you are, you see," Dr. Spendlove remarked, as he and Mr. Tidd strolled out of the pavilion to recommence their pastime. "Five women on the committee and us three men. Mrs. Haselton won't vote, but the other four are only itching to get their fingers on the little black ball. Seems to me Mr. Meekes has just about as much chance of getting in here as into the kingdom of heaven."

"And the people who are keeping him out," his companion remarked a little dolefully, "are just the people who've nothing to gain or lose either way. . . . Here comes her ladyship. I wonder what she'll have to say about it."

Lady Stourton, chief patroness of the club and wife of the squire, who made a point of looking in for a short time on most of the tennis afternoons, shook hands pleasantly with Mr. Tidd, who, as secretary, always went forward to receive her, and shrieked with laughter when she heard of the dilemma into which Mr. Meekes' letter had thrown the members of the club.

"Why, my dears," she exclaimed, as she sat in the center of a little group of the ladies, "I think it's the funniest thing I ever knew! To see that dapper little man chasing a tennis ball in new white flannels and new shoes, and smiling that irresistible smile of his after he'd hit it, would be simply priceless. As a matter of fact, I rather like Mr. Meekes. I should elect him, by all means."

It was apparent to the feminine community of the club that their patroness was not taking this matter seriously.

"It is all very well for you, Lady Stourton," Miss Tichbourne pointed out. "You have your own friends outside Melhampton, and you only look in and see us now and then out of kindness. This is our one summer rendezvous, where we meet one another on familiar terms, make up a rubber of bridge, and keep in touch with what's going on. You don't realize what the intrusion of these people would mean. Mrs. Meekes is, to all appearance, a vulgar person, and although I wish to say nothing against them, the girls do not seem to be of the class with whom Mrs. Spendlove, for instance, would like her own daughters to associate. As for Mr. Meekes, are we to be asked to shake hands in the afternoon with a man from whom we buy calico in the morning?"

"O, I don't know!" her ladyship observed, storing up mental notes of the discussion for the amusement of her lord and master later on. "These are terribly radical times, you know."

"There is radicalism—and bolshevism," Miss Tichbourne declared awesomely.

THE reverse side of the picture was presented when Mr. Meekes, at the family breakfast table, received an official communication from the Melhampton Lawn Tennis club which, after a hurried reading, he would have thrust under his plate but for the notice of his family.

"Come on, dad, out with it!" Ella, his elder daughter exclaimed. "I saw the 'M. T. C.' on the back of the envelop. Don't they want us?"

"Three to one we're pilled," Cynthia, her sister, remarked, with her mouth full of toast and butter and marmalade.

Mr. Meekes adjusted his pince nez and read the letter without comment:

Dear Mr. Meekes:

I have laid your letter before the committee of the Melhampton Lawn Tennis club, who have duly considered the matter therein referred to. They desire me to say, however, with much regret, that our numbers are at present quite full. Should any vacancy occur, they will, without doubt, let you know. Faithfully yours,

HENRY TIDD, Secretary.

"Well, if that isn't too bad!" Mrs. Meekes declared, with a sigh of disappointment. "I just did fancy myself sitting in those seats in front of the pavilion, along of Mrs. Spendlove and Mrs. Haselton.

"Don't you worry, mummy," Ella enjoined, patting her mother on the shoulder, as she brought her replenished plate from the sideboard. "I rather fancy we ought to be able to get some fun out of this. What do you say, Cynthia?"

"Fun?" their father observed doubtfully.

"Heaps of it, dad," she continued. "All that you've got to do is to tell Haines to get another man and put the court into really good condition. Next week Jack Spendlove is coming down for his holidays and bringing a Mr. Bruce with him—you know, Cynthia, the young man you danced with. I shouldn't be a bit surprised if they didn't prefer our court to the club's—some of the time, at any rate."

Cynthia's blue eyes gleamed.

"What a rag!" she exclaimed. "Of course, we'll ask the Spendlove girls and Maggie Haselton to come and play, and they won't be able to because of this. Do you know, dad, I believe they'll find before the end of the season that the tennis club isn't quite so crowded as they feared."

Mr. Meekes, who was a quiet man, said little. As he kissed his daughters good-by, however, before going into the garden to interview Haines, the gardener, he alluded once more to the vexed subject.

"Any one you girls like to ask here for tennis," he said, "will be very welcome, and I think we can give them something a little better than the club weak tea. I have an idea of my own, too. However, we'll see how that works out."

The days when Mr. Meekes, in the phraseology of Miss Tichbourne, measured out calico behind the counter, were past. The greater part of his mornings was now spent in a plainly furnished, businesslike office, approached by a separate entrance from the street, and disconnected so far as possible from what Mr. Meekes was pleased to call his retail establishment. Into this office, about a week later, was shown the Reverend Stanley Haselton. Mr. Meekes, who was dictating letters to a stenographer, nodded pleasantly but in an abstracted manner, and waved his visitor to a seat.

"One moment," he begged, and continued his task for at least five minutes. He then dismissed the stenographer, swung round in his chair and faced his visitor.

"Sorry to keep you, Mr. Haselton," he apologized. "The morning is always my busiest time, you know. What can I do for you?"

Mr. Haselton was not his usual calm self. He appeared to have been hurrying, for there were little beads of perspiration upon his forehead. An alarmist might have gathered from his manner that some strange and new terror was threatening the ancient township of Melhampton.

"I came to see you, Mr. Meekes," he began, "about the permission which you are said to have granted to some so-called Revivalists to encamp and hold meetings on Feldon's meadow."

Mr. Meekes nodded.

"Queer lot they seem, too," he remarked benignly. "Young fellow named Glosson seems to be at the head of it—the Reverend Peter Glosson. Have you called on him yet?"

"Have I what?" the vicar gasped.

"Called on him—been to see him?" Mr. Meekes replied. "Quite an establishment, his caravan—little study, with any quantity of books—charming young woman, too, his wife."

Mr. Haselton, being debarred from strong language, blew his nose vigorously.

"As a churchman, Mr. Meekes," he said, "I fear you do not quite appreciate the position."

"As my vicar, then," the other rejoined, "explain it to me."

MR. HASELTON prepared for action. He drew his chair a little closer to the table, clenched his fists, and punctuated his remarks with manual exercises.

"These people," he expounded—"Little Brethren, I believe they call themselves—are a sect outside any of the religious denominations. They are not even dissenters. They admit they are free thinkers. Their coming into the midst of our peaceful and reputable community is nothing less than a catastrophe. They must be got rid of, and got rid of at once."

"Dear me!" Mr. Meekes exclaimed. "Are they likely to do any harm?"

"Harm?" his caller repeated, in a tone of hurt amazement. "They are outside the church, Mr. Meekes. They have no doctrines, no recognized form of worship. They advocate the playing of games on Sunday. They propose to have out of door services, advertised by small handbills and accompanied by strident music. Last night they held what they are pleased to call a musical thanksgiving service. We were compelled to vacate the tennis courts an hour before our usual time, to escape from the uproar."

Mr. Meekes removed his spectacles, and bent a little forward whilst engaged in the task of polishing them.

"That seems a pity," he murmured under his breath.

"I have called upon you, Mr. Meekes," the vicar continued, with dignity, "to beg you to at once rescind your permission to these people to encamp upon the meadow. Their presence here is wholly undesired and unwelcome in Melhampton, besides being in some respects an insult to the church, which I am proud to think, notwithstanding the various dissenting conventicles, has succeeded in becoming the center of all local religious sentiment."

Mr. Meekes coughed.

"I am bound to confess, vicar," he said, "that I scarcely see eye to eye with you in this matter. I was in the meadow last night, and I listened to the man Glosson's address. Thoroughly good stuff, I called it, although not in the least doctrinal. His wife talked to the girls who were there, too, very sensibly."

"Are you not of opinion, Mr. Meekes," the vicar demanded, "that such spiritual guidance as the inhabitants of Melhampton require, can be obtained by them at their parish church at the hands of their appointed pastor?"

Mr. Meekes scratched his chin.

"As a matter of fact," he admitted, "there were a good many in the meadow last night whom I have never seen in church. That, to my mind, is where some of these outside religious forces may do good. They may reach the people whom the church does not attract. There is, after all, a species of dogmatism about any established religion which tends to keep it within narrow lines."

"I am distressed to hear such sentiments from you, Mr. Meekes," the vicar pronounced, severely. "You cannot possibly believe, in your heart, that the visit of these people is for the good of Melhampton."

"Why not?" Mr. Meekes queried. "Melhampton is just the sort of place where a certain leaven of narrow mindedness is apt to creep in unless contact with the outside world is kept and established. We are all too much inclined to move in a groove, vicar, in our own little cycle, as it were. We are not quite so broad minded as we might be. Our little personal prejudices become large and important things."

"The man Glosson is a Socialist!" the vicar exclaimed.

Mr. Meekes nodded.

"There was a Greater before him," he said, "and after all, tolerant and broad minded socialism is perhaps better for the people than a blind staggering along the narrow ways of class prejudices."

The vicar rose to his feet.

"I am disappointed in my visit, Mr. Meekes," he declared stiffly.

"I am sorry," was the equable reply, "but so far as these people are concerned, unless they make themselves more objectionable than they have done yet, I feel that I am scarcely justified in disturbing them. Religious sentiment which receives fuel from only one direction is apt to lose vitality. I have come to that conclusion during the last few weeks. I have decided that we must all spread ourselves more, as it were. For that reason, I am thinking of distributing the sum that I give away annually to charity and the support of religion in a broader fashion."

The vicar picked up his hat.

"I am obliged for the hint, Mr. Meekes," he said, as he took his leave.

ON his way back to the vicarage, Mr. Haselton found himself confronted by two charming young girls of most attractive appearance. For a moment, as he stood hat in hand, he was a little at a loss.

"You've forgotten us altogether, Mr. Haselton!" Cynthia exclaimed.

"You don't even remember me!" Ella put in reprovingly.

"Miss Ella Meekes, of course," the vicar declared, "and Miss Cynthia. My dear young ladies, you have grown so much. You must forgive my momentary aberration."

"Of course!" Cynthia cooed. "And besides, we never came home at all for last Christmas holidays. We went straight to Switzerland, you know. And the summer before, you were away on your vacation the few weeks that we were here, so we really haven't met for quite a long time, have we?"

"We couldn't help stopping you," Ella confided, "because we thought we saw you coming out of dad's office. Do tell us, have you been to see him about those dreadful Revivalists?"

The word was balm to Mr. Haselton. He assented with grave dignity.

"I have just paid a visit of expostulation to your father," he announced, "I regret to say without effect."

"Dad is so obstinate sometimes," Cynthia sighed.

"You've no idea how trying he can be," Ella echoed.

"The noise those people make is awful," Cynthia declared.

"As though any one wanted rowdiness like that when we have such a beautiful parish church!" Ella murmured.

The vicar beamed upon them both.

"I am very glad to find, young ladies," he said, "that you, at any rate, are better advised than your father in this unfortunate matter. I trust that you will use your influence with him in the home circle."

"We'll do what we can," Cynthia promised hopefully.

"Dad's liver is a little out of order," Ella explained.

"Makes him so crotchety," her sister confided. "We'll get round him the first day he feels himself again."

Mr. Haselton smiled.

"It is very pleasant, young ladies," he acknowledged, "to renew our acquaintance in so satisfactory a fashion."

"I hope Mrs. Haselton is quite well?" Ella inquired politely. "We met Aubrey once or twice in town."

"Indeed?" the vicar replied with interest, for Aubrey was very much his favorite son. "How was he, and if I might ask the question, where did you come across him?"

"He came to the Glendons', where we have been staying, once or twice for tennis," Cynthia told him.

"The Glendons?" the vicar repeated, with a surprise which he was not capable of concealing. "Lady Glendon's?"

"Well?" Mrs. Haselton asked him, on his return.

"Meekes has gone off his head," was the doleful reply. "He declines to interfere."

"Incredible!" the vicaress gasped.

"On my way back," her husband continued, "I received a considerable surprise. I encountered the two Misses Meekes—most charming and attractive young women."

"Hm!" Mrs. Haselton ejaculated.

"I am quite sure Cynthia darkens her eyebrows," Maggie murmured from the background.

"My dear," the vicar remonstrated severely, "I beg that you will not make such uncharitable aspersions. The young ladies are well conducted and well mannered. Furthermore, you may be surprised to hear that they have been staying with Lady Glendon at Woking, and have met Aubrey there several times."

"What on earth are we coming to!" Mrs. Haselton groaned.

"I hope Aubrey will forget them when he comes down here," Maggie uttered spitefully.

The glimmerings of an unwelcome light shone in upon Mr. Haselton's confused brain. He feared to trust himself to speech. He left the room, closing the door quietly behind him.

THE following Thursday afternoon was to have been a noteworthy one in the annals of the Melhampton Lawn Tennis club. It was Mrs. Haselton's turn to provide tea, and although that lady was not of an extravagant turn of mind, she usually felt it incumbent upon her to supplement the customary fare of bread and butter and currant bun by some little trifles from London which might indicate connections and tastes not entirely local. The fact that four young men were to be present, too, imparted a distinct fillip to the proceedings, so far as the two Miss Spendloves, Miss Tichbourne's niece from Exeter, and Maggie Haselton were concerned.

The four young men were all, in their way, desirables. There was Aubrey Haselton, who had only left college two years but was already doing well in a solicitor's office in London; his friend, Philip Marston, a junior partner in the firm to which Aubrey was articled; Jack Spendlove, the doctor's son, who was working at a hospital in London; and his friend, Donovan Bruce, a college acquaintance, whose father was an M. P. and a wealthy north of England man. No wonder the occasion was one for which white skirts were earnestly inspected, new jumpers surreptitiously brought out, and the usual somewhat unbecoming headgear of the more athletic young women exchanged for garden party hats.

The weather was favorably disposed towards the occasion. The sun shone, but a pleasant west wind tempered the extreme heat. The Revivalists for once were having a quiet afternoon, the Rev. Peter Glosson being away on his motor bicycle, searching for his next camping ground. Everything, Mr. Tidd thought, as he walked over the courts with the ground man, examined the marking, and tested the height of the nets, pointed to a delightful afternoon. Only the vicar, who was amongst the earliest arrivals, seemed a little anxious and distrait. He drew Mr. Tidd on one side and engaged him for a few minutes in private conversation.

"Mr. Tidd," he acknowledged, "I have had some qualms in my mind with respect to our decision not to admit Mr. Meekes and his family into the tennis club."

"The decision of the committee of the tennis club, if you please," Mr. Tidd corrected. "I should not like to associate myself personally with the matter."

Mr. Haselton accepted the correction.

"I came across the two daughters the other day," he continued. "I am bound to admit I found them most attractive and well brought up young women. Their social connections, too, owing to their father's liberality in the matter of education, seem to be excellent."

"Personally," Mr. Tidd said, "it would give me great pleasure to meet Mr. Meekes in a social way. I think in a small community like ours it is as well to unbend. Unfortunately, Vicar, as you very well know, the trouble is with the ladies."

Mr. Haselton sighed.

"I am afraid," he confided, "that Mr. Meekes takes the matter seriously. He was absent from church last Sunday, although I was glad to see that his daughters were present. When I paid my visit of protest with regard to his permission to these Revivalists to encamp on Feldon's meadow, I was at once aware that his manner had altogether changed. He spoke with sympathy of a wider and more tolerant religion. He ignored my request to send these terrible people about their business, and he gave me plainly to understand that a portion of the money he had been accustomed to give towards the church would probably be diverted towards other purposes. The church cannot well spare such supporters as Mr. Meekes."

Mr. Tidd's manner betrayed some signs of uneasiness. He had just remembered Mr. Meekes' balance, and the rumors that a rival banking establishment was about to open premises in Melhampton.

"It would be a disaster for Melhampton," he acknowledged, "if Mr. Meekes were to practically resent the attitude of the club. The unfortunate part of the matter, too, so far as I am concerned," he added, a little dolefully, "is that as secretary I was compelled to sign the letter."

"We must at all costs," the vicar declared, "preserve our dignity. If Mr. Meekes should choose to forget that he is an official of the church and support these undesirable Revivalists, if he should move his banking account——"

"Don't!" Mr. Tidd groaned.

"And call in Dr. Smith from Oakleigh," the vicar continued, "then there would be nothing for it but for us to maintain our present attitude unflinchingly. Under other circumstances, however, I suggest, Mr. Tidd, that you have a little conversation with our lady members of the committee and endeavor to induce them to mollify their attitude. You can put it that I, in my position here, feel that to show kindness to everybody should be one of my chief duties. We should hurt no one's feelings. The young ladies are unexceptionable. Mr. Meekes himself, during the last few years, has gained a great deal through association with those who chance to hold a different social position. Mrs. Meekes is a worthy soul. We lose nothing, Mr. Tidd, by being kind to those who have not the same—er—social status as ourselves. I make myself clear, I trust?"

"Certainly," was the gloomy reply. "You will remember, will you not, that Mrs. Haselton was an unqualified opponent of Mr. Meekes' election?"

The vicar sighed.

"My own household, I admit," he said, "is obdurate in the matter. I shall do my best, however, Mr. Tidd. I shall certainly do my best."

SOON after this the tragedy of the afternoon began to take shape. The elders, with a view to the imminent arrival of the young men, had arranged a set amongst themselves. The young ladies were dotted about in picturesque attitudes or showing a pleasant domestic interest in the preparation of the tea. Every now and then surreptitious glances were directed towards the wood door in the wall, which remained obstinately closed. Mrs. Haselton summoned her husband to her side.

"Surely Aubrey and Mr. Marston were ready to start when we left?" she inquired. "What can have become of them?"

"I'm sure I don't know, my dear," Mr. Haselton replied, in a puzzled tone.

"They left before us," Maggie intervened. "I saw them go down the street and turn into the tobacconist's shop."

Mrs. Spendlove strolled up to them.

"Where on earth are our young men?" she asked. "Jack and Mr. Bruce started before we did."

The door in the wall was pushed open and a small boy, the youngest of the Spendlove family, entered, carrying a racquet in his hand almost as big as himself. He hurried up with all the eager joy of a harbinger of woe.

"Mummy," he cried out as soon as he reached the group, "do you know where Jack and Mr. Bruce are?"

"Where?" Mrs. Spendlove gasped.

The small boy dallied with his triumph.

"There's Aubrey Haselton and the gentleman he brought with him from London, too," he declared. "They're playing tennis with Cynthia and Ella Meekes on Mr. Meekes' lawn. I saw them through the hedge."

There was a dead silence for several moments. The blow was received in different fashion by the various members of the little group. Mrs. Haselton strode away towards the court where her husband was engaged, displaying in her gait and the set lines of her face all the noblest attributes of the Roman matron. Mrs. Spendlove went off to confide in Miss Tichbourne, who was attending to the irregularities of one of the tea urns. The eldest Miss Spendlove, in whom nature had implanted a certain sense of humor, rose to her feet with a little laugh, which was not, however, altogether natural.

"Come on, girls," she exclaimed, "let's play a set quickly. I'm tired of sitting here like an idiot."

The afternoon was a failure. The defection of the young men was severely commented upon by everyone, but it was noticeable that Mr. Haselton, Mr. Tidd, and Dr. Spendlove had very little to say about the matter. Tea was served at the usual hour, but although Mr. Tidd exerted himself to cheer the drooping spirits of the community, it was disposed of for the greater part in gloomy silence. Towards six o'clock, however, a welcome surprise befell. The door in the wall was opened and the four young men appeared. They were apparently in the highest spirits and began to strip for action at once. In reply to an invitation to tea, tendered in tones of guarded hospitality, they all frankly admitted they had partaken of the meal.

"We've been having a few sets up with Cynthia and Ella Meekes," Aubrey Haselton announced. "Lily Glendon is staying there."

"It would have been better," Mrs. Haselton said icily, "if you had told us of your intention."

"As a matter of fact," Jack Spendlove explained, "we only went up to call for them. We hadn't the slightest idea but that they'd be coming here for tennis. When they told us that they didn't belong, we stayed and had a few sets with them. Jolly good lawn, old Meekes'."

"Ripping hock cup," Mr. Bruce remarked appreciatively.

"Come on, let's make up a couple of sets," Aubrey Haselton suggested. "You and my sister, Bruce, and Nora Spendlove and I. Then you have just four left. How will that do? By the bye, dad," he added, turning round to his father, "why on earth don't the Meekes belong here?"

"Didn't they tell you?" Mr. Haselton inquired.

"No, they none of them said a word," the young man replied. "Said the club was very nice and they would have to see about it, or something of that sort."

"Did Meekes tell you that himself?" Mr. Tidd persisted.

"Yes. Awfully decent chap he is," Aubrey went on as he rolled up his sleeves. "He turned us out when we mentioned that it was the tennis afternoon here—wouldn't let us play even another set. . . . Come on."

DR. SPENDLOVE, Mr. Haselton, and Mr. Tidd were left standing together. The latter cleared his throat.

"I should feel inclined to describe Mr. Meekes as a sportsman," he observed.

The doctor assented heartily.

"Look here," he said, "we've been led by the nose by the women in this matter. I tell you frankly I should feel quite uncomfortable if I had to tell Jack that in a small neighborhood like this we'd turned the Meekes down. Let's call a committee meeting."

The thing was done, and Mr. Haselton spoke urbane words. Mrs. Pleydell and Miss Tichbourne remained obdurate. Miss Holywell was half convinced.

"Of course," Mrs. Haselton pointed out dubiously, "we cannot ignore the fact that the two girls have established for themselves some sort of a social position by having visited at the house of Lady Glendon."

"Did Lady Glendon know their father was a draper?" Miss Tichbourne inquired, significantly.

"She not only knew it," Mr. Haselton replied, dropping his final bombshell, "but Miss Glendon is staying in the house at the present moment."

Miss Holywell came to a decision.

"Under the circumstances," she declared, "I withdraw my opposition."

"I think in a small neighborhood like ours," Mrs. Haselton ventured, "one must be more than ever careful not to hurt anyone's feelings."

"Who is Lady Glendon?" Miss Tichbourne demanded, pertinently. "She may be only the wife or widow of a knight."

"Lady Glendon was the daughter of Lord Cronleys, an Irish peer," Mrs. Haselton announced. "She married Sir John Glendon of Glendon place, eleventh baronet."

"I move that the Meekes family be granted a family ticket," Miss Holywell said, speaking slowly and distinctly.

"I second the motion," Mr. Haselton agreed benignly. "Apart from the purely social point of view, I think, as my wife has justly observed, that in a small neighborhood like this we should try to rid ourselves as far as possible of all class prejudices."

"I shall blackball them," Miss Tichbourne pronounced. "I decline to sit down with a draper."

"It takes two blackballs to exclude," Mr. Tidd reminded her, "and I gather that all others present are in favor of Mr. Meekes' election."

"Then I resign from the committee," the lady threatened, rising to her feet.

"Good afternoon, Miss Tichbourne," the vicar said in valedictory fashion.

MR. MEEKES adjusted his pince nez and read out the letter at the breakfast table on the following morning. It was dated from the Melhampton Lawn Tennis club:

Dear Mr. Meekes:

I have much pleasure in informing you that a vacancy has now occurred in the above club, and the committee desire me to say that if you still wish to take up the membership, they will be happy to send you a family ticket on receipt of your cheque for three guineas.

The next social afternoon will be held on Thursday next, when tea will be provided by Mrs. Spendlove. It is hoped that you and your daughters and any guests you may have will be able to be present. Sincerely yours,

HENRY TIDD, Secretary.

"We'll have no trouble about getting our noses into Buckingham palace now!" Cynthia declared triumphantly.

"You'll have to put M. T. C. on your visiting cards, dad!" Ella enjoined with twinkling eyes.

"Well, I never!" Mrs. Meekes exclaimed, in a state of high gratification. "I hope they'll let me give the tea soon. I'll show them something!"

Mr. Meekes called at Feldon's meadow on his way to the town.

"I can't keep you here any later than Saturday, Mr. Glosson," he told the Revivalist.

"Church influence," the latter muttered, bitterly.

"Not in the least," Mr. Meekes replied, as he turned away. "You're trampling down the grass."

SWORDS EAST

by Achmed Abdullah

THE STORY SO FAR:

ELLEN McINTYRE, left an orphan at 21, arrives in Constantinople on the eve of the Young Turks' revolution. Two leaders in the political intrigues of the stormy times fall in love with her. Marquis O'Malley Pasha, a young Irish soldier of fortune, is loyal to the Sultan. The other is Prince Tcherkessky, a Circassian whose brother eloped with O'Malley's mother. Two of O'Malley's friends, Watson Pasha and Yar Ali Bey, are murdered the night before they are to second O'Malley in a duel with Tcherkessky. O'Malley appears alone for the duel. The prince and his two seconds try to kill him, but Ellen, in hiding, saves O'Malley's life by shooting the sword from Tcherkessky's hand.

BIBI FATHMA, a Hindu favorite of the Sultan, is in love with O'Malley and jealous of Ellen. When it seems the murders of Watson Pasha and Yar Ali Bey are about to be traced to him, Tcherkessky enlists her aid. In return she makes him promise he will kidnap Ellen but make it appear that she fled with him of her own will. Bibi tells the prince to bring her a famous emerald which disappeared when Yar Ali Bey was slain. Then she encourages Zado Kaboolian, a tremendously rich banker to whom she owes money.

O'MALLEY convinces the Sultan that Tcherkessky, Kibrizli Pasha, and Col. Oblensky murdered Watson Pasha and Yar Ali Bey. To do so he has to tell of the duel, and the Sultan, enraged that his firman against duels was disobeyed, orders O'Malley away. But the Irishman stands his ground and wins a promise that on the morrow the Sultan will sign death warrants for Tcherkessky and Kibrizli. But after O'Malley leaves, Bibi persuades the Sultan that the real murderer is Zado Kaboolian, and that O'Malley is accusing Tcherkessky merely because of jealousy over Ellen. Enraged, the Sultan cashiers O'Malley from his army, branding him as disloyal.

THAT night Bibi entertains Kaboolian at her house, insisting he bring her an emerald and with it a poem telling why she is like the jewel. While the Sultan hides in the room, Kaboolian arrives with the stone and pours out his love in a poem written by his secretary. Bibi's husband, Shafizullah, drugs Kaboolian's wine and replaces the emerald he brought with the one stolen by Watson Pasha's murderer. The Sultan accepts the stone as proof that Kaboolian was the slayer, and the banker is executed next morning. The execution stirs anew the smoldering fires of revolution. But while Constantinople seethes with plot and counter-plot, the disgraced O'Malley makes ready to attend a fancy dress ball with Ellen. The latter has promised Prince Tcherkessky that she will wear an Afghan costume at the ball.

INSTALLMENT XII.

Two Proposals.

WHEN O'Malley reached the Megatherium-Palace hotel, he discovered he had been preceded by the news, both of his dismissal from the service and of Zado Kaboolian's execution, though nobody saw the connecting link between the two. It was quite typical of the people, these adventurers of many nationalities, that all thought him guilty of whatever deed—they did not know what it was nor cared—might have caused his disgrace, but that not one, on the other hand, condemned him, slighted him, tried to make him feel self-conscious in any way.

On the contrary, while hitherto he had stood apart from them as a man of square, wire-drawn rectitude, and, as the English duchess put it, such "positively preposterous sense of honor," now, believing him to be on their own moral level, they felt drawn towards him. It was as though by some mystic password he had joined their unsavory if amusing mother lodge: had gained entrance to it by strength of his weakness—his degradation.

So they smiled when he entered the lobby. They greeted him cordially and by doing so they showed the worst as well as the best side of their characters.

A large party had just returned to the hotel from an all-night-and-most-of-the-morning baccarat game. It was composed of the English duchess, the Italian countess, the French journalist, a young British attache of embassy, and a Cossack officer. There were also several other foreigners—monocled but unclassified—and foreign women—charmingly gowned but perhaps only too sharply classified.

O'Malley went to the desk, sending his card to Ellen McIntyre. He heard what they were saying.

They hid yawns. They were very tired. They longed for bed and sleep. But they were still coining epigrams and making slurring comments. Restraint would have withered their minds. Silence—illogically—would have echoed through the hollow cavern of their souls, disclosing its very hollowness.

"Good-night!"

"Good morning you mean, old trout!"

"Going to the ball next Saturday?"

"Rather!"

"As what?"

"Don't know yet!"

"Why don't you go as Lady Godiva?"

"Can't! My hair's bobbed!"

"I hear the Marquise de Pontmartin is coming as—O—what the middle classes call an honest woman."

"What a heavenly disguise!"

"Her own husband wouldn't recognize her."

"I suppose everybody'll be there?"

"Except the Turkish officers."

"Why not they?"

"Well—revolution's in the wind—Zado Kaboolian's execution, you know."

"Jolly good riddance. I owed that Armenian blighter a couple of thousand guineas."

"Constantinople is in an uproar, though. Did you notice the mobs in the Fundukli?"

"I did not see, cara mia. I was too busy looking into your eyes."

"I rather fancy Abdul Hamid came a thundering cropper—not that I give a damn about Kaboolian either way."

"The sultan thrives on croppers—as other people thrive on crops."

"He went a trifle too far this time," said the young British attache. The milk of Eton and Oxford was not yet dry on his lips. He still believed in Gladstone's immortal lie; repeated it: "The Unspeakable Turk! My word—we'll see to it that he speaks no more—above a whisper."

"Is Britain going to take a hand in the game?"

"Yes."

"A hand—in the game?" sneered the French journalist. "A hand in the sultan's pocket, more likely. Great Britain has always reminded me of a pious old kleptomaniac dressed in black bombazine."

"And France has always reminded me of an international cocotte selling her kisses to the highest bidder."

Heated words then; British against French; the Cossack officer sicking them on like dogs, until the duchess interrupted saying that these near eastern revolutions—"hardy perennials, what?"

"Not this one. It is going to be what our Yankee friends call the 'real thing.'"

"I do not approve of revolutions," exclaimed a German baroness, who was a nee Miss Levy. "Some day they will spell the end of royalty, or aristocracy."

"Aristocracy? Royalty?" laughed the French journalist who remembered at incongruous moments that he was a republican whose ancestors had fought behind the street barricades of the Paris Commune. "What are they? Financially? Bankrupt! Morally? O—negative! Spiritually? Turgid! Intellectually? Degenerate! And physically? Why—mostly a species with processional noses and recessional chins!"

"At all events," said the Italian countess, "to dance during a revolution? Heavenly! Just as on the eve of the battle of Waterloo. I shall feel positively historic."

"Darling," drawled the duchess, "do you feel as old as all that?"

By this time Ellen McIntyre had joined O'Malley in the lobby.

"The Afghan costume is bully, Pat," she said. "It came quite late last night. I tried it on. It fits me beautifully, and the veil is really stunning. I used to pity Oriental women; used to think the veil was—O—like a chain and ball, a mark of slavery. I realize now how clever Oriental women are. Why—the veil looks coquettish and mysterious. It stimulates the intimacy of flirtations by its outer impersonality."

"Please don't be epigrammatic, Ellen. It is ugly in a woman under fifty."

"Have you decided what you are going to wear?"

"Yes. My uniform."

"O—but you can't, Pat."

"Can't I?"

"It's a fancy dress ball, you know."

"That's just why."

"What do you mean?"

"Officially I have no longer a right to my uniform. I was kicked out of the service this morning."

She stared at him.

"Kicked—out?" she echoed incredulously.

"Yes. In disgrace." And in a few terse words he told her what had happened to him; related everything as far as he knew.

"But—" she stammered—"Can't you——?"

"Explain to the sultan? Defend myself?"

"That's what I mean."

"Can't be done. The sultan is an autocrat. His will is the law."

She replied with a feminine I-told-you-so:

"You see? Autocrat! Didn't I tell you that? O—I'm glad I'm an American!"

"Even an autocrat can make a mistake. But so, my dear, can a republic."

She was going to argue the point with him; but she saw that the blood had retreated from his face, leaving a strange pallor which showed underneath his tanned skin.

"Pat!" she whispered. "Dear, dear Pat!"

"Nothing to worry about, I assure you. Going to dance a whole lot with me next Saturday? And I hope you won't mind if I should drink a drop too much."

HE spoke with a sort of frightful, blighting carelessness that chilled her to the core, choked the words of tender, yearning compassion that crowded to her lips, and almost gagged her. So between the two there was for a moment a leaden silence, a ghastly space, an absolute nothingness in which each was occupied with his own self-involved thoughts, with never word nor gesture nor glance to forge these thoughts into a link of mutual sympathy and understanding.

If, she said to herself, he would only show—O—anything, any feeling, any reaction at all! Even cold cynicism. She could have stood it; could have forgiven it. Or loud, roaring defiance. Or some tense unhappiness sketched out, if ever so faintly, on this background of not caring, not giving a tinker's damn. Or if he would swear; would say something—yes—as coarse as he wished, but tingling and alive with despair. For despair there must be in his soul. She looked at him. He was lighting a cigaret with steady fingers, was bowing casually to a passing acquaintance. Why—the man's pride was inhuman, medieval.

So, finally, not knowing what to say, she followed his lead and spoke of other things.

During the last few days she had noticed that, while the service at the hotel was excellent, it was even more than excellent where Reshid, the new yellow bearded porter, was concerned. He was always at her elbow, always at her beck and call, seeing what he could do for her or, if there was nothing she wanted, inventing errands that kept him near her and, a strange and unique phenomenon among the greedy Levantine hotel employes, refusing her tips with a lordly gesture. She observed furthermore—for it happened too frequently to be dismissed as a coincidence—that she never went for a walk by herself without meeting him. For Reshid, the servant whom O'Malley had entrusted with watching over Ellen, was a willing man, a loyal and honest and courageous man, but he was not exactly prudent or diplomatic.

At last she had mentioned the matter to Azif Nur, the head porter, who, indiscreet soul and usually in need of money to pay for his thirst, had pocketed a ten-piastre piece, had closed a heavy lidded eye, and had whispered the explanation: "Reshid is O'Malley Pasha's servant."

The latter must have deputed Reshid to protect her. She was sure of it, and she guessed that it was a proof of O'Malley's devotion, his anxiety for her welfare, his love—of which he never spoke.

So she spoke of it now. But she began deliberately by putting a wrong construction on it, just to see what he would say in reply, to find out—as she expressed it to herself—what made him tick.

"You know," she said, "for an Irishman you are really a first rate Turk."

"O!" He looked up, astonished. "Why?"

"The way you treat women!"

"What's wrong with my way?"

"You are jealous and suspicious and overbearing! You are—yes, I am going to say it and I know I shouldn't!—you are so proud of the fact that you wear trousers!"

"You're joking, Ellen, aren't you?"

"I am glad you think it a joking matter. I don't, I assure you. I know how you feel."

"About what?"

"About women!"

"O—do you?"

"You bet I do, Pat! You'd like me to wear a thick veil on the street—wouldn't you now?"

"I thought you said veils are becoming?" he smiled.

"That isn't the point."

"Isn't it? And if not, why not?"

She was nearly caught; but she recovered splendidly.

"At least," she rejoined, "if it is the point, it is the woman's, not the man's. Tell me—" as she saw him gasp—"why are men so unfair, so illogical—why do they twist and squirm so when they are worsted in an argument?"

"I did not know we were arguing, Ellen."

"We were. About the veil! About the fact—" for since she had not given him a chance to deny it, she now assumed quite calmly that he had admitted it—"yes—the fact that you would like me to wear a couple of yards of horse hair net in front of my face! Just because you are jealous—and suspicious—a Turk, in other words! And since you can't force me to wear one, you do the next best—or worst—thing. You have me watched day and night by one of your servants. Why—" she said it steadily, without blushing—"it's insulting! How dare you, Pat?"

"If I get a hold of that Reshid——"

"Aha!" she interrupted triumphantly. "Then you admit it?"

"O!"

"Go on! Admit it!"

"All right. No use my trying to deny it, I suppose?"

"Not the slightest!" And with a fine, misleading show of indignation "I demand an explanation!"

He stepped straight into the trap.

"You are doing me an injustice," he replied. "I did not mean to supervise you, to—well, cramp your style. You know that's ridiculous. But Constantinople is dangerous for you. You know too much about about the duel, about Tcherkessky, all that. I told you so. But you refused to leave town. So I asked Reshid to keep an eye on you, to protect you, since I could not be around all the time. I was worried about you, Ellen."

"Were you really, Pat?" Miraculously, her accents were softening.

"Yes. Terribly worried. I still am."

She smiled victoriously. She had scored; and at once, she prepared another trap.

"When I was a child," she said, "we lived near a mine, up in Idaho, which my father owned. There was labor trouble one winter, and night after night my father had to go out and speak to the miners and try and make peace and keep them from blowing up the property. And mother—I remember so well—used to sit and wait for father, night after night, looking out of the window, so nervous, so worried. I didn't understand. Children are careless and selfish, I suppose.

"So one day I asked mother, and she replied: 'Worry is the one sure sign of love. Wait till you grow up and are in love yourself. Then you'll see.'"

Ellen paused. "Do you think mother was right?" she added.

This time he saw the trap and sidestepped it cleverly.

"She was absolutely right," he said. "Take my grandmother, for instance. I loved her very much. And if she were alive and in Constantinople at this moment, I would worry terribly about her."

Suddenly Ellen lost her temper.

"O!" she cried. "I hate you!"

"What have I done?"

"You—you compared me to your grandmother!"

"But she was very beautiful, Ellen, and very charming and——"

"Yes, yes! Very old fashioned, I guess, and ladylike! Not a bit like me! Lisped, I suppose, and had the vapors when a young man spoke to her and——"

She was silent. Tears brimmed in her eyes, and O'Malley took both her hands in his.

"Ellen—please, please! I was only teasing. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings."

"Pat!" she sobbed. "Don't you love me?"

"Of course, I do. I love you with all my heart. I love you so much that——"

"That it hurts?"

"Yes!"

"My love hurts too, Pat!"

He did not speak; and she continued:

"Pat, dear!"

"Yes, Ellen?"

"Why don't you——?"

"What?"

"You know—I'm not your grandmother, after all."

"I'm glad you aren't."

"Your grandmother would have died rather than ask the man she loved what I'm going to ask you—since you refuse to ask me!"

"O!"

"Will you marry me, Pat?"

He sat up.

"You—" he stammered—"you are reversing the position of the sexes, aren't you?"

"Not exactly. But I believe in equal rights for women."

"Your body is brave. So is your heart. But your soul is a coward."

"So do I!"

"Bully for you, Pat! You aren't a Turk. I take it back."

"But—I also believe in equal rights for men."

"Bully again! That's the idea, Pat. Fifty-fifty!"

"Not sixty-forty, Ellen?"

"Of course, not!"

"You mean it?"

"You bet!"

"Then—promise you won't be angry at my reply to your question?"

"Go on!"

"I cannot say yes! But I shall be a brother to you!"

AND then, for the second time that morning, Ellen lost her temper. She did not show it outwardly. She looked at him with the terrible, chilly candor of her eyes, seeking out that one weak spot in his armor which her pitiless shaft would pierce. She loved him. Yet in spite of her love, or perhaps because of it, she tried deliberately to hurt him, to reach to his own love by lacerating the consecrated thing—the memory of his mother's disgrace and shame—which stifled his emotions. Her words were charged with a relentless precision. They would have been more bitter, therefore less hurting, had they been less logical; would have been more violent, therefore more easily forgiven, had they been less definitely expressed:

"I know why you replied as you did. You love me. O, yes. I am quite sure of it. You did not have to tell me. I guessed it, felt it, the first night we met. The idea that I might love another man, kiss him, give myself to him, would be torture to you. You long for me—at this moment—just as I long for you. But you are afraid. Your body is brave. So is your heart. But your soul is a coward. I am sorry for you. For you suffer from—what did Prince Tcherkessky call it?—O, yes!—your obsession against women because——"

"Be quiet!" he interrupted raucously.

"I will not be quiet!" She had entered upon his ordeal, which was her own ordeal, and she was going through with it, happen what may. "Your mother ran away with Tcherkessky's brother. Well—all I can say is that if your father was like you, I cannot blame your mother."

He did not speak. He remained before her upright and silent.

"Have you not a word to say?" she continued. "Have you not a single word in which you can answer me?"

Still he was silent. So was she.

They looked at each other. Their implacable eyes contended; clashed, like two evenly tempered blades handled by evenly skilled fencers. One idea was uppermost in his mind: She must not guess how deeply she had hurt him. Nor was it pride which caused the idea but the realization, subconscious and incongruous, that, if she knew how terribly she had wounded him, he would never be able to forgive her. And he was afraid not to forgive her, was afraid of the very thought. For he loved her.

She had made a breach in his defenses. He must repair this breach by ignoring it. She had unhinged the gate of his reticence. One tremor of weakness—and this gate would be thrown down, would break into pieces.

Obsession—was it? Perhaps. But often, in the course of time, an obsession turns into a talisman. So with him. And, with a contained, cold fury, he fought to keep this talisman intact. For he was Irish. He took a sensual delight in torturing himself. At last, out of sheer physical, mechanical weariness, he looked away. She interpreted it as a victory; felt triumphant; but not for long. For he bowed with stiff politeness.

"By the way," he said, and it was as if she had not spoken at all, "how many dances will you keep for me next Saturday? The first—and the second—and the——"

"Not the second," she replied equally stiffly. "I promised that to Prince Tcherkessky. Au revoir!"

She left the hotel lobby.

Not that it differed much from any other fancy dress ball given any other night, or perhaps that very night, in Paris, Rome, or Vienna.

For there were the same couples gliding in the negroid abandon of the same jazzy, belching two-step. There was the same neurotic divorcée, in the more ingenious than ingenuous white and black of a Pierrette, hanging on the arm of the same self-conscious young diplomat, a yellow mustached, monocled Rameses the Great for the evening. There was the same paleolithic warrior splitting a magnum of dry vintage champagne with the same three young women whose combined garb would not have made a fair sized napkin. There was the same Spanish bull fighter with the same Madam Pompadour in the same dark corner. There was the same paunchy gentleman with the Hebraic nose and the Scotch kilts flashing his off color diamonds before the same South sea cannibal queen.

There was the same giddy grandmother advertising the fact that her legs were still slim with the help of spangled, salmon pink tights. There was the same stray tourist from Kansas City praying to high heaven and to the spirit of the chamber of commerce that his black velvet face mask would not slip. There was the same Robespierre supping, perhaps so as to reprove history, on caviare en bloc and absinthe dripped through a perforated spoon. There was the same stout matron in the Gretchen costume of baby blue silk—her thick, wheat colored braids, incidentally, were genuine—stalking the same banker who, even in a harlequin's motley, carried a check book in his hip pocket.

The same lascivious music brushed out with violin pizzicatos, the cello's honey smooth undertones, and the slapstick stammerings of bassoon and clarinet. The same electric blaze leaped about the same scarlet and gold decorations. The same potted palms screened discreet nooks. The same powdery film flew up from the dance floor and settled lightly on hair and gowns. The same buffet was laden with the same bottles and glasses, with ices masquerading as sandwiches and sandwiches as ices.

The same high pitched voices hiccoughed into cosmopolitan symphony. The same faces contorted into stark grimaces of rapture. The same pomice whitened teeth stood out skull like and ghastly against the crimson of open, laughing mouths. The same shouting, swinging noises, the same alcoholic bray of syncopated music spurted unintelligibly against the ears of newcomers. The same pompous men pounded fists on tables and howled for the same sleepy eyed, thin chested waiters.

Still, there was a difference. Outside. Not inside. Outside, where in the streets and bazaars, always, like a Greek tragedy chorus, muttered the mad refrain of civic strife; where the Young Turk spider—with Russia in the background like a yet bigger spider waiting till the smaller had caught its prey, presently to devour both—was weaving its slimy net of intrigue and rebellion and murder; where revolution was rearing its ugly, flat head.

A gypsy's lust and jealousy. A foolish Armenian's passion. An execution. A sardonic Turkish trinity. A trinity that, a few years later, was destined to bring on the Balkan war and its monstrous, scrofulous stepchild, the World war.

Perhaps a few observers—newspaper correspondents and spies and bankers and a traveling poet or two—guessed, read the future, gave warning. But the seers were branded as liars, the prophets as panicky fools. Europe was greedy, therefore purblind.

TO Europe's accredited diplomats the Young Turk revolution spelled simply an opportunity of dividing Turkey's, the sick man's, property. They never imagined that, in his dying agony, the sick man would have strength enough to fling a red torch that would set half the world afire.

"Pax Britannica!" quoted the British ambassador, as he telegraphed to Downing street.

"God protect the tsar!" said the Russian ambassador, as he telegraphed to Moscow's Kremlin.

"Deutschland über alles!" exclaimed the German ambassador, as he telegraphed to the Wilhelmstrasse.

Orders to the admirals of the fleet that rode the sapphire waters of the Bosporus. British marines landed; Germans; Russians. The French and Italians not far behind. No trouble. Of course not. But orders whispered into commanding officers' ears:

"Help the Young Turks. Protect the native Christians. Discreetly—O, so very discreetly. For you know—if the revolution should miscarry after all, we——? You do understand, eh? So—discreetly—discreetly! Written orders? No, no! But—if everything goes well—promotion?"

Again the coded messages hurried to Berlin, London, Moscow. Too, other messages buzzed frantically along the long distance wires as bankers and brokers rushed orders to half a dozen stock exchanges:

"Buy German steel stocks!"
"Sell Turkish bonds!"
"Buy British consols!"
"Sell Turkish bonds!"
"Buy Russian railway shares!"
"Sell Turkish bonds!"

Finance discounting the revolution's money breeding shadow, while, in the streets of Constantinople, revolution itself marched in the flesh.

It had started with a tense, dramatic, rather frightened whisper. Overnight it had bloated into a savage clarion call of hate, and presently of triumph, as the leaders of the Young Turk party, helped now by the incensed native Christians, marshaled their shock battalions and came surging on with the rolling boundlessness of crazy ambition, bruiting afar the thunder cry of "Liberty! Liberty!" reëchoing it from shore to shore of the Bosporus.

Thus it wakened the somnolent, filthy alleys of the Fundukli with the sweep of it.

It chilled the golden souled counting houses of Pera and Galata with the steel of it.

It coiled over Stamboul's sad old mosques like a sheet of smoldering flame, yellow, inexorable.

It thundered against the brittle pride of the sultan and his adherents.

Civil war. The war of a snake's fangs and a tiger's claws. Here at last!

"What's to be done?" asked the commander in chief.

"What's to be done?" echoed Sabri Bey of the secret police.

"What's to be done?" whined the Sheik-ul-Islam.

Beat the drums! Send to the barracks!

Some of the soldiers may still be loyal.

They did not hear, there, in the Megatherium-Palace hotel. Perhaps, occasionally, an isolated shout stabbed through from the outside:

"Death to the sultan! Long live the revolution!"

But the shouts were swallowed in the stumble and lurch of the music, the laughing voices of the revelers, the slurring, shuffling, two-stepping feet.

Dancing on a volcano!

Here was the trite old saying come true.

THE gypsy musicians were seated on a high platform not far from the palm screened hotel desk. They swayed in their chairs as they played. They bobbed up and down. They flung their violent, erotic, over-spiced melodies through the confusion on the floor where men and women danced, faces glued together, arms twined tightly about waists; hairy, coarse male hands gliding from white shoulders to narrow hips, then up to caress bare, powdered spines. Ever more people arrived; ever more people joined in the dance until there was hardly space left to move and until the couples, unable to turn or budge or step, remained stationary, only the shoulders and thighs shivering convulsively as if in a delirium of the senses.

Still, the hotel was large, and the management had thrown open the entire lower floor for the occasion, keeping only some of the smaller rooms for private supper parties or special entertainments. Thus, in one room, behind heavy curtains, a half naked Arab girl contorted her muscles in a lascivious stomach dance to the accompaniment of drum and reed pipe. In another a Kurd was giving an exhibition of sword swallowing. In a third a Kara Gyuz—a Turkish Punch and Judy show—was in progress. And in a fourth room a Hindu fortune teller had spread his simple apparatus, a low table, a chart of the stars, and a flat metal tray covered with sand.

This fortune teller was not a prepossessing man. For his eyes were hopelessly bleared and red rimmed through overindulgence in hashish and opium. His teeth were stumpy and black with betel chewing. His pendulous nose almost met the flagging chin. His rough, scanty pepper and salt beard was a stranger to comb and perfumed oil. He was a ridiculous, ugly little man with a ridiculous, squeaky little cough.

But he had brains.

And his name was Shafizullah.

He was shouting loudly, trying to entice patrons into his room—he was squatting just beyond the threshold—and advertising his skill:

"Come! Come! Only two piastres! I read the past and the future! I give advice! Both heaven and earth have given oath that nothing shall be hidden from the seeing of my eyes, neither theft of gold nor theft of a woman's heart!"

So he yelled while surreptitiously he was watching Ellen McIntyre and O'Malley, who were sitting just beyond the other side of the threshold.

The Irishman was in full uniform, a velvet mask across his face, while Ellen wore the Afghan dress. It was the only oriental costume in the room, perhaps, because the people, surfeited with the orient daily about them, had given it a wide berth tonight. It was therefore conspicuous, and the envy of some of the other women testified to it.

"Clever girl—what?" commented the English duchess.

"Why. She's carrying coals to Newcastle."

"That's what makes her so dashed clever. To carry coals to Newcastle? What a unique idea, old trout!"

ELLEN and O'Malley were sitting stiffly erect. They were both silent, both playing a dangerous game of make believe, of proud, unbending "I-don't-care-what-you-think-of-me-because-I-don't-like-you-anyway-and I-won't-speak-first," while their hearts were aching with love and desire.

Minute after minute they sat there; and they were still obstinately silent when a man, also in an Afghan costume, with a face mask that was not large enough to hide Prince Tcherkessky's hawkish features, bowed before Ellen.

"Mademoiselle," he began. He laughed, corrected himself: "Pardon! Silly of me to call an Afghan girl mademoiselle."

"What should you call me?" She looked up, with a quick side glance at O'Malley.

"O, something poetic and oriental and delightful—and therefore true! Little flower to be worn in the turban of my heart! How's this?"

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

"Splendid! Go on!"

"Soul of a thousand and three roses!" he salaamed deeply. "It appears that you and I are the only people here tonight from the far Central Asian mountains."

"Indeed," she agreed, and she added wickedly, "it makes one feel lonely amongst all these—O—Irish!"

"Won't you dance with me?" asked Tcherkessky. "I'm afraid there is not enough room to do an Afghan sword dance. Still"—as the music blared out drunkenly—"listen, a corking two-step! Please—one dance! Of course," sardonically, to O'Malley, "if the effendi permits!"

"It is none of the effendi's business," replied Ellen, and rose.

They glided away toward the nasal, sensuous whine of the music, were lost in the pattern of swaying bodies, and O'Malley was furious with jealousy, yet more furious a few moments later when they disengaged themselves from the crowd and when, passing him, he heard Tcherkessky say: "Too stuffy, don't you think?"

"No fun dancing in such a crush."

"Let's go to the small room over there." He pointed at a closed door the other side of the orchestra. "I've a table reserved, and we can have a bite of supper. Care to?"

"Gladly, Brother Afghan!"

O'Malley's first impulse was to do nothing. If she insisted on flirting with the Circassian it was her affair, not his. Why—what was she to him? And at once his heart gave the answer which his brain did not want: "She is everything to you! Everything!"

He remembered, too, his old suspicions where Tcherkessky was concerned. Ever since the duel the latter had doubtless had his misgivings about Ellen's motives, most likely imagining them to be political and imagining, furthermore, that she knew more than she actually did: and with revolution on the very point of breaking out, the Circassian would be doubly wary, would see to it that even the smallest wheel was oiled, the tiniest possible obstruction taken care of.

He thought of the Turkish proverb: "Trust a snake before a Greek, a Greek before a Portuguese, a Portuguese before an Armenian, an Armenian before a Syrian, and a Syrian before a Circassian!"

No, no. He did not trust the prince; trusted him less than he would running noose or plunging dagger.

Still, came the second thought, what could Tcherkessky do here, in this crowded hotel? It was foolish to suspect or worry.

Well—foolish or not—he was possessed by harrowing fear and nervousness. He rose to follow them when again he reconsidered. For he said to himself that Ellen would interpret it in her own way, and he was proud, just as proud as she, just as stubborn as she. If she insisted on treating life as a game where one scored points, he was going to score a few of his own, or at least see to it that she did not score too many against him.

So he raised a cautious hand, and not long afterwards Reshid, his yellow bearded Turkish servant, approached and salaamed: "Pasha effendi?"

"Mademoiselle is in the little room over there with Prince Tcherkessky. Follow! Watch! Protect if necessary! But be a little more discreet than you usually are. No use advertising your presence."

"Listen is obey, Pasha effendi!"

Reshid turned and walked away, entering the small room, while O'Malley remained where he was, smoking, watching the moiling, perspiring mob of dancers jerking spasmodically as the orchestra stuttered its trite, overornate Romany melodies, occasionally conscious of the drone of the fortune teller who, a few feet away, beyond the threshold, was declaring that he was the father and mother of all soothsayers, to whom nothing was hidden:

"Come! Come! Only two piastres! I read the past! I read the future! I am a most blessed man—aye God's will has thrown me amongst the profane, yet even to the profane will I give wisdom and advice—for only two piastres! Advice—yes—and warning! Warning against treacherous friends and faithless wives! Against husbands? No! Husbands are always faithless! Warning against the fifth of the accursed races, against those outside the house of religion! Come, O sons of Adam! Only two piastres."

ON, the dance! Fantastic costumes disarranged. Velvet dominos slipping. Blonde heads riveted against blue shaven cheeks. The fortune teller's insistent drone and O'Malley felt rather dazed, felt tired and unhappy and lonely, was about to get up and stretch his legs, when the door of the small supper room opened and the two Afghan masks came out.

"Feel Oriental enough to fall for this hocus pocus, Ellen?" laughed the prince.

There was a whispered reply.

"Good enough!" he said. "Come."

And they entered the room, and faced Shafizullah.

O'Malley had his back to them. He did not turn; neither looked at them nor tried to. But occasionally he heard words as the fortune teller stirred the sand with agile fingers, then read and interpreted the future:

"A grave decision confronts you—you, who came from across the black waters, in spite of your Afghan dress . . . . nam, yah Lallah—yes, my lady . . . . I see, vaguely, the promise of great love . . . . haouh haddi eddni—wait and listen . . . . the sand moves, speaks . . . . hi, shoofi—look, look . . . . two men are in your life, O daughter . . . . Ullah ifftah—may God give you the right choice . . . . one is from the east, the other from the west . . . . the east is your star, your secret meaning, your soul's essence . . . . happiness, he brings to you, he out of the east."

"Enough!" O'Malley heard the prince's laughter. "You are indiscreet, my friend."

The same faces, contorted into stark grimaces of rapture.

They were a splendid couple, he admitted rather grumblingly: the man dressed as a naib, an Afghan noble, in that archaic style faintly reminiscent of mediaeval Persia, in loose, gold threaded brocade tunic with rows upon rows of silver, sugar loaf shaped buttons, wide trousers of yellow silk, broad belt of shagreen leather with a murderous array of daggers showing their jeweled hilts, an immense white fur busby shadowing his features; the girl in her vivid symphony of purple and furnace crimson and pansy violet, her face covered by the black horse hair veil and only the eyes showing, deep and opaque and mysterious.

Yes. A splendid couple; romantic; conspicuous; unique. And there was a stir and flutter, the men admiring, the women envying, as they passed, Tcherkessky talking animatedly, the girl's face veil bloating and trembling a little as she whispered inaudible replies.

The fortune teller stretched a grimy, clawlike hand across the threshold.

"Enter, O Soleymani, O Afghan!" came his whining entreaty. "And you, O little she-falcon of the Afghans! Let me read the riddle of your future! I shall open the secret book of your life and read therein the name of the one who will bring you happiness. Come! Just touch my fingers! The salt of your hand to the salt of my hand! And I shall stir the sand! I shall consult the chart of stars! Patience, O my daughter! Only two piastres—and the future will be an open page to you."

Came the clink of silver; the fortune teller's profuse, obsequious thanks; and they walked out of the room.

O'Malley had risen; had stepped a little to one side where a great potted palm screened him. But Tcherkessky, his eyes beneath the shaggy busby stabbing out like eager lances, saw him: made believe he did not; stopped just beyond the palm so that his sibilant words came sharp and distinct:

"You heard what the fortune teller said?"

There was no answer; and he continued:

"You love O'Malley? Come—tell me, tell me!"

Slowly the veiled head moved from side to side.

"No!" came the silent answer.

"Ellen!" The prince lowered his voice yet more, but still O'Malley heard every word, and every word was a dagger point in his heart. "I love you. I love you with all my soul. Be my wife! Please, please. O, don't you love me a little bit, the least little bit? O," as the girl inclined her head—"you—you mean it? You will marry me? Yes? When, best beloved? Tonight? Tonight?"

A whispered, inaudible reply; and the prince laughed loudly and triumphantly:

"Allah be praised, heart of my heart! Come—one more dance—and then home—to my home—our home—will you dear? Ah—my wife before the morning!"—and he whirled her away into the scientific maze of an Argentine tango.

The SENSIBLE THING by Louise James Bargelt

A Fast Moving Tale in Which Love and Business Complicate Life for a Rising Young Realtor

MRS. FREDDIE D'LORMAY studied her freshly marcelled shingle, her plumpish pink and white face beaming approval. Anna Jean certainly knew how to give a becoming line.

"You do good work, Anna Jean," Mrs. D'Lormay said with a satisfied sigh. "Thank goodness, you decided to open up in Garden Bloom instead of in Chicago. Awfully sensible really, though most girls these days——" Mrs. D'Lormay shrugged a too rapidly plumpening shoulder by way of conveying what most girls would probably have done.

Anna Jean did not answer. Her fluffy reddish hair was bent over her appointment book. What luck. She was through for the day.

Mrs. D'Lormay slipped into her seal and ermine coat, the only coat of its costly kind Du Barry county boasted.

"Freddie was talking about it this morning," she went on, her crisp voice slightly patronizing as befitted the wife of the county's most prosperous citizen, slightly affectionate as was due the girl who was so soon to marry her husband's youngest brother.

"Freddie thinks you and Dan are mighty wise to postpone your marriage until fall. Summer is so horribly busy for the men. By August Dan will be taken into the firm and you and he can start out the way you should. Freddie said 'That's like Anna Jean. A darn practical girl.'"

Anna Jean straightened.

"Did it ever occur to you we were riding that 'sensible' horse to death?" she asked slowly. She had turned on Mrs. D'Lormay with disconcerting suddenness. Her soft brown eyes were smouldering oddly.

Mrs. D'Lormay stared. Anna Jean was always saying unaccountable things. "I'll say not," she retorted sharply. "When you see the mess people make of things when they turn off their brains and chuck their common sense. One thing about the D'Lormay men, they keep their heads on their shoulders——"

The phone rang. Anna Jean's eyes brightened.

"That's Dan. We're going in town tonight for a show," she threw back over her shoulder as she hurried back into a rear booth to answer the phone.

"Tonight? Why the board meets tonight. How can he get away?"

But Anna Jean did not hear her. She was listening to Dan's voice over the wire, serious, assured, as were the voices of all the D'Lormay men.

"Awfully sorry, Jean, but we'll have to call off the show. Fred's asked for an extra meeting of the board. Better go over to Fred's house for dinner, and I'll call for you there at ten."

ANNA JEAN'S throat filled. Business again! This was the third date in a week Dan had broken to attend to something or other. And they were going to the Follies!

"It's all right with you, isn't it?" Dan's voice was sympathetic but confident too, as if there could, of course, be but one answer. "We'll do it the first of next week."

"But the show closes tonight."

"That's so. I had forgotten. Well, we'll take in something else, dear. See you about ten. Good-by."

Anna Jean hung up. Her small heart shaped face was white, her eyes blazing with wrath and despair. If this was business, she was sick of it! What was the fun of being engaged if you settled down right away like old married folks? What was the fun of anything if all you thought of was work, work, work?

Mrs. D'Lormay was opening the outside door. Her new limousine had just drawn up. She coughed significantly.

"I thought Dan must have forgotten that meeting. It is very important, you know. The firm has an option on a new subdivision of land. If they put it over, it will mean close to a half million dollars."

"I don't care if it means a whole million," whispered Anna Jean, defiantly. She sat motionless in her chair, a desolate heap. She did not dare to face Mrs. D'Lormay. She might say something she would be sorry for later.

"Better come over for supper tonight. We'll get in a couple of women for bridge. The men won't be through before midnight, if I guess right. See you later."

She had gone at last! Anna Jean jumped up, commencing to straighten up her small shop with furious energy. She felt as if her emotions must have physical outlet of some sort.

WHAT was coming over Dan, anyway? He hadn't always been this way. When they had been first engaged he had not had a thought in the world except to have a good time. His family were always wondering if Dan was ever going to settle down to business. It was only afterwards he had begun to change.

It wasn't as if she had not been glad to see Dan take an interest in doing something, but she had not counted on that interest overwhelming him. She had been wild with delight when he had told her he had already made enough to start building an astonishingly spacious house next to Freddie's, which was one of the show places in town. But when he had less and less time with her, when even his Sundays were taken up driving prospective buyers all over Du Barry county, Anna Jean had begun to rebel. Dan was getting just like the rest of the D'Lormay men, dull, stupid, business ridden, dog tired when it came to doing anything but work.

Anna Jean's pretty face set grimly as she bent over to examine a calendar on her desk. She had drawn a red mark around a certain date the month before. That was the last time she and Dan had been into Chicago! Nearly five weeks. And as for a dance any more——Anna Jean gave a despairing smile as she recalled the Saturday before when she had almost prevailed on Dan to take her to the Booster's Annual ball. He had promised sweetly enough, his intentions were always excellent, but at the last minute he had phoned saying he couldn't possibly make it.

Anna Jean had gone with Mrs. D'Lormay. She had had a good time, all right. Gladys Gale had been there and introduced her to a couple of new men. The four of them had danced together all of the evening, in spite of Mrs. D'Lormay's visible disapproval.

Later Gladys had said, "Any time you're on for a party in town, I'll fix it up. Larry Mack is crazy about you." And to Anna Jean's startled protest, Gladys had said, "You make me tired. What's the big idea? Burying yourself as if you were dead already. You and Dan are worse settled than any married people I know. And that's saying a lot."

Well—Anna Jean started. The phone was ringing again. Her heart bounded. Perhaps that was Dan and he had changed his mind.

But no, it was Gladys of the melting beaded eyes and pretty crimson bow mouth. Gladys talked a long time over the phone. She talked hard and fast and to the point. And she won her point. When Anna Jean hung up the receiver she had promised to make a fourth at dinner in Chicago that night. She would meet them at the corner of St. Charles and Oak in an hour!

THE party started at six. It was nearly midnight when Anna Jean, struggling rather desperately with the lock on the kitchen window of Gladys' small apartment, managed to lift it and climb out on the iron platform of the rear fire escape. Gratefully she took a deep breath of the fresh night air.

Back of her she could still hear the uproarious bursts of merriment from the living room. Terrifying bursts in mounting abandonment. Gladys' party was now in full swing, and in Anna Jean's opinion, an opinion rendered perhaps conservative by training and instinct, it had long ago gone beyond all prescribed limits.

Anna Jean looked around her nervously. She was five stories from the ground. The back porches of endless apartment buildings hemmed her in, huddling together in the murky gloom of approaching midnight. Far below a street light lit up a solitary car parked at an alley opening.

If only she had her purse and a little nerve, she would take a chance on going down the fire escape and getting home some way, somehow. Gladys had been promising for the last two hours that they would go, but to all appearances Gladys seemed to be receding farther from that point every moment.

Indeed, this coming here to the apartment had been the proverbial last straw to an already hectic enough evening. It had started out propitiously, in a nice big, roomy car, so much nicer and bigger than Dan's, and with Larry Mack all devotion and attention. He had declared himself thrilled at having Anna Jean with them, and that had thrilled her, too, quite pleasantly. For about ten minutes all had gone well. They had been everything that a girl bent on having a good time could possibly wish.

Afterwards, however, Larry's attitude had changed. He still displayed plenty of devotion, but not the sort Anna Jean was accustomed to, or wanted. And the whole evening, as far as Anna Jean was concerned, had been spent in a continued attempt to curb that same devotion. With the result, of course, that she had been dubbed little Miss Kill Joy by the rest of the crowd.

They had driven recklessly and interminably. For hours it seemed to Anna Jean. At last when she was sure they must decide to stop at some restaurant where there would be a certain cessation from several things, they had drawn up in front of Gladys' small apartment. Somewhere on the north side it was, though Anna Jean had long since lost any precise idea of direction.

She had protested again, but her protests were an old story and the crowd was frankly tired of them.

"Say, cut it out, can't you?" Gladys said crossly. "You've been nothing but a talking register of kicks ever since we left home. Keep still, if you can't say something cheerful."

That had been about two hours ago. Anna Jean had striven to oblige in the simple business of remaining silent, but it had been a miserable two hours. Anna Jean shivered. The night was decidedly chilly, and besides she had been thinking with increasing nervousness how she never could explain about this party in Gladys' apartment to Dan. Or to any one else in Garden Bloom. Gladys' reputation since she had gone "on her own" in Chicago had been none too good in their simple suburban minds. Anna Jean had always stood up for Gladys, declaring that she just liked a good time like any other girl. Now she wasn't quite so sure. At any rate, Gladys wasn't her sort, nor were the men. Their ideas of fun just differed entirely.

ANNA JEAN peered down into the street. Did she fancy it or was the car moving a little closer to the alleyway directly under her? Who was in it? she wondered. You heard so many dreadful stories of thieving and robbery in city apartments. Even now one of its owners might be pilfering some apartment around her and make an enforced dash for safety down the very fire escape where she was standing. She was just about to step back into the kitchen, preferring discomforts she knew of rather than those she knew not of, when she gave a little gasp. A man had jumped out and was looking up at her. He was waving encouragingly, invitingly. He was——

Anna Jean did not wait for reflection. Without a thought for the dizzy heights from which she was descending, she started to run down the fire escape. One flight, another turn, two flights and then three. On the last platform she gave a reckless jump into the outstretched arms of a six foot, one hundred and seventy pound young man. He staggered a little from the impact, but rallied, held her a moment, steadying himself, and then put her gravely on the ground.

They looked at each other for a moment without speaking. The young man smiled slowly.

"Well, Jean, where do we go from here?" he asked casually. They might have been spending the evening together, for the matter of fact tone in his voice.

"I want to go home," Anna Jean said breathlessly. That descent she had made had been rapid.

"Where's your hat?"

"Up there." She indicated with a toss of her head.

"And your coat?"

"Up there, too. I don't care. I wouldn't go back up there for a dozen hats and coats." She was pushing him towards the car. "Hurry, Dan—let's get in your car. I'm nearly frozen."

"But you'll be chilly driving, even if the car is closed," Dan objected.

"I don't care," Anna Jean repeated, a little wildly. "There are worse things than being cold."

NEITHER spoke again until they were driving at a comfortable speed straight west. Anna Jean didn't care where they were, as long as she knew they were headed towards home.

Dan gave a short laugh. "I'm certainly glad to see that you are still whole," he said. "I never thought I should get you home except in pieces. Some speed artist that was who was driving your car."

"You followed us?"

"I did. From all appearances I thought you'd need me before the night was over. That certainly was a speedy bunch to trail. What on earth was the hurry?"

"I don't know," Anna Jean said faintly. She had wondered that herself several times when they all of them narrowly escaped a ditch. Then, more faintly still, "How did you happen to follow us?"

"I found out at the last minute I could chuck that board meeting, and so I went over to get you. Turning on St. Charles road I saw you climb into Larry Mac's car, so I—well, I followed. I know Larry and the bunch he trains with, and I had a hunch I could be of use to you before you got back to Garden Bloom. I believe in hunches, so I went ahead." Dan was not smiling now. His handsome face was serious, his gray eyes fastened on the road ahead.

Anna Jean was sitting up very straight in the car. She could not understand the way Dan was taking this thing that she had done. Queer for Dan, of all men, not to seem more disturbed.

"Were you—are you, I mean—awfully disappointed in me?" she began. "For being so foolish and bad——"

"Well, I've been dull and stupid," Dan interrupted. "And that's worse, I think. You see, I've been thinking a lot these last few hours. I had plenty of time to think." He half smiled as if to himself.

"Yes," said Anna Jean.

"And I have seen what a fogey, settled old guy I've turned into lately. I don't want to be like that, Jean, any more than you do. But a man's mind gets into a rut quicker than a girl's. That must be it, and it's up to you to keep me out of it. I'll give you the job. Don't let me get like the rest of the D'Lormay men, too much like them any way. It's a streak in the family, settling down to be old before they are ever young. All work and no play stuff. Understand me, Jean?"

Anna Jean laughed, for the first time that evening.

"I think I do. I'll keep you from being too sensible, if you'll keep me from being too foolish. Will you?"

"I'll say I will," said Dan. "Just watch me." And then after a moment. "And what's more, that postponement of our marriage is all off. We're going to be married June first, the day we planned on. Freddie and the rest of them can rave all they want. I don't remember that they waited until they were on easy street before they married. They went ahead on a shoe string and cleaned up afterwards. Besides, I'm not so poor. I've got——" he whispered just how much he did have in the bank. It wasn't a fortune, as fortunes go these days, but it was enough to make Anna Jean give an awed little gasp.

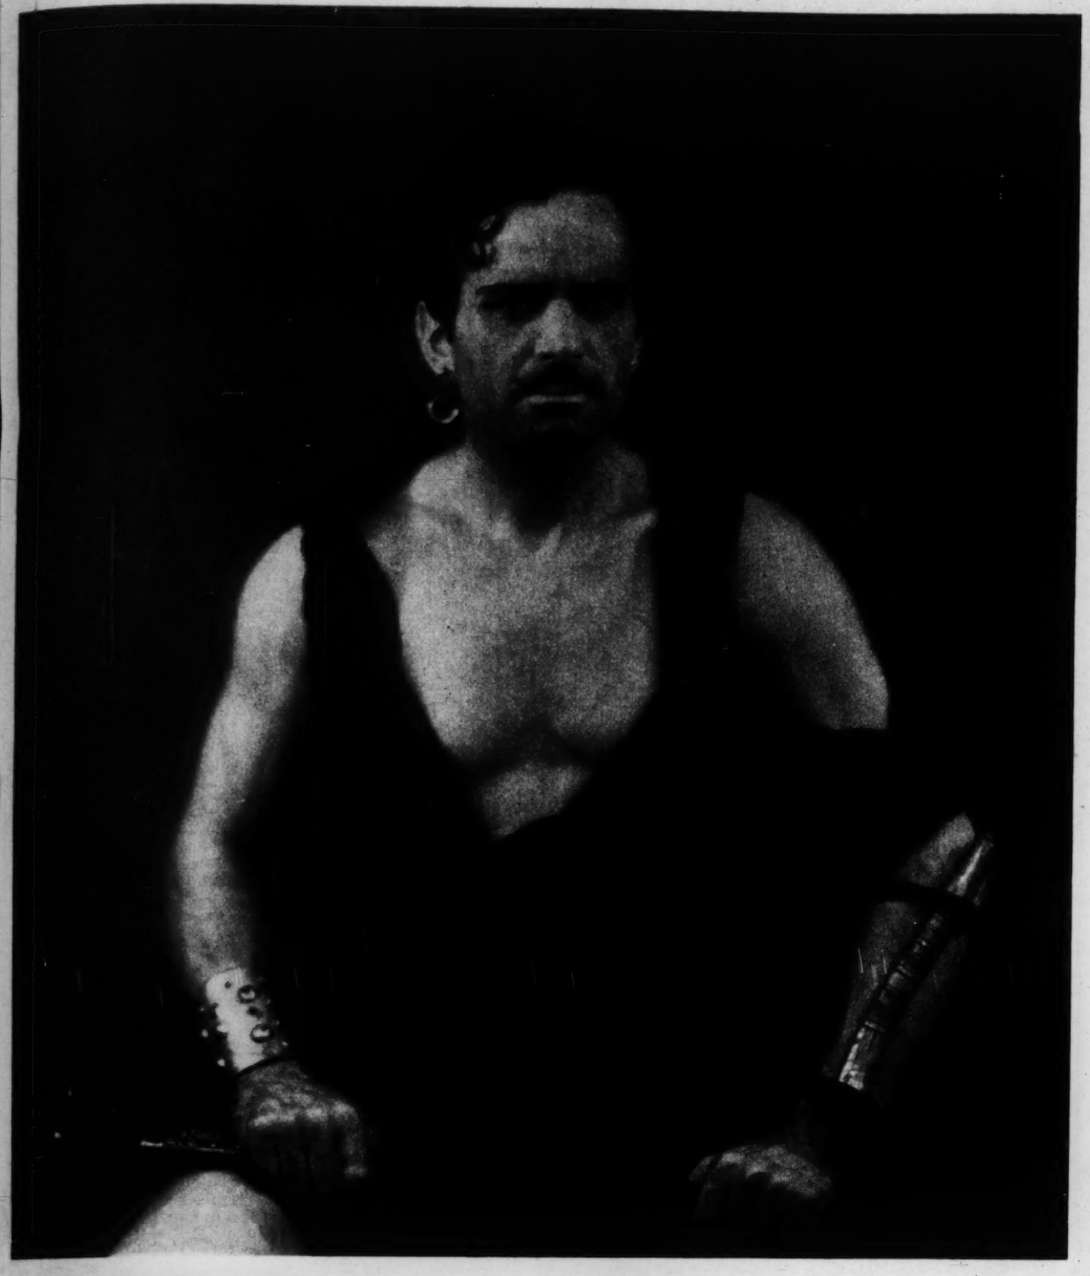
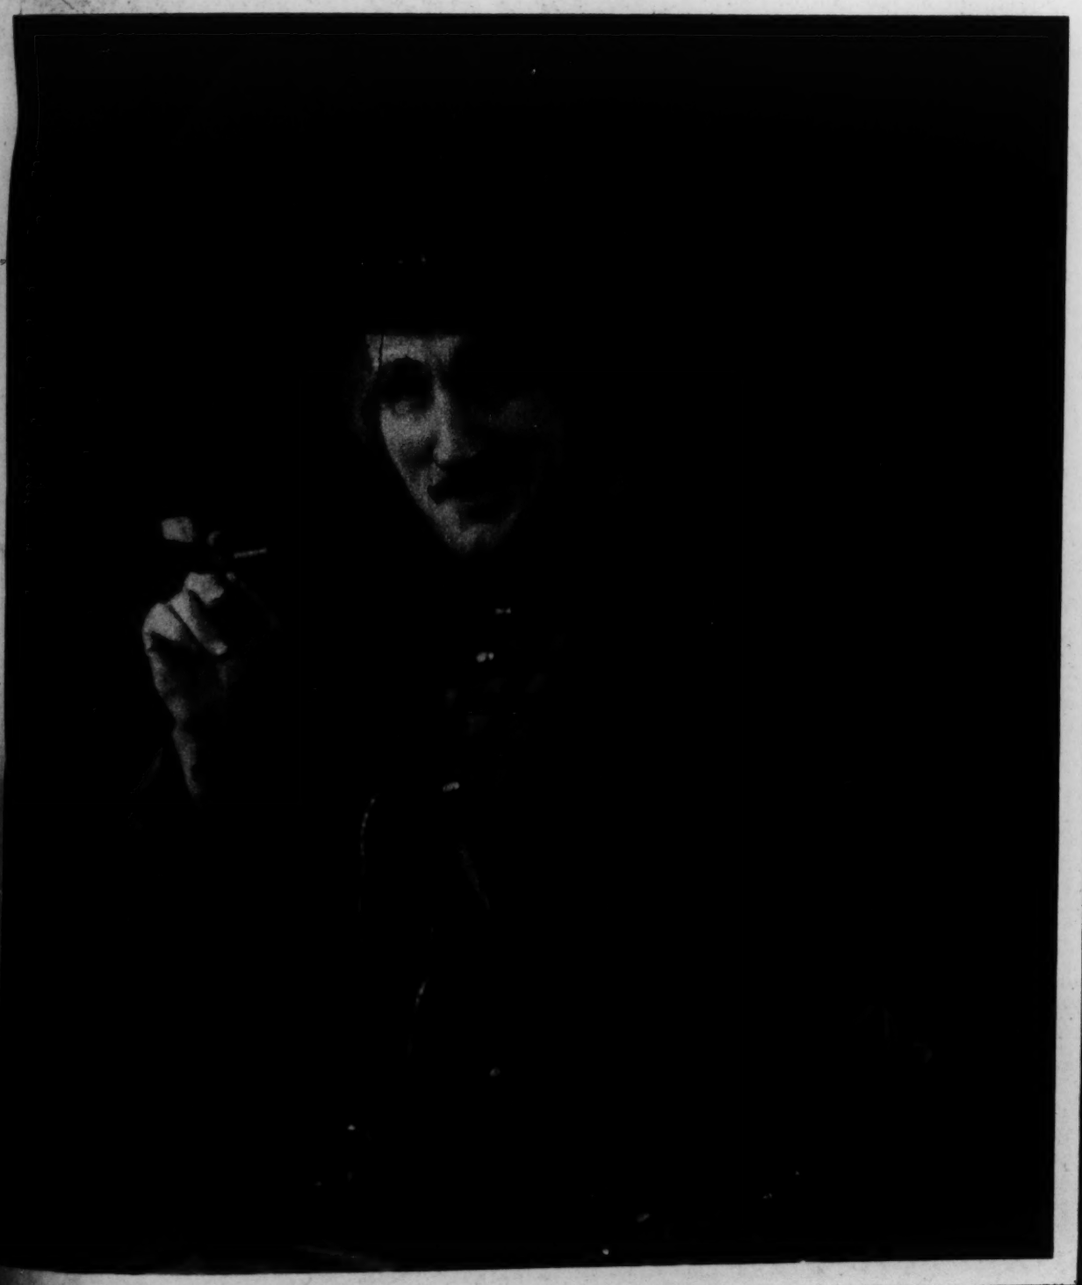
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

December 6, 1925

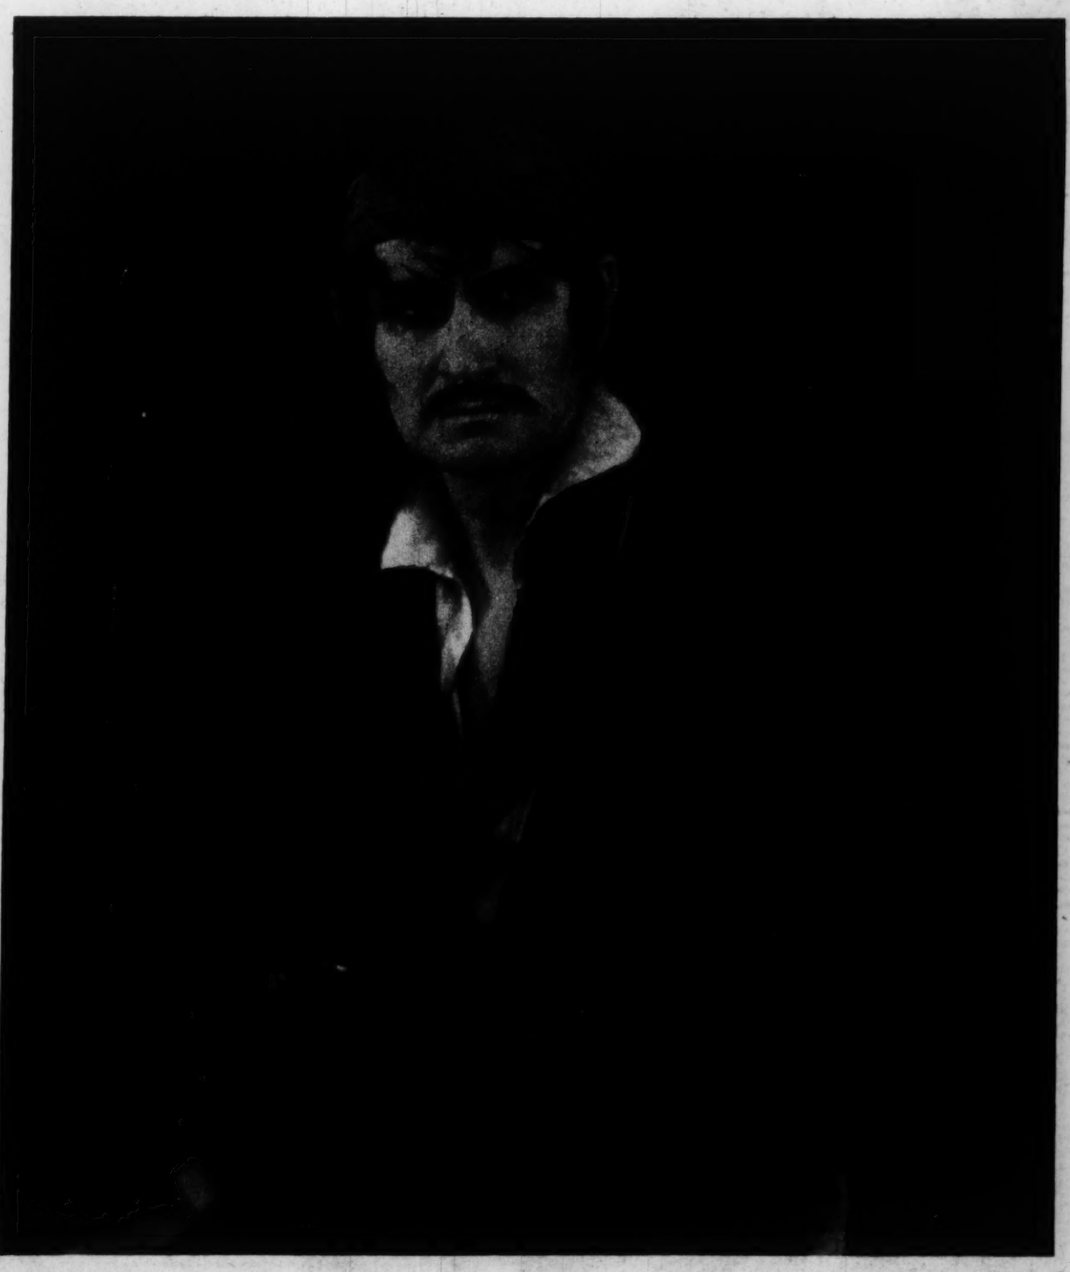


DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS will look like this in "The Black Pirate," which is almost ready for release. Godfrey Lundberg, our color photographer, had an idea that you'd like a page of "Black Pirate" principals in costume, and so he "took" the four before you for you. He says—"Y'wekkum!"

BILLIE DOVE, leading lady of "The Black Pirate," says she loves the costume she's wearing here. Well, we love it, too, and we love her hair and we love her earrings, and we love her nose and her eyes and her mouth and her necklaces, and, on the whole, we are quite, QUITE for the entire picture.



DONALD CRISP is the doughty soul ye see before ye! In what bloody battle do you suppose he lost that arm? A hard customer in his youth, we suspect, this character who will engage your attention in "The Black Pirate."



SAM DE GRASSE, featured in "The Black Pirate," is one of those actors who doesn't seem to know how to play any part otherwise than well. Sometimes his roles aren't all they should be, but Mr. De Grasse in them, usually IS. Nobody you'd care to meet on a dark and stormy night at sea, is he, as pictured here?

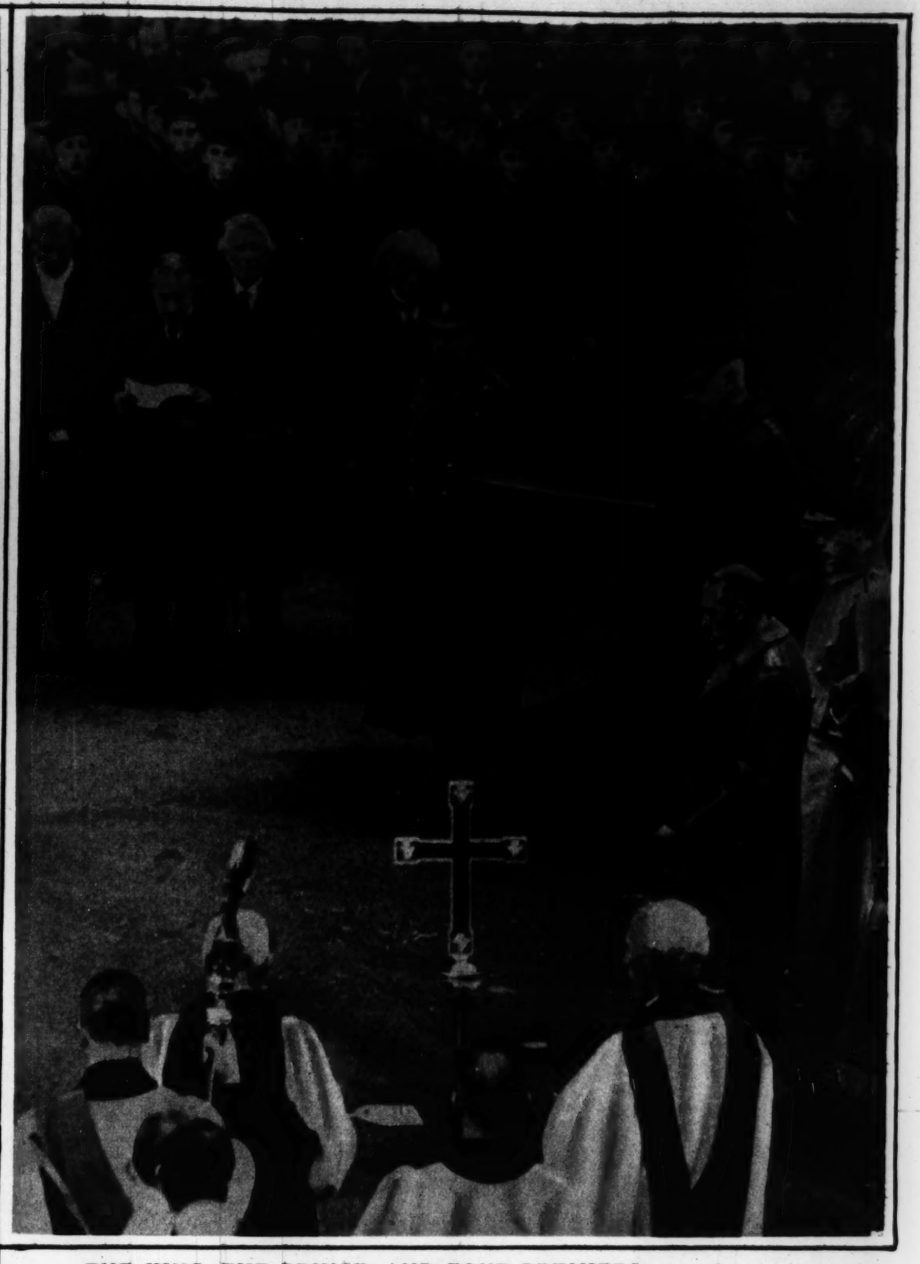
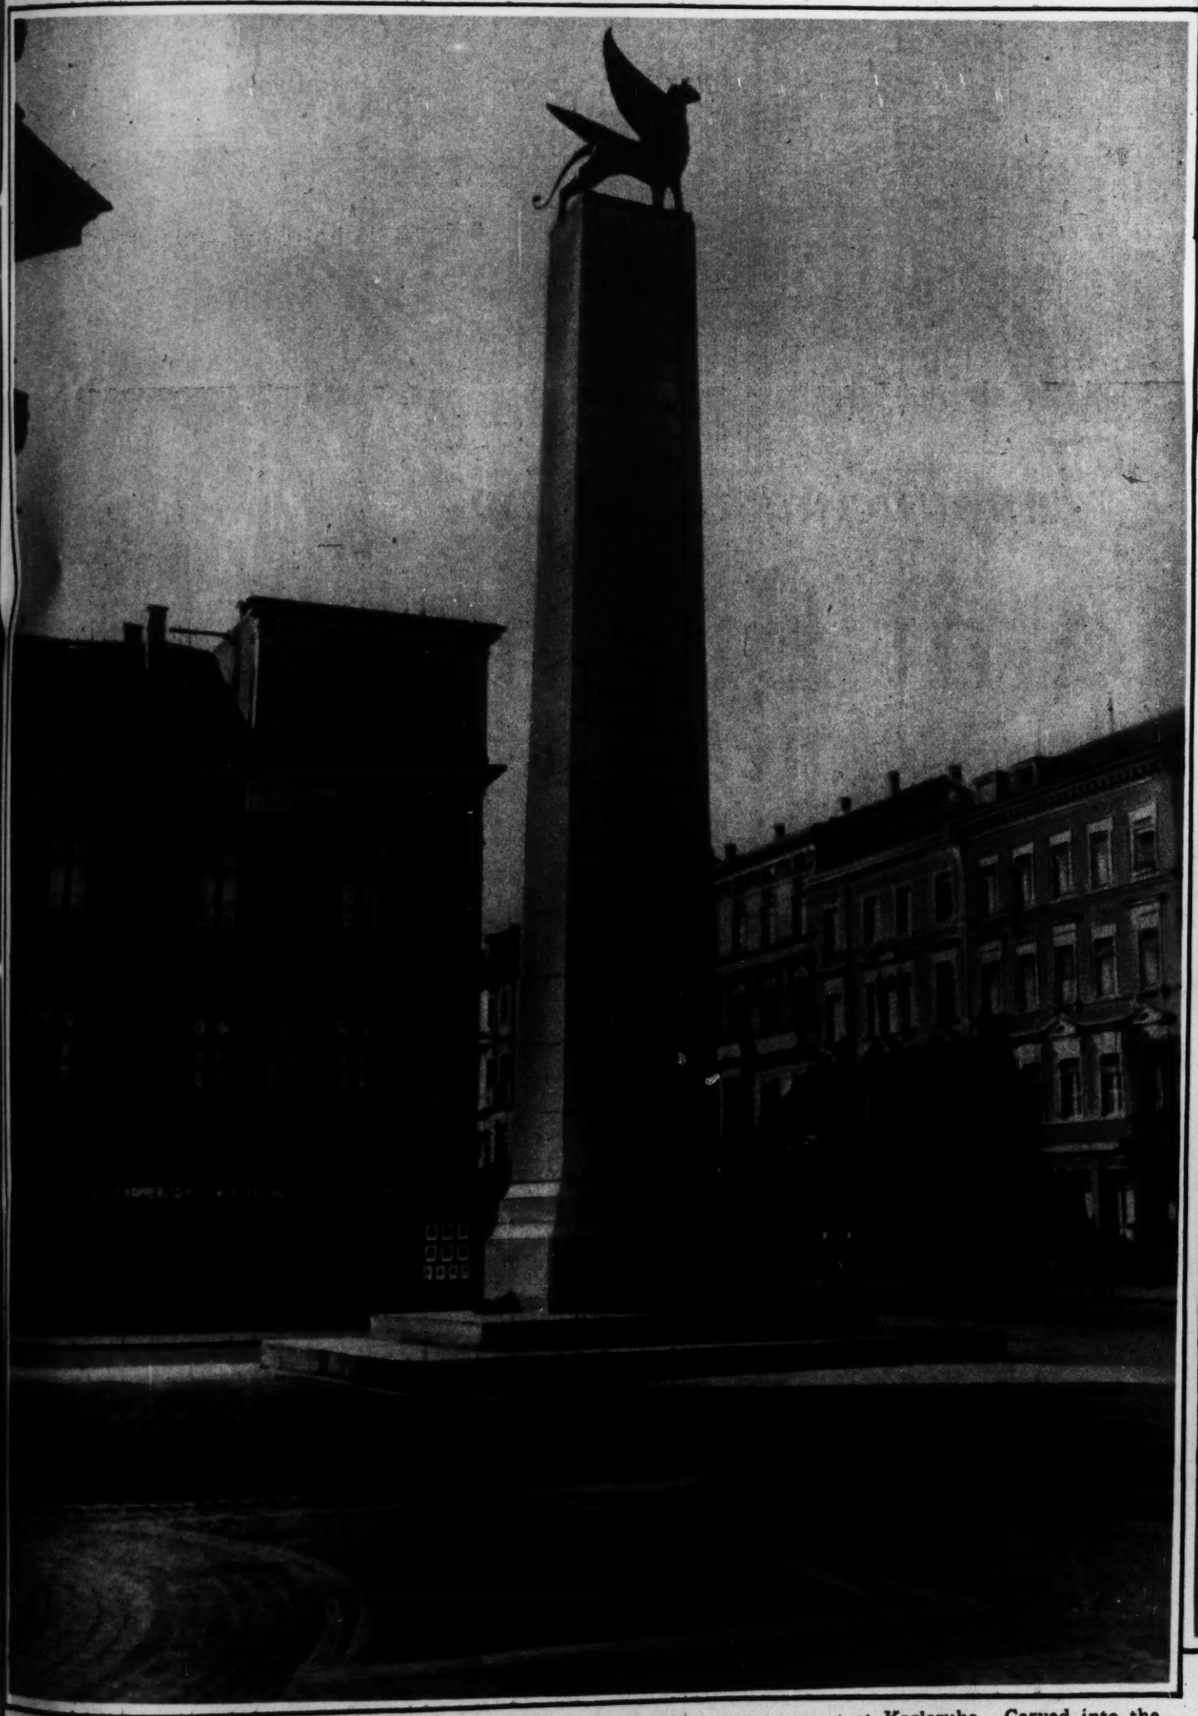
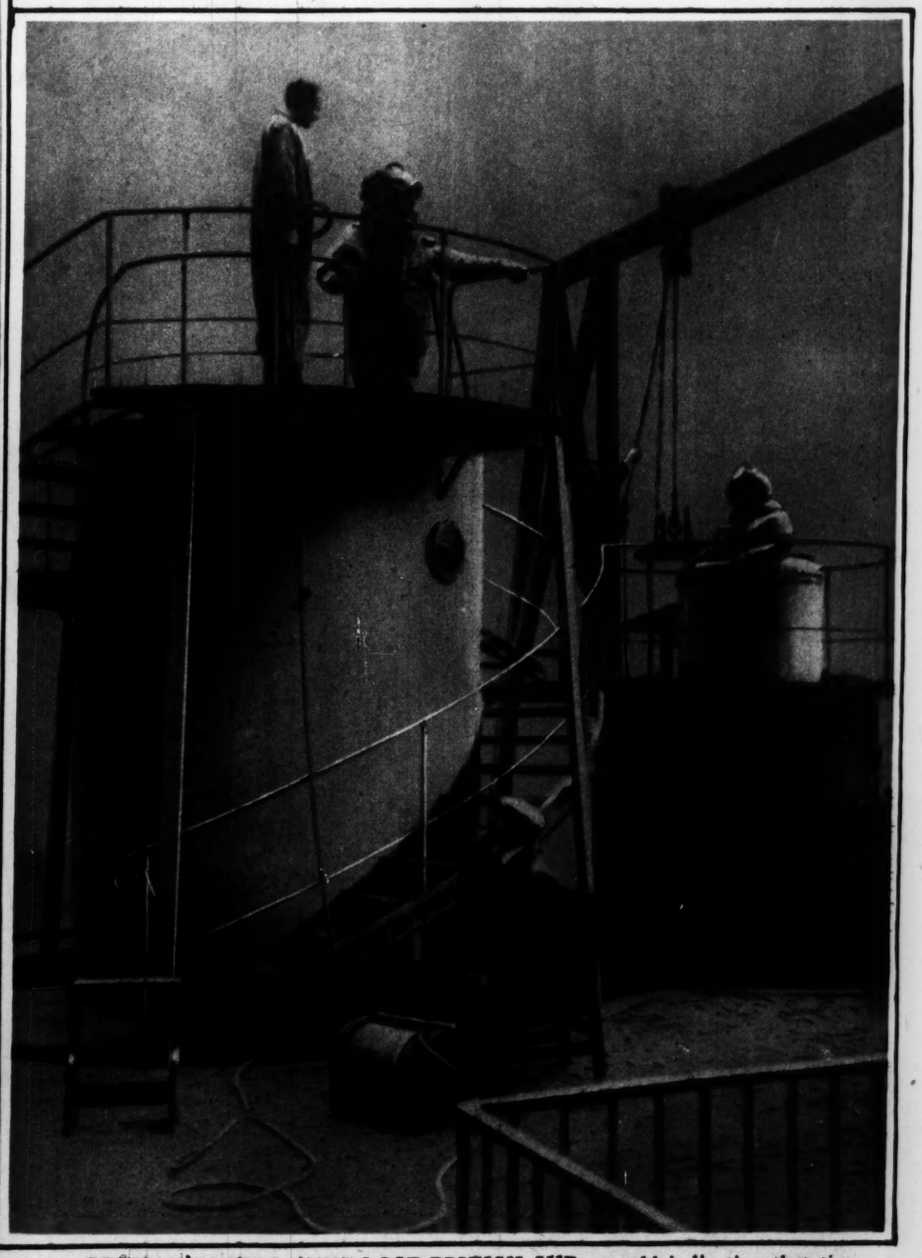
TWO MARSHALS OF FRANCE enjoy a quiet chat as Paris celebrates Armistice day at the Arc de Triomphe. Bitter memories of heart-breaking reverses in the world war, and happier reminiscences of glorious triumphs must have been recalled as Marshal Joffre and Marshal Foch watched the solemn ceremonies. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



THE KING, THE PRINCE, AND FOUR PREMIERS pay solemn tribute to Great Britain's war dead on the seventh anniversary of the armistice. The ceremony took place at the London cenotaph. King George is in the foreground at the right, with head bared. Beside him is the Prince of Wales. Premier Stanley Baldwin is reading his memorial to Britain's heroes. Behind Mr. Baldwin are three former premiers of the empire, Ramsay MacDonald, Lord Oxford (Herbert Asquith), and David Lloyd George. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



GERMANY PROUDLY LISTS ITS BATTLES on this world war monument at Karlsruhe. Carved into the towering sides of the memorial are the names of many places where major engagements of the war were fought. Reims, Champagne, Verdun, Cambrai, Marne—through a long list the roll call goes, in honor of the German soldiers who died for their country. The monument stands in the town square of Karlsruhe, across from the postoffice. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



GERMAN DIVERS HUNT LOST BRITISH SUB, an odd indication that time does heal the wounds of war. The British diver M-1 went down in 228 feet of water off Start point on the Devonshire coast. The depth was too great for the usual diving apparatus. The Germans volunteered to go down after the submarine in new all-metal diving suits which are supposed to withstand the pressure 450 feet below the surface. This was the first test of the invention, which is shown here with a diver just about to descend. (Photograph from Fotograms.)

TABLE TALK

By W. E. HILL

The dinner guest who dearly loves all the grewsome details that might well be left at home. "At least a dozen HUGE gall stones, my dear," she is broadcasting, "each as big as a medium sized cobble stone!"

The conversation of the people who are dining out is sadly hampered by the nearby tables. Four out of every five couples are busy listening in.

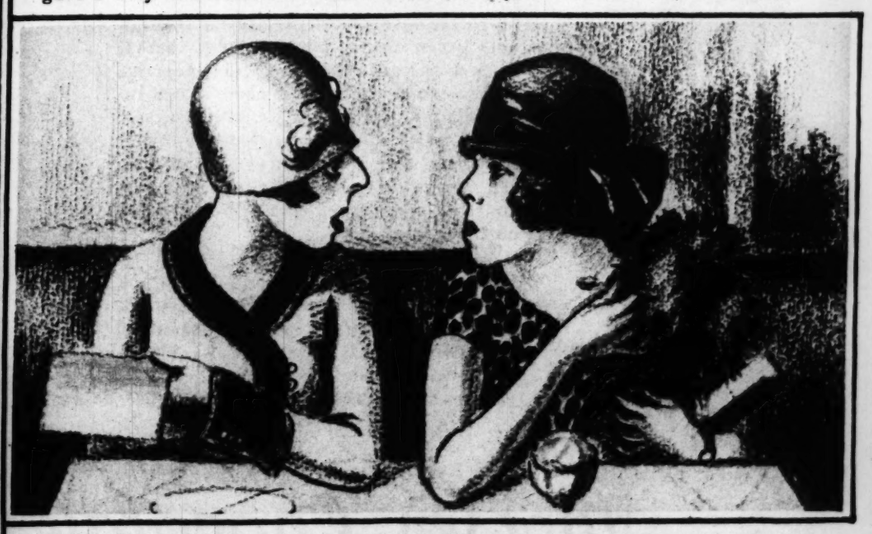
The timid dinner table talker who confines herself to such efforts as "O, isn't it," "Not REALLY?" and "O, how VERY interesting!"

The dentist's lovely wife is unused to cocktails, and her merry words are coming thick and haltingly across the dinner table. She's very happy, however.

The good listener who is listening with hardy fortitude to the plot of a movie, which a table talker is telling not at all glibly.

Two jolly realtors at a business men's lunch. They are talking over the Florida prospects. It seems that the one in specs knew a guy who had a friend who went down there with only $5 in his jeans, and came back with fifty thousand or so.

The lady with the swell brain who will insist on knowing what the man next thinks about Mr. Einstein's theory. The solid business man on the lady's left gave a very bad account of his reactions, if any, to the works of Mr. Proust.



"I know for a fact they marked up all the hats the day before the sale, and I told the floorwalker or whoever he was what I thought of it!" Miss Shultz is telling her friend, Miss Fiegan, all the low down. Miss Fiegan, who has a mouth full of strawberry sundae, is, for the moment, rendered speechless!

One of those bored little family dinners, where there is little to talk about at meal time and less urge to talk about it.

The ELIZABETH ARDEN method—which keeps your skin healthy—will keep it lovely too

NO CREAM transforms the skin. But scientific care, which encourages swift circulation through the tissues and keeps the skin cells vividly healthy, will make your skin clear, soft and firm. This is the foundation of the Elizabeth Arden method. Cleansing the skin—with Elizabeth Arden's Venetian Cleansing Cream—removes impurities which clog the pores and cause blackheads. Brisk patting—with Ardena Skin Tonic and Special Astringent—tones the skin and firms the contours. Nourishing—with Orange Skin Food or the delicate Velva Cream—fills out the skin cells and so corrects lines and wrinkles. Follow this same method in the care of your skin at home.

BABANI PERFUMES increase your charm

Elizabeth Arden recommends these smart perfumes of Paris, because they add a touch of indefinable chic to your costume. Blend Ligéia with Afghani, or Chypre with Sousouki, to make your own distinguished perfume.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

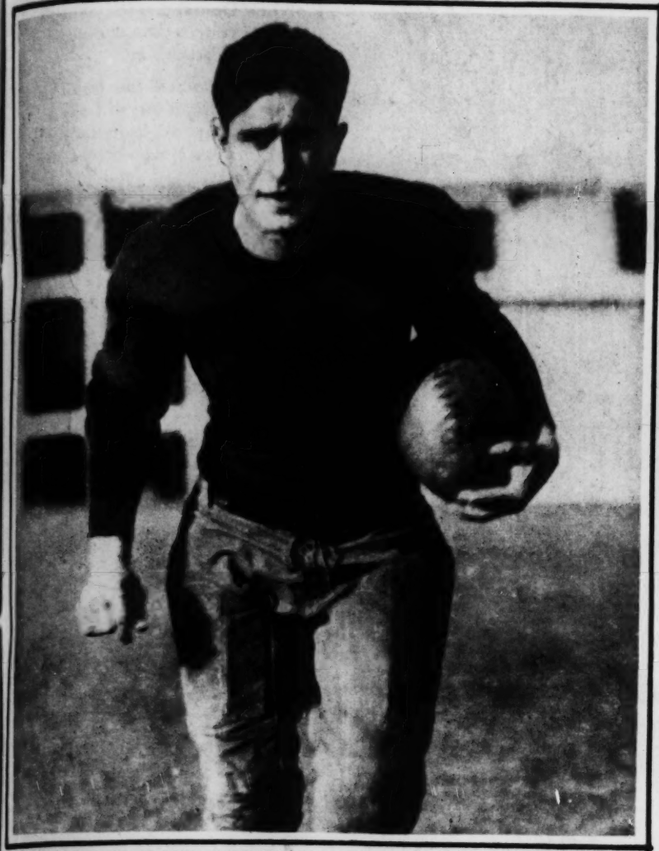
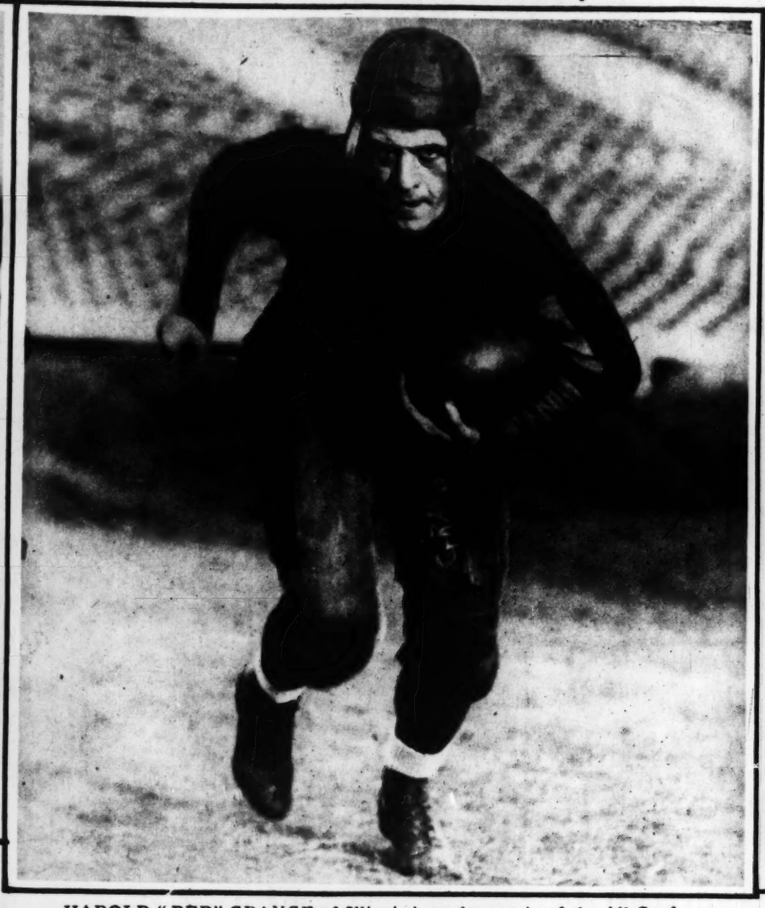
Walter Eckersall's All-Conference Eleven

THE DESCRIPTIVE MATTER with each picture is written by Mr. Eckersall. Next Sunday Mr. Eckersall will announce his All-Western eleven with a page of photographs similar to this. On Sunday, December 20, Mr. Eckersall will announce his All-American team, also with a page of photographs.
Since the death of Walter Camp, Mr. Eckersall's All-American eleven is the standard for the country.



QUARTER BACK POSITION, with the added responsibility of directing the team's attack, is given to Bennie Friedman of Michigan, who will lead the 1926 Maize and Blue eleven. With the exception of the Northwestern game, which was played under the most adverse conditions imaginable, Friedman played bang-up football. His passing was not any too certain in the Ohio game, but this was due to the clever manner in which the Buckeyes covered Michigan's eligible receivers. Bennie is a sure ball handler and the most accurate place kicker in the conference.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

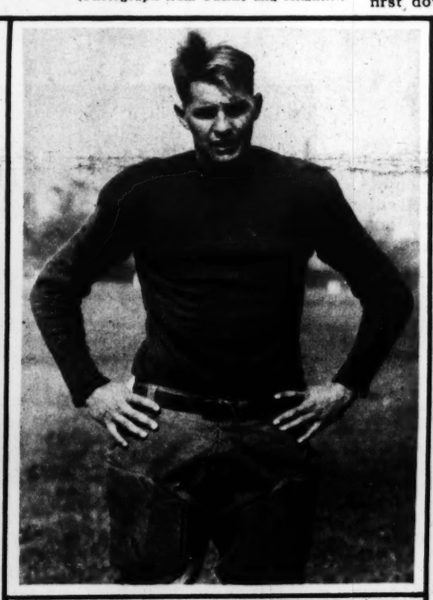


HAROLD "RED" GRANGE of Illinois is made captain of the All-Conference eleven and placed in his old position at left half back. There is no questioning this player's right to a position on any man's star eleven. He is the greatest running back in the history of football, and he has been a menace to all Illinois' opponents for the last three years.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

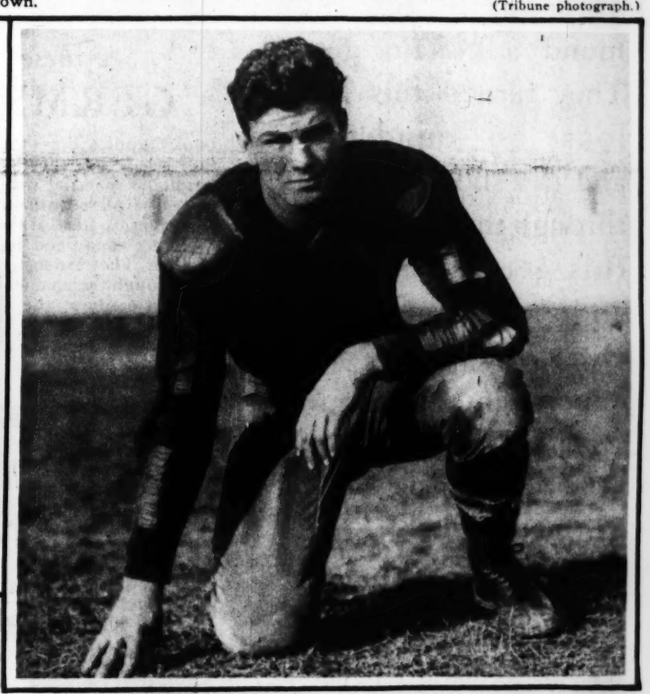
AUSTIN McCARTY of Chicago, known as "Five Yard" McCarty, is placed at full back. It is the opinion of most coaches and officials that McCarty was the hardest hitting back in the conference. He was also efficient in blocking, and showed vast improvement in slicing off his tackles and then cutting back through the defense. He would be a most valuable player to use with a yard needed for first down.
(Tribune photograph.)

TIM LOWRY of Northwestern, known as "Fighting Tim," who led the Wildcats to their most successful football season since 1900, is placed at center. Lowry's headwork played an important part in Northwestern's 3 to 2 victory over Michigan. In the Purdue game he also displayed rare football judgment by calling for a safety at a critical stage. In the Notre Dame game the Purple leader recovered a fumbled punt and crawled five yards for a touchdown. He was an aggressive player, who knew when to come out of the line and when to play his position in the line.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

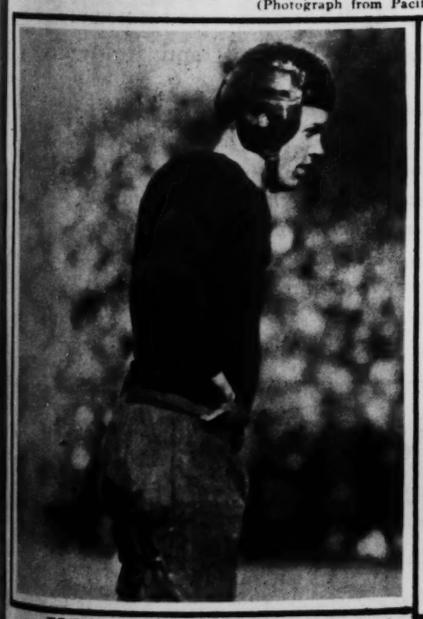
CHARLES "CHUCK" KASSEL of Illinois is chosen for right end. For the last two years Kassel has been one of the best forward pass receivers in the Big Ten. He had an uncanny knack of worming into the open to receive tosses from Earl Britton or Grange. He was strong defensively and covered punts in faultless fashion.
(Tribune photograph.)



BENNY COSTERBAAN, who gives every indication of developing into one of the best flank players in the history of Michigan football, is chosen for left end. Like Kassel, Oosterbaan pulled down forward passes with ease, and was a factor in most of Michigan's scores in practically every game. He broke up plays sent at him by smashing the interference on the outside and turning the runner to the inside. He was down under punts in faultless fashion and is an ideal man for the position.

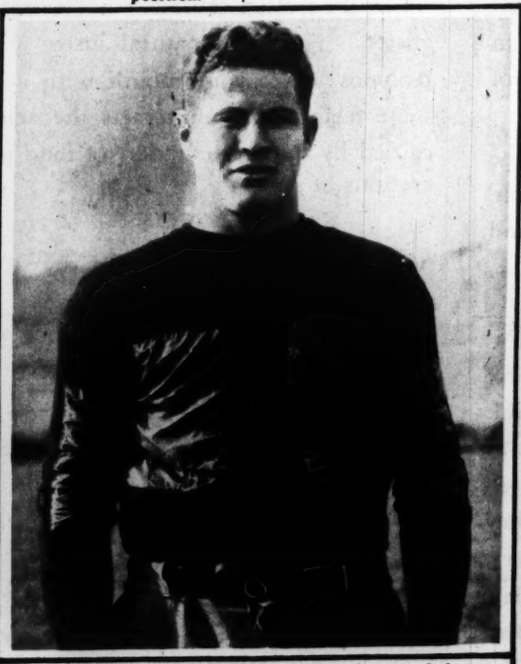


EDWIN HESS of Ohio State was the outstanding guard in the conference. He was a vicious charger and expert in helping to open holes for his backs. He varied his defensive charges in such a manner he was hard to keep out of plays. On offensive he blocked in splendid fashion and was generally in the vicinity of the ball, something which it is difficult to teach most linemen. Hess is selected for left guard.

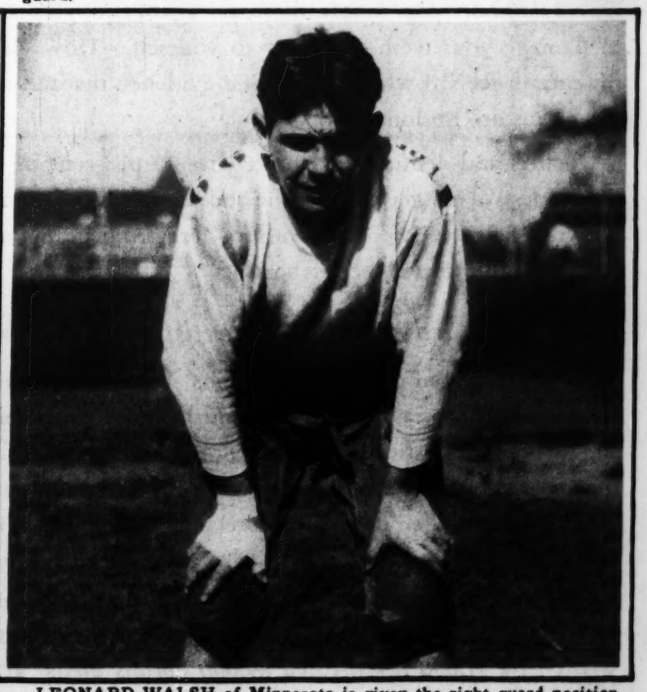


FRED HENDERSON, who captained the Chicago eleven, is placed at right tackle. Henderson was one of the best in the Maroon forward line, and he commanded the respect of Chicago's opponents. He was not easily boxed and he generally managed to break through to hurry forward passers or punters. He used his hands splendidly on defense and was generally in the thick of every line play.
(Tribune photograph.)

TOM EDWARDS, Michigan's star lineman, is given the position of left tackle. Edwards made his presence felt in every game. He charged with great power and used his hands to sift through a line or interference to get the runner. He also did well in rushing forward passers and hurrying the kickers. He was fast afoot for a lineman and did considerable tackling in the open. Like Henderson, the Wolverine was hard to box and keep out of plays.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



RIGHT HALF BACK position is awarded to Doyle Harmon of Wisconsin, who will lead next year's Badger eleven. Harmon has been a reliable performer all season. He is a triple threat player, and his punting and passing were deciding factors in Wisconsin victories over Iowa and Chicago and in its tie with Minnesota.



LEONARD WALSH of Minnesota is given the right guard position. While not as sparkling a player as Hess, the Gopher was in the thick of the fray at all times, and few gains were made over or through him. He successfully withstood the attacks of hard driving backs and would be an ideal running mate for Hess.

It is easier to Save Your Teeth than to replace them

If this advertisement interests you; if you believe what it says; if you are anxious to keep your teeth and gums sound—the first step to take is to fill in the coupon below and send for a generous sample of Kolynos Dental Cream, enough to brush your teeth 22 times, ½ inch to the brushing.

See for yourself the result of killing germs. You will say to yourself, just as thousands of others have, "How clean my mouth feels!" So send for the free sample—or, what will be quicker, buy a tube at your druggist's.

Unseen—unfelt—a tiny germ eats away tooth enamel

By Ira Davis Joel, B. S., M. S.

TRY this germ-killing dental cream at our expense. But first read why it is necessary for teeth that germs be killed.

Germs are the cause of tooth decay. Two University of Michigan scientists examined a great many decayed teeth. In nine out of ten they found a certain germ. They turned this germ loose on sound teeth and in a short time it ate through the enamel. Kill this germ, they claim, and you immediately check decay. They made experiments.

See these GERMS?

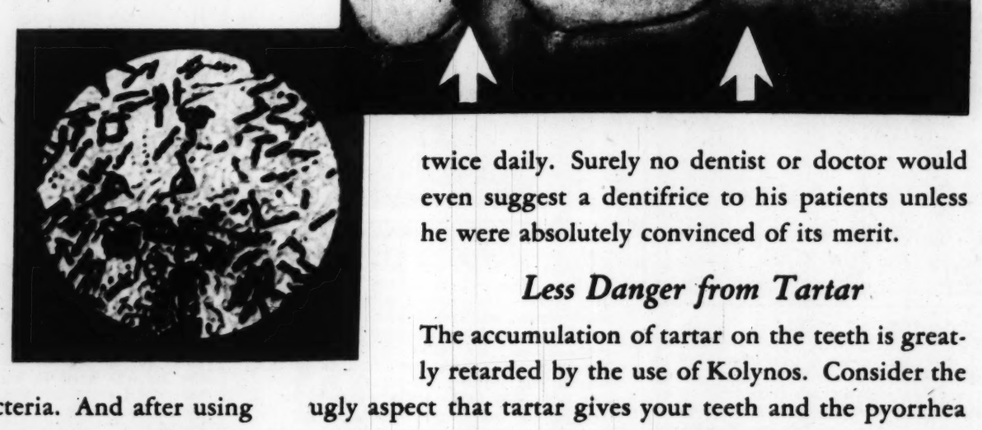
Look harmless, don't they? Yet they easily eat through hard enamel, a material that blunts the edge of tempered steel. These germs, small as they look here, are magnified hundreds of times. They are soft, yet they eat through the enamel of your teeth as easily as the dentist's powerful drill.



When teeth were treated with dentifrices that did not kill germs, the teeth decayed; but when the germs were killed, there was no decay.

Many eminent scientists attest the germicidal power of Kolynos Dental Cream. They find that it kills, in the mouth, 80 to 90 per cent of the mouth bacteria. And after using Kolynos, hours pass before there are again enough germs to damage your teeth. You say to yourself, "How clean my mouth feels!" which is the best evidence that most of the germs are no longer there.

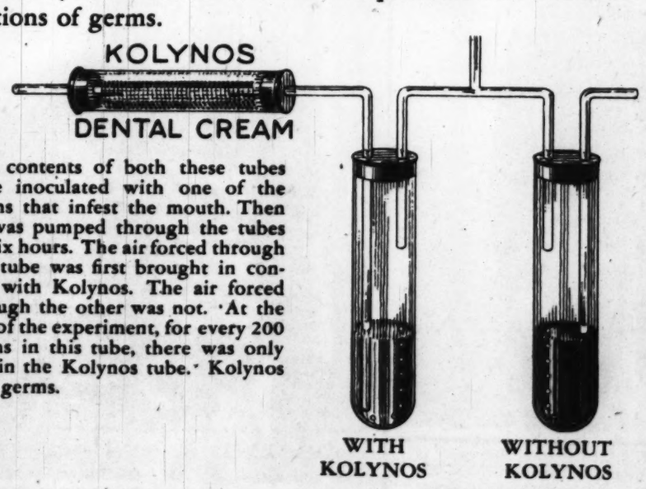
Doctors and dentists say that 85 to 90 per cent of the health-destroying germs enter the body through the mouth. Kolynos helps to keep your mouth free from germs and automatically insures better health.

Recommended by 140,000 dentists and doctors

You have read our claims for Kolynos. Perhaps you think we are too enthusiastic. But do dentists and doctors think so? These professional men do not take our assertions for granted. They make tests; they investigate; they watch what happens when teeth are protected by Kolynos. They tell us that Kolynos is the dentifrice they use themselves. Yet even more significant than this are the testimonials in our files at New Haven. There we have cards or letters written by 51,000 dentists and 89,000 doctors asking us for samples of Kolynos to distribute to their patients. They recommend Kolynos. They advise their patients to use it twice daily. Surely no dentist or doctor would even suggest a dentifrice to his patients unless he were absolutely convinced of its merit.

Less Danger from Tartar

The accumulation of tartar on the teeth is greatly retarded by the use of Kolynos. Consider the ugly aspect that tartar gives your teeth and the pyorrhea which it so often causes. Your teeth stay beautiful. They glisten. Their full natural lustre shows in your smile. Kolynos leaves your mouth with a clean, fresh, wholesome feeling. It counteracts the acidity in your mouth caused by the fermentation of food particles and the excretions of germs.



The contents of both these tubes were inoculated with one of the germs that infest the mouth. Then air was pumped through the tubes for six hours. The air forced through one tube was first brought in contact with Kolynos. The air forced through the other was not. At the end of the experiment, for every 200 germs in this tube, there was only one in the Kolynos tube. Kolynos kills germs.

"How clean my mouth feels!" That is your first impression after using Kolynos. No wonder it feels clean. The germs, the film, and the food particles have been effectively washed away.

Snug Harbors for Decay Germs

It is much easier for your tooth brush to clean the more exposed surfaces of your teeth. It is in the crevices that the germs get in their fine work. Kolynos used in the mouth becomes a liquid which flows into the crevices and kills the germs that would otherwise start decay.

In a paper read before the Stuyvesant Medical Society, a famous dental surgeon gave this advice to those who would avoid abscesses in their teeth:

Protect the enamel and you protect the life of the nerve; a tooth with a live nerve is a healthy tooth.

Kolynos is a most economical dentifrice. A little goes a long way. A full tube is enough to brush your teeth about a hundred times. A quarter to a half inch on the brush is sufficient to clean the teeth thoroughly. The small quantity of Kolynos used at each brushing has another advantage. It doesn't easily roll off the brush.

Kolynos manufacturing laboratories are located at New Haven, U. S. A.; at London, England; and at Montreal, Canada.

Try Kolynos in liquid form as a spray and gargle. Not only your teeth, but your mouth and throat as well, need the protection of an antiseptic. They, too, are constantly menaced by harmful germs. Kolynos Liquid immediately kills these germs.

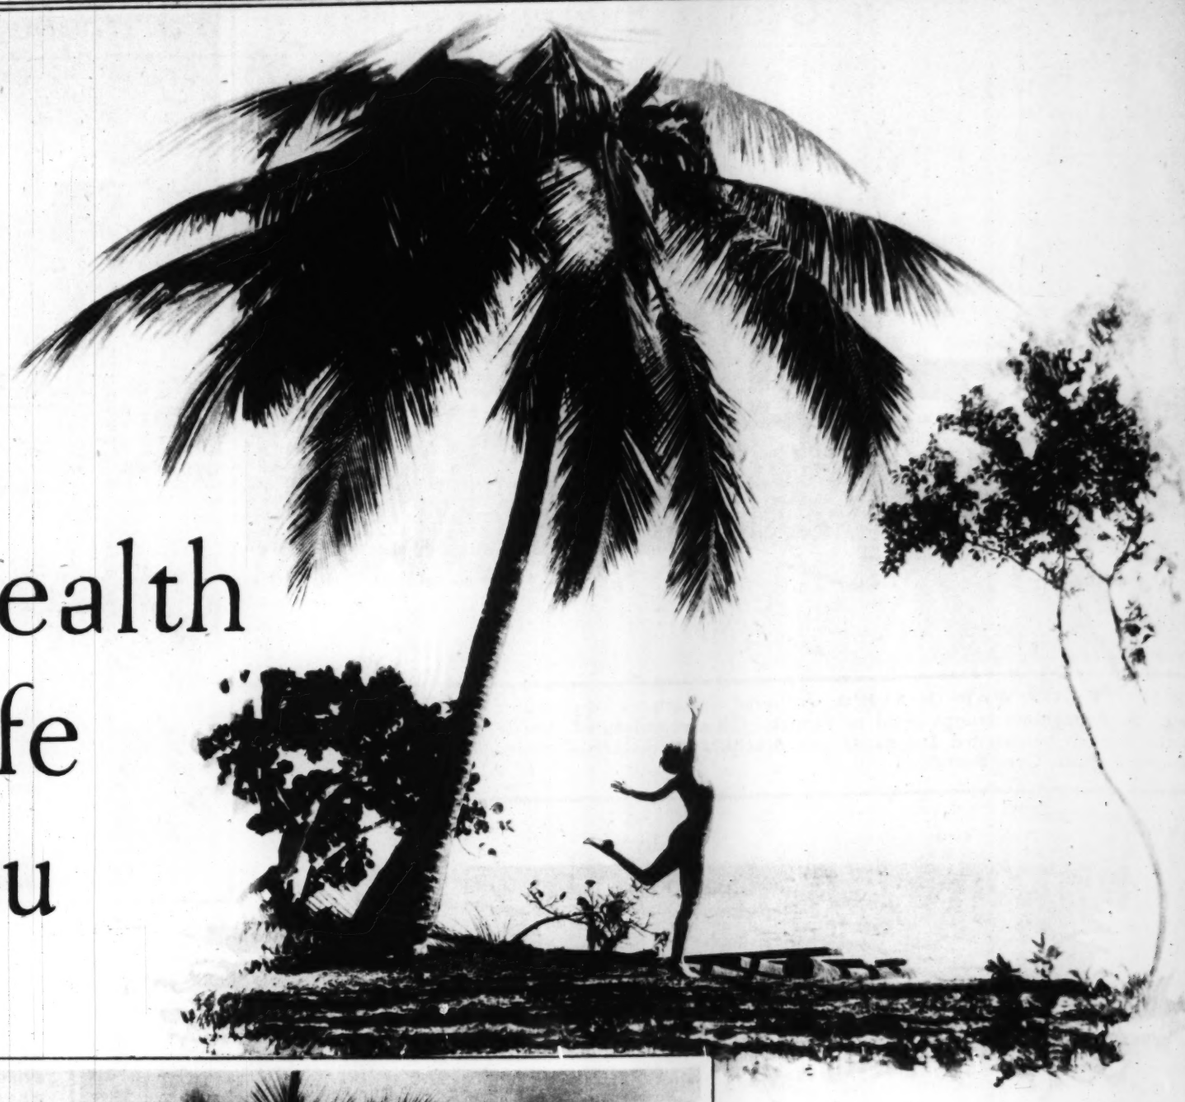
Florida! where health, wealth and longer life await you



Bronzed, erect old men. Women delighting in new cream-and-rose complexions. Round and brown children. Handsome full-figured youngsters. These are evidences of the extraordinary vitality and superb health that come from living under the tropical skies of Coral Gables.

The Only American Tropics Will Add Years to Your Life

Coral Gables, Miami's most beautiful suburban city, is planned to give space and air, sun and breeze to every inhabitant. The magnificently wide avenues and plazas open the city to the cool, spicy trade-winds. The tropical planting and the forests temper, but never obstruct, the life-giving sun. The white sand beaches offer miles of sea-bathing that is as safe and pleasant as anywhere in the world. All that you seek in recreation is at your door. The peace and quiet, the freedom from noise and crowds, take away the lines from strained faces. Troubles have a way of disappearing at Coral Gables. Life becomes pleasantly active, colorful and healthful.

Solid, Actual Facts Secure Your Investment

Every building in Coral Gables must conform to the plan that governs the city. All buildings are permanently constructed of coral rock, tile or concrete. There are no wooden buildings. Only the Spanish type of architecture or its Mediterranean variants, so perfectly suited to a tropical landscape and climate, is permissible. No one is allowed to injure property values by the construction of unsuitable homes or business buildings.

Property Values are Rising. Investments are Paying Remarkable Dividends

Under such a plan property values tend to increase steadily and surely. Home-builders are even now watching their property rise in value month by month. Colleges, private schools, sanitariums and other institutions have been drawn by the security of this plan to Coral Gables. Every buyer of property in Coral Gables literally cannot help sharing in the profits that attend every step in the development of the city plan, and in the prosperity that is so rapidly transforming Miami and its environs.

Remarkable Opportunity for Investment

The 1920 census showed a growth in Miami's population of 440 per cent in ten years. Since then it has increased even more rapidly. Bank clearances today are ten times those of a year ago. Every activity feels the stimulus of this tremendous growth, and especially is it manifested in the increase of property values in the city and suburbs. In Coral Gables the value of plots has increased on an average of 100 per cent a year for the past three years.

Yet building plots in Coral Gables may now be secured by a moderate initial payment. These plots are offered in a wide range of prices, which include all improvements such as streets, street lighting, electricity and water. Twenty-five per cent is required in cash, the balance will be distributed in convenient payments over a period of three years.

The Facts About Coral Gables

Coral Gables is a city, adjoining the city of Miami itself. It is incorporated, with a commission form of government. It is highly restricted. It occupies about 10,000 acres of high, well-drained land. It is four years old. It has 100 miles of wide paved streets and boulevards. It has seven hotels completed or under construction. It has 45 miles of white-way lighting and 50 miles of intersectional street lighting. It has 6½ miles of beach frontage. Two golf courses are now completed, two more are building. Two country clubs, a military academy, public schools, and the College for Young Women of the Sisters of Saint Joseph are now in actual use. More than one thousand homes have already been erected, another thousand now under construction. A new theatre is almost finished. Thirty million dollars have been expended in development work. Additional plans call for at least twice that amount. Seventy-five million dollars worth of property has already been bought in Coral Gables.

Mr. John McEntee Bowman is now building the ten-million-dollar hotel, country club and bathing casino in Coral Gables to be known as the Miami-Biltmore Group. The Miami-Biltmore Hotel will open in January, 1926. Coral Gables will also contain these buildings and improvements, all of which will be completed within a few years:

The $15,000,000 University of Miami, the $500,000 Mahi Temple of the Mystic Shrine, a $1,000,000 University High School, a $150,000 Railway Station, a Stadium, a Conservatory of Music, magnificent new entrances and plazas, and other remarkable projects.

Gloria Swanson's Winter Wardrobe

THE UNIFORM OF THE PAPAL GUARD inspired the cut of the sleeves in this black velvet afternoon dress. They are embroidered in gunmetal thread and silver pearls, which also adorn the narrow belt. Scarf, tie, and cuffs are of gunmetal cloth. The front flounce creates an interesting ripple and the slight blouse effect over the belt indicates a new fashion note.

THIS SNUG LITTLE HAT, gleaming with silver and gold embroidery, tops off an evening gown of black velvet. The rather stiff looking necklace is said to be a bit of Bulgarian peasant jewelry.

ERMINE, RICH AND WARM, forms the body of this wrap, and Russian embroidered silk, also rich but not so warm, covers the lady's arms. Note the peasant bracelets, which match the necklace shown in the picture next door.

SUITABLE FOR TEA and other recreations of a winter afternoon is this lovely frock of gray velvet, with cuffs of embroidered bottle green velvet and collar and trimming to match. The velvet hat of the same verdant shade boasts an antique buckle of gold set with a great sapphire.

QUITE IN THE MOOD FOR SPORTS is this jaunty suit of chamois trimmed with dyed ermine which Miss Swanson will wear in her new picture, "Untamed." The small muff is suspended on a gayly tasseled cord of American Beauty color.

GORGEOUS AND JUST A LITTLE DARING is this cleverly cut black velvet evening gown. The embroidery adapts itself strikingly to the long side drapery which narrowly escapes being a train. Yes, the bright bit of headgear is the one pictured above.

SUCH A TRIM LITTLE, SLIM LITTLE CAPE, with its fitted shoulders and quaint bow under the chin! It's fashioned of rare lamb and is worn over the dress pictured in the upper left hand corner. The hat is of black velvet with an applique trimming of felt and a silver ornament of cubist design at the side.

THE DESIGN OF THIS DRESS was stolen from the uniform of the Greek soldier. The lustreless side of black crepe is used for the dress, while the three panels are really extensions from the skirt which double up to the girdle, showing the glossy satin finish of the material. Collar and cuffs are of chamois, also the string tie, which may seem unnecessary, but they say it's also taken from the Greeks.

THE SECRET of Gloria Swanson's gorgeous apparel is out at last. The Marquise of the Movies has her own French designer, Renee Hubert. M. Renee's sole business in life is to fashion marvelous gowns and wraps and incidentals which are altogether different from those of any other woman in the world. On this page are eight poses of Miss Gloria, each one picturing an important item of her winter wardrobe.

Lingette

Lingette is as soft as silk, but it's made all of cotton, so as to yield remarkable wear. Lingette can be tubbed numberless times and still retain its exquisite lustre.

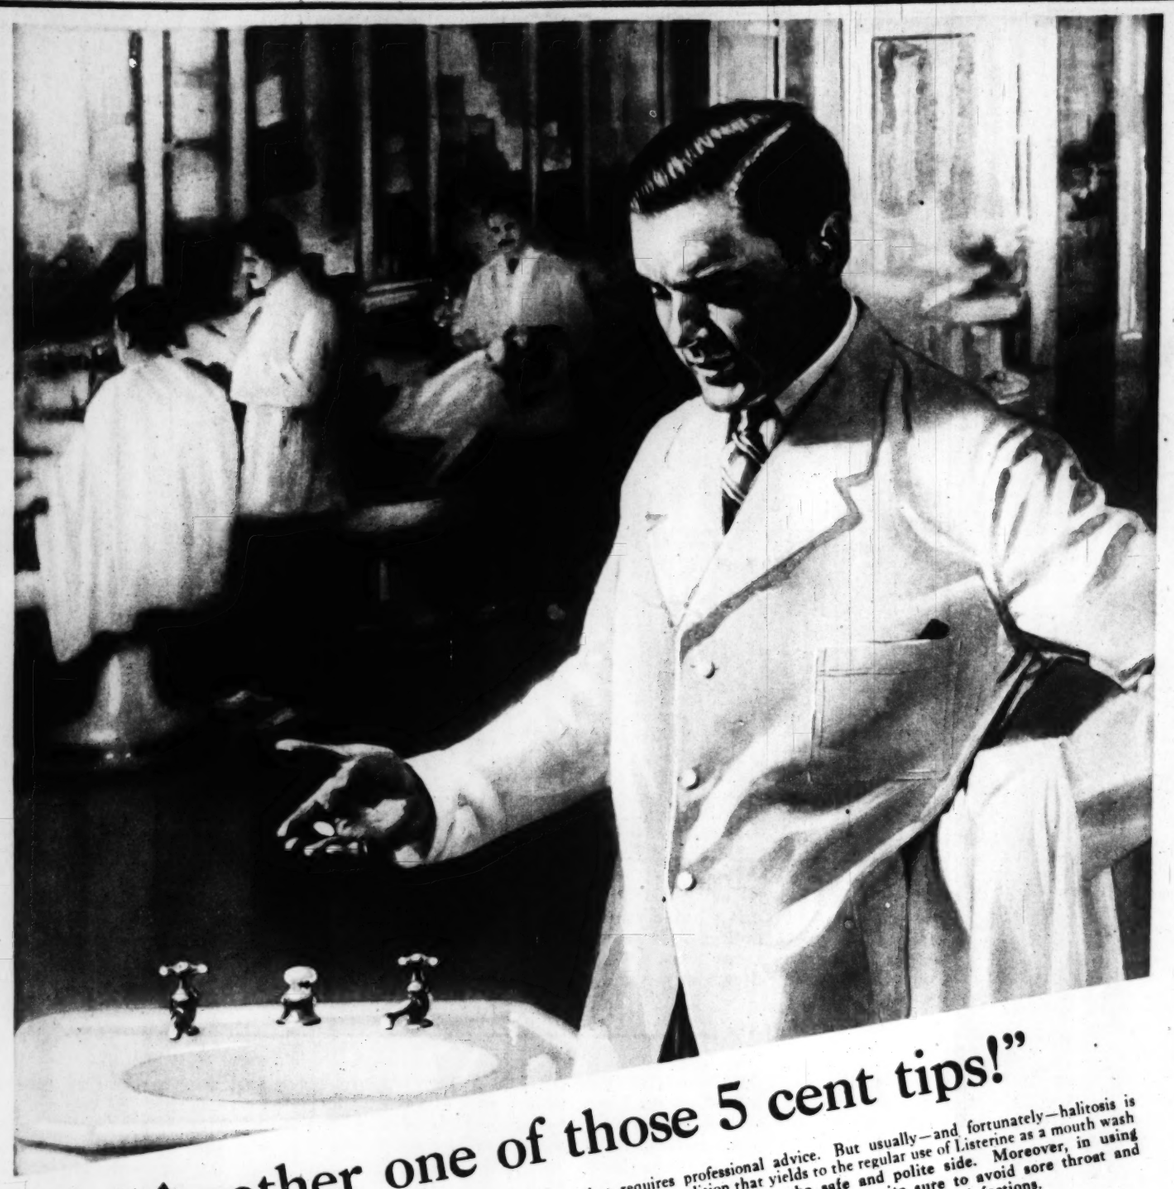
EGYPT'S NEW HIGH COMMISSIONER, Sir George Lloyd, arrives at Cairo with Lady Lloyd. Sir George is a noted student of eastern policies, and all his diplomatic wiles will be needed in his new post, for Egypt is seething with unrest, as is the rest of the east. Sir George was governor of Bombay from 1918 to 1923 and he served in Egypt during the war. Lady Lloyd is a cousin of Viscount Lascelles, the husband of Princess Mary. (Photograph from Keystone View.)

THE GOLDEN EAGLE FEEDS ITS YOUNG in its great nest atop a towering tree on a Scotch mountain. Seldom does the camera record a nature study as rare as this one you see at the left. The picture service tells us its photographer waited in a cramped covering for 200 hours—more than eight days—before his patience was rewarded with this rare close-up. The golden eagle is the most common of its species in northern Europe. Its dark brown plumage is brightened only by a reddish tinge at the neck. The bird is about three feet long. Hares form its chief item of menu, but it is fearless in attack and has been known to prey on lambs or even small fawns. (Photograph from International.)

A FATAL SPILL AT THE RACETRACK depicted in two vivid flashes. Above is the start of the fall, with the first thoroughbred pitching over as he loses his balance, and the horses behind catapulting from their feet as their jockeys vainly strive to haul them up. The second picture shows the horses rolling on the turf, with the riders crashed to earth and in instant peril of death from the iron-clad hoofs that are madly beating the air. The backs of two horses were broken and they died immediately. The jockeys miraculously escaped death. The exciting spill occurred at the Randwick course in Sydney, Australia, when a crowd of 100,000 persons was watching the racing. (Both photographs from Underwood & Underwood.)

KING RAMA VI of Siam is dead. This picture shows him with his new queen whom he raised to the throne after disposing of another wife because she bore him no children A daughter was born two weeks ago, but she cannot be queen. Prince Sukoduya, the late king's brother, succeeds him. (Photograph from International.)



"Another one of those 5 cent tips!"

HE was a good-looking fellow and one of the best barbers in the shop.

He did his best to be agreeable to customers yet he noticed that patrons often avoided his chair and many, many times his tip was so small that it seemed almost beggarly.

He was at a loss to understand why.

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It puts you on the safe and polite side. Moreover, in using Listerine to combat halitosis, you are quite sure to avoid sore throat and those more serious illnesses that start with throat infections.

Listerine halts food fermentation in the mouth and leaves the breath sweet, fresh and clean. Not by substituting some other odor but by really removing the old one. The Listerine odor itself quickly disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are four sizes: 14 ounce, 7 ounce, 3 ounce and 1¼ ounce. Buy the large size for economy.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. S. A.

A CHALLENGE

We'll make a little wager with you that if you try one tube of Listerine Tooth Paste, you'll come back for more.

RED RUSSIA CELEBRATES the eighth anniversary of the revolution which established the soviet power in October, 1917. At the left Tomsky, president of the trade unions of Russia, is reading an address to the workmen. Before him is a radio microphone which carries his speech over the broad reaches of the communist empire. With Tomsky on the speakers' stand is Kalenin, president of the union of soviet republics, wearing a pointed cap. SMART, LIGHT AND AMAZINGLY WARM

Especially made not to cramp your fingers or shut off circulation as you grip the wheel

How often have your fingers ached with the cold? In spite of heaviest gloves.

This is not due to faulty blood circulation. It's due to the gloves. Driving gloves do not have to be bulky to be warm. If they are made right.

The Aristocrat shown above is made from genuine imported cape, as smart as any street glove. And warm in any weather. Hansen solved this years ago.

First, the finger seams are sewed a special way. [As you can see in the illustration.]

$6.00

The Aristocrat for Men
The Lady Aristocrat for Women
(Other styles from $5.00 to $8.00)

This prevents cramping as you grip the wheel. And the fingers and the spaces between the fingers are made a fraction larger to give you easy circulation.

The Aristocrat shown above is completely lined with pure imported lambs wool. The warmest and lightest lining. [Warmer than any fur.]

You'll like this glove yourself. And for Christmas, here's a practical gift that will win warm gratitude during all the coming days of cold weather. The Aristocrat for men—the Lady Aristocrat for women.

DO YOUR XMAS SHOPPING EARLY

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY

DO YOUR XMAS SHOPPING EARLY

DO YOUR XMAS SHOPPING EARLY

I'M GLAD I GOT THIS BOOK THAT TELLS YOU HOW TO BUILD YOUR OWN RADIO SET - IT SAYS ANY BOY THAT'S HANDY WITH TOOLS CAN BUILD ONE - MOTHER SAYS I'M A BORN MECHANIC -

WON'T THE KIDS ALL ENVY ME WHEN THEY HEAR STATION G-U-M-P BROADCASTING?

I'LL BUILD THE FINEST SET IN THE WHOLE WORLD - I'LL BET UNCLE BIM AND OLD CHING CHOW WILL OPEN THEIR EYES WHEN THEY HEAR ME AWAY OVER IN AUSTRALIA -

I ONLY WISH I'D HAD THIS RADIO BOOK WHEN I WAS LOST ON THE ISLAND WITH CHING CHOW - WE COULD HAVE BUILT A RADIO AND TOLD WHERE WE WERE AND FOOLED ALL THOSE BLOOD-THIRSTY CANNIBALS -

IT'S NOT AS EASY AS IT SEEMED TO BE WHEN I READ THE DIRECTIONS BUT I'LL MAKE IT, THAT'S ALL - IF ANY OTHER KID CAN MAKE IT SO CAN I -

THERE'S SO MANY WIRES AND THING-A-MAJIGS TO FIX THAT, IT SEEMS I'LL NEVER GET IT RIGHT BUT I WON'T QUIT UNTIL IT'S FINISHED - MY PAPA SAYS ANYTHING THAT'S WORTH HAVING IS WORTH WORKING FOR -

AS SOON AS I OPEN STATION G-U-M-P - I'LL HAVE A DANDY PROGRAM - MOTHER TELLS THE BEST BED-TIME STORIES ANY KID EVER HEARD AND MY PAPA KNOWS LOTS AND LOTS OF FUNNY STORIES AND OUR MAID KNOWS SOME FUNNY SONGS AND MAYBE SOME NIGHT MY SCHOOL TEACHER WILL RECITE POEMS -

WELL, WELL, LOOK AT THE LITTLE CARPENTER - WHAT ARE YOU TRYING TO MAKE, A PHONOGRAPH?

I SHOULD SAY NOT - THIS IS A RADIO -

THAT'S THE ODDEST LOOKING RECEIVING SET I EVER SAW -

THIS IS NOT A RECEIVING SET - THIS IS A SMALL BROADCASTING SET - I'M GOING TO BE THE ANNOUNCER -

WHAT IN THE WORLD DO YOU WANT WITH A BROAD-CASTING STATION? WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO WITH IT AFTER YOU GET IT WORKING? WHAT VITAL MESSAGE HAVE YOU THAT THE WORLD WANTS TO LISTEN TO?

I'LL TELL YOU WHAT I'M GOING TO DO -

EVERY YEAR I WRITE SANTA CLAUS AND TELL HIM WHAT I WANT FOR CHRISTMAS BUT I NEVER GET HALF THE THINGS I HAD ON MY LIST - THAT SHOWS HE DON'T GET MY LETTERS - THIS YEAR I'M GOING TO TALK TO SANTA CLAUS OVER THE RADIO - I'LL TELL HIM JUST WHAT I WANT AND ON CHRISTMAS MORNING I'LL WAKE UP AND FIND ALL THE NICE THINGS I WANTED PILED RIGHT UP IN FRONT OF THE FIRE - PLACE -

THERE'S A BOY TO BE PROUD OF - AND LOOK AT THAT LIST OF PRESENTS HE WANTS - SANTA CLAUS WILL HAVE TO HITCH A TRAILER ON HIS SLEIGH TO FILL THAT ORDER - WELL, THE KID DESERVES A LOT FOR HAVING THE BRAINS TO FIGURE OUT A NEW WAY OF COMMUNICATION WITH ST. NICHOLAS - IF SANTA CLAUS HASN'T ANYTHING THAT KID WANTS I'LL NEVER SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN -
